Granite Cutters Demand $3 A Day

The Granite Cutters' Association rejected the salary schedule submitted by the manufacturers and demanded a $3. per day minimum.

In response the manufacturers said that $2.52 per day for eight hours work was their ultimatum. The manufacturers said they would continue to keep their yards closed and that if their new salary offer was rejected a second time, they would seek new workers.

The granite workers have been on strike for three weeks.

CITY COUNCIL ACTION

The City Council ordered a hearing for plans to widen Copeland St. from Crescent to the West Quincy Depot.

The Council also approved the installation of a fire alarm box at the corner of Dimmock St. and Whalley Rd.

EXPRESSMAN ARRESTED FOR VIOLATING "FAXON LAW"

A Quincy expressman was arrested by the city liquor officer and charged with illegal sale of liquor.

The arrest was made under the "Faxon Law". The law provided that "... whoever delivered liquor to any other person than the one to whom they are addressed or at any other place than that directed shall be guilty of an illegal sale."

CONGRESSMAN NAPHEN SEEKS GOVERNMENT BUILDING FOR QUINCY

Congressman Napphen introduced a bill to consolidate the Quincy and Wollaston post offices in an effort to secure the construction of a government building in the city. The $13,000 receipts from Wollaston would be added to the Quincy office.

Under his plan, Wollaston would become a free delivery station. Deliveries for Wollaston and Norfolk Downs would remain as usual, however, with nine, each way daily and one on Sunday.

NEW WOLLASTON FIRE STATION CONSIDERED

The City Council's committees on finance and public buildings and the fire department met this week to consider Chief Williams' proposal for a new Wollaston fire station.

The chief noted the "blunders" made in construction of the Central Station and the poor materials used, but said that the specifications for Wollaston called for first class materials.

The chief called for immediate approval of the plans because the present station was "dilapidated and unfit for occupancy."

FIRE DEPARTMENT POLITICS

The City Council this week attempted to take "politics" out of the fire department by placing the city's 10 permanent firemen under civil service.

The council action, however, came under much criticism because the chief and the 51 "call" men were exempt from the order.

Republicans were critical of the action and charged that the Democrats would control the appointment of call men. They noted that all the call men in Atlantic and West Quincy were "aggressive Democrats" and not as good as some Republican ex-members who sought re-appointment.

details will be added to the Wollaston area in an effort to stop the disturbances there. He said:

"Parents of these kids should be on notice that we are going to do something about the situation in Wollaston."

Hannon added that the city would beef-up surveillance and patrol even more if necessary. He said:

"With the warm weather coming, these gangs will be hanging around more and more. People say there is no place for them to go, but that doesn't give them the right to break windows and destroy property."

"When there is a fire, kids die of smoke inhalation, not from flames. How do you get kids out of the third floor of that building with the wooden floors burning?"

Hannon repeatedly emphasized that he was not trying to frighten the residents of Quincy but was meeting an obligation to protect the children of the city. He said:

"If a new North Quincy High School is not going to be built, it is our obligation to tell the City Council we have to spend money on Central. I don't like to have to spend it on such an old building, but we must protect those kids."

The assessment of Central is still underway and cost estimates are yet unavailable. Asked about a speculated $1 million renovation cost, Creedon said he could not judge whether that figure was "too high or too low."

Noting the survey will "assess the future longevity of the present building," Creedon said: "We want to make sure that we have all the necessary information to bring to bear on the immediate and future school needs in Quincy."

Although Hannon singled out North Quincy High and Central Junior High as the city's current educational priorities, he acknowledged in particular the space problem at the Merrymount School.

In mid-December, Hannon had criticized "the selfish attitude" of Merrymount citizens who were seeking consideration of their school needs apart from the problem at North Quincy High School. Regretting the episode, Hannon told The Quincy Sun:

"I apologize to the citizens of Merrymount. I made that comment in the heat of anger after I had seen the preliminary report on the conditions at Central, on the changing of the building code and renovations which could cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. It was a very inappropriate remark to make about the people of Merrymount. I shouldn't have said it, but in the light of the circumstances, I did... The Merrymount School needs additional space but the building is not a fire trap. We need to have priorities."

Calling education "a vital part of our community," Hannon said the city is failing to plan for its future school needs.

"We are not looking down the road at all. We do things on a crisis basis. We are not saving money now. I don't fault the City Council for their decision not to build a new North Quincy High, but I don't agree with it. The City Council must face up to the fact there is a problem at Central. They want the problem to go away but it won't."

Hannon said the estimated cost to replace the present roof at Central ranges from $75,000 to $100,000. He said he could not estimate the extent of renovations at Central until the assessment had been fully completed.

"Maybe we'll just replace the roof. I don't know. I really can't say."

Home Rehabilitation, PW Improvements For Houghs Neck

for low interest loans and grants to improve their homes.

"One of the major advantages of this new legislation is that the neighborhood can play a role in developing the program. The program will be one of public works and home improvements; however, the federal government no longer dictates the specifics of the program.

"The residents of the area and the staff of the program will have a major say in what types of improvements are made. Over the next few months, our staff will be working with the Houghs Neck community to begin a program to best serve the area."

Councillor Kelly indicated that although the entire area of Houghs Neck will be a community development area, with Harvard St. as the westerly boundary, emphasis in the first year will be placed on the area south of Sea St.

This decision was recommended by the Department of Planning and Community Development based on the size of the area and the condition of the homes and the streets.

"Under the new act, the commitment to Houghs Neck is for three years. The first year, the area south of Sea St. will receive much attention," said Kelly. "Some improvements will also be made north of Sea St. in preparation of a larger scale effort over the next two years," stated Kelly.

The city's application to the Department of Housing and Urban Development was authorized by the City Council at Monday evening's meeting. Consistent with the bill's objective of maintaining viable neighborhoods, the city's program focuses on neighborhood revitalization.

Funds have been earmarked for a comprehensive community development program in Houghs Neck, with smaller scale neighborhood improvement efforts in Atlantic and Southwest Quincy. The decision to concentrate on the three neighborhoods came as a result of housing and public works surveys as well as the strong interest expressed by residents at their community development meetings.

"Our commitment to the neighborhoods is strong," said Mayor Hannon. "We will do a good job in Houghs Neck now and we're developing programs for Atlantic and Southwest Quincy also. I believe that with the identification of additional resources we will begin a more comprehensive effort in Southwest Quincy. Also, we are committed to bringing the overall program into Atlantic as our next phase."

To complement the federal funds, Hannon asked the City Council to authorize a bond of $2 million for city-wide neighborhood park and public works improvements. The request is now being considered by the Council's Committee on Public Works.

"If this program is approved, it will be one of the most important and thorough commitments to Quincy's neighborhoods," the Mayor said.

Forget-me-not Now Quincy's Official Flower

Forget-me-nots will soon be blooming throughout Quincy in honor of the city's senior citizens.

The City Council unanimously approved a resolve introduced by Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin at Monday's Council meeting, making the Forget-me-not the official flower of Quincy.

The forget-me-not is also the official flower of the Quincy Federation of Senior Citizens, said Tobin. He said he was "honored to introduce the resolve which will remind Quincy residents not to forget senior citizens."

"We must not forget our senior citizens," said Tobin. "Our city is a good one

Hannon To Announce For 3rd Term In May

By HENRY BOSWORTH

If you're wondering whether Mayor Walter Hannon will seek a third term—he will.

Insiders say he will announce sometime in May regardless of who is challenging him at that time or still thinking about challenging him.

Hannon, they say, is not about to accept any post that might be offered to him. And, he is quite confident he will be re-elected.

He feels he [1] has been honest with the people, [2] hasn't tried to kid them, [3] has tried to do a good job as the city's chief executive, and, [4] is ready and willing to put his record on the line. Hannon actually has his campaign underway right now.

According to those close to the scene, he has scheduled a series of 12 meetings with supporters and key neighborhood representatives in every section of the city.

In fact, two of the meetings have already been held: one on Norton Rd, Merrymount March 11 and the other on Dickens St., Wollaston March 13. There were more than 20 people at each.

The third in the series was set for Park Ave., Squantum, Wednesday night.

Among others already planned are those to be held on Goddard St., South Quincy, March 27, Main St., Quincy Point, April 1, and Harris St., West Quincy, April 3.

There's another one set for April 20 in Montclair, Wollaston Hill or Atlantic.

It's the old fashioned, but still quite effective, "grass roots" approach.

At each of the meetings, problems affecting that area are discussed.

Hannon hopes to win over the non-supporters and reportedly has made a good impression on them thus far. When it comes to talking with a small group, he usually comes through strong.

And, at each of these meetings he has been telling those present that he is definitely a candidate for re-election.

The impression is that no one is going to talk him out of running. And whoever gets in the race to challenge him, is going to have a hard-hitting incumbent to contend with.

According to those insiders you will see "Re-elect Hannon" bumper stickers making their appearance this week.

MEANWHILE, Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin reportedly is inching closer to the mayoralty ring. Those close to him say he's quite pleased at a recent poll taken for a City Council contender in Ward 5. The poll, they say, puts him as No. 1 in voter preference for mayor in that ward.

A TOUCH OF GREEN: City Clerk John Gillis just couldn't resist it. It isn't often that St. Patrick's Day falls on a Monday. So, for the City Council meeting Monday night, he had the council calendar printed in green.

QUINCY WAS WELL represented in the St. Patrick's Day parade in old Southie. Among those marching: Senator Tobin with Senator William Bulger, parade host; Reps. Joseph Brett and William Delahunt, Mayor Hannon, City Councillors Dennis Harrington, Leo Kelly, John Lydon, Warren Powers and James Sheets.

POLICE CAPT. William Daley will be honored at a dinner-dance April 3 at the George F. Bryan VFW Post. The honor is for his service to the post as assistant legislative officer. A social hour will start at 6 p.m. with dinner at 7:30 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the post or from committee members.

QUINCY KIWANIS CLUB will have the mayoralty candidates as speakers at its meetings over the next few weeks. Leading off will be City Councillor Joseph LaRaia at the March 24th meeting.

MORE GRID HONORS for Gary Quinn, 18-year-old son of City Councillor and Mrs. John Quinn. The 6-4, 235-pound B.C. High junior was selected as "All Catholic" and elected captain of next season's team. And, the other night he received the Ted Lyons Memorial Award as the outstanding lineman in the Greater Boston area.

Gary plays offensive guard, defensive tackle and kicks off. No wonder the colleges are already making overtures to him.

HERE'S ONE: William O'Connell, former executive vice-president of the Quincy-South Shore Chamber of Commerce notes that this is National Wildlife Week.

And times have changed. He says that about 100 years ago, a young relative of his was bitten by a rattlesnake in West Quincy. And the youngster's father, who was with him at the time, had to cut his finger off to save his life.

P.S. There are still rattlesnakes in the Blue Hills.

QJC Receives $9,750 For Heritage History Project

A grant of $9,750 has been awarded to Quincy Junior College by the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission. School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon said the grant would be used in the development of a local heritage history course at Quincy Junior College, a division of the Quincy Public Schools.

"At the Quincy Bicentennial Conference in February 1974, the idea of the college sponsoring such a program was suggested," said Dr. Creedon.

Responding to the idea of developing a program at Quincy Junior College, James A. Sheets and Larry Rines, instructors in history and government at the Quincy school, began working with Quincy Heritage on a grant proposal to fund the program. The proposal was developed by Quincy Heritage with staff assistance from the city's Department of Planning and Community Development.

Through this new program, the college hopes to foster interest in the city of Quincy's 350 years of history. Emphasis will be placed on the ideas and philosophical views of John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Josiah Quincy and John Hancock.

The course will also investigate such aspects of Quincy as the evolution and structure of Quincy town and city government, the Quincy method in education which developed in the latter part of the 19th century, the community's religious institutions, as well as the police and fire departments. Research is now underway in both the police and fire departments which is aimed at producing a comprehensive history of these institutions.

According to Professor Rines, a special emphasis will be given to the role of Quincy in industrial development. Work is already underway on the Fore River Shipyard and the granite industry.

The college hopes to involve some 50 students in this local history program. Special emphasis will be given to the writing of 20 to 30 page monographs on various aspects of local history. The booklet on the Fore River Shipyard is expected to be published this Spring.

"The aim of the program," reported Dr. Creedon, "is to create a scholarly body of data on the history of Quincy which can be used by the instructional staff throughout the Quincy Public Schools so that children from elementary to high school can develop a better appreciation of their city's history."

The monographs will be available to teachers in the Quincy Public Schools as well as to the public. Copies will be placed in the Quincy Public Library.

As part of the Bicentennial

Free Tax Return Help

The service, sponsored by the South Shore Chapter of the National Retired Teachers Association and the American Association of Retired Persons [AARP], will be offered celebration, Quincy Heritage will plan a series of city-wide discussion groups utilizing the monographs as the basis for an adult education program. "Quincy Heritage will be developing a slide-tape show on the history of Quincy, too," said Dr. Creedon, who serves as the general chairman for the local 350th anniversary and Bicentennial group.

Honor students from Quincy High School and North Quincy High School will be invited to participate in programs along with Quincy Junior College students.

According to Dr. Edward F. Pierce, president of the college, the program will be under the direction of Mr. Rines and Robert Dean of the history department.

The total program will cost some $19,750. The college will provide $10,000 for instructors' salaries, while the Massachusetts Bicentennial Grant monies will provide funds for consultant services, classroom supplies and publication expenses for the monographs.

The newly announced grant is one of 99 made to Massachusetts communities this week by the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission.

through Tuesday, April 15.

The AARP is located at the Massachusetts Employment Service building at 1433 Hancock St. Retired citizens needing assistance may go to the Hancock St. office Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 12 noon and from 1-3 p.m.

Editor, Quincy Sun:

In your issue of Jan. 9th you requested information as to the location of the fire station which appeared in your "Remember When" picture. [Burgin Platner ad]

If I am correct the location of this station which housed the Steamer and W. M. French hose was just beyond the School St. bridge on the right hand side just opposite Marsh Street. The house on the corner of Marsh St. was the home of Mr. Edwin Marsh who for a number of years was a director of the Quincy Savings Bank. I don't know if Tom Burgin would remember him or not.

This granite building not only housed the two pieces of fire equipment but was for a long time used as a school. It may be that was the reason that the street was called School Street. It was in later years used as an annex to City Hall.

The fireman on the extreme left in the black shirt is the chief, Mr. Charles Hall and the fireman standing directly in front of the drum on which the hose is reeled is Mr. Frank Packard. Both were very dedicated firemen.

I lived in Quincy sixty years before moving to New Hampshire in 1952 and I really enjoy the Remember When pictures and I have an album of almost all of those the Quincy Sun has brought to their readers attention through the courtesy of Burgin & Platner.

I hope I am correct about the picture.

Question Of Week

Is Standing In School Buses Prohibited

"Is there a law prohibiting standees on school buses in Massachusetts?" asked a new resident of the Voter Information Phone of the League of Women Voters.

The volunteer operator told him that at this time Massachusetts has no law prohibiting standees, but many local school committees have instituted a no-standing policy. The caller was also told that since the Federal Department of Transportation has mandated that no standees will be allowed on school buses by 1977, it is expected that legislation will be filed and passed by the General Court prior to the compulsory compliance date.

This question is one of the many now being received by the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone. Individuals with any questions on government may call the VIPhone Monday through p.m. The number in the Boston Friday between 10 a.m. and 2 area is 358-5880.

Vic Morrow 'died' for a prison part

By RICK ROBERTS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. I heard last year that Vic Morrow had died. Is he really dead or was his death just a part he played in a show? — R.D., Grand Prairie, Alberta, Canada.

A. Vic is alive, well and active. The long-time star of the old television series "Combat," is currently working on a film in Rome with French actors Rene Clement and Maria Schneider.

The only recent part I can recall seeing Vic "die" in was when he was shot with a makeshift pistol by Alan Alda in a prison drama, "The Glass House."

Q. Could you tell me when all the Osmonds birthdays are? Also, will they have another show on television? And where can I write to them? — C.M., Edgar, Wis.

A. Here goes: Alan Osmond, June 22, 1949; Wayne Osmond, Aug. 28, 1951; Merrill Osmond, April 30, 1953;

Jay Osmond, March 2, 1955; Donny Osmond, Dec. 9, 1957; Marie Osmond, Oct. 13, 1959, and Jimmy Osmond, April 16, 1963.

The Osmonds have no television show in the works just now. They are putting together the musical score for a film tentatively titled, "Together." You can write to them at the Osmond Fan Club, Box 4000, Provo, Utah 84601.

Q. Please settle a dispute for us over who is the mother of James MacArthur of "Hawaii Five-O." One of my friends insists his mother is Helen Hayes. I say it's Rosalind Russell. Who's right? — B.P., Torrance, California

A. Your friend is correct. MacArthur is the son of Miss Hayes and the late newspaperman and playwright Charles MacArthur.

MacArthur has been on the series since it began seven years ago in the role of Danny Williams. He began acting at the age of 8.

Q. Can you tell me what Dawn means in the television show "Tony Orlando and Dawn"? Neither of the girls' names is Dawn; I don't get it. — J.D., Vista, Calif.

A. "Dawn" was the name selected by Telma Hopkins and Joyce Vincent Wilson when they were singing background for various records. It is the name of a daughter of a record company executive.

Orlando joined Joyce and Telma in 1970 when he was asked to be the lead singer for a recording they had made of "Candida."

Since he worked for a competing record company, he could not have his name on the record label, so it was produced with the name of the girls' group, "Dawn."

Elton's glasses worth $3,200

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Those were Elton John's $3,200 glasses you saw him wear on the Cher special.

The glamorous specs, with their 18-carat gold and platinum frames set with 103 diamonds and lenses enlivened by rainbows, came from Dennis Roberts' Optique Boutique, a way-out eyeglass shop on the Sunset Strip, which also supplied Elton with lenses framed by his name in blinking lights.

Roberts, who supplies specs not only for Elton but for a roster of style-conscious stars, says the three who have made the public most glasses-conscious are John, Elvis, and Sammy Davis Jr., who owns at least 600 pair including one pair with his name in rolled gold on the frames.

"Next," he says, "Elton wants some with peacock feather rims."

However, Roberts encourages his clients to select glasses not to satisfy their personal whims so much as to enhance their personalities.

In the same way, he tries to enhance the personalities presented in the script when he's commissioned to make glasses for a picture.

'People's Protection Against Injustice'

Judge Kramer Hails LWV Panel On Juvenile Justice

Judge Albert L. Kramer, presiding justice of Quincy District Court, hailed the recent spotlight program on juvenile justice as "the people's only protection against injustice and inefficiency."

In welcoming the packed audience attending last Thursday's panel discussion at the court, Judge Kramer said he hoped the Quincy community would become even more involved with the court system in the city.

The panel discussion, sponsored by the League of Women Voters, of Quincy, opened with a film entitled "Children in Trouble."

Mrs. Alicia Coletti, chairwoman of the League's Judiciary Committee, said the inhumane treatment of juveniles depicted in the film did not accurately reflect the situation in Massachusetts since the closing of the training schools.

But she did note that innovative alternatives to imprisonment shown in the film are sorely lacking in the state.

The seven-member panel included Judge Kramer; Sgt. Robert Salvaggio of the Quincy Police Department; William Spencer, attendance officer of the Quincy Public Schools; Mary Lynch, juvenile probation officer; Daniel Raymondi, Norfolk County public defender; Richard Venna, assistant chief probation officer of the Quincy Court; and Sr. Rita McCarthy, director of a half-way house for girls in Quincy.

Atty. Ruth Paven, member of the League's Judiciary Committee, introduced the panel and served as moderator. Each panel member then explained his function in the treatment of juveniles.

Sgt. Salvaggio explained the department's program of diversion for juveniles - a program which provides an alternative to imprisonment, especially for first-offenders.

Venna cited the main need for juveniles in Quincy as homes designed for both long and short-term stays.

Mary Lynch described her dual role as a probation officer for all female juveniles. She is both a supervisor who sets curfews as well as an advocate who meets the needs of the juvenile.

Raymondi explained his role as ensuring the rights of the juvenile.

Sr. Rita McCarthy said the half-way home can accommodate six girls at one time. Over the past year, she said the facility has served 15 girls. Sr. Rita suggested an alternative school environment to help girls integrate themselves into a conventional school situation. Criticizing the fragmentation of service agencies, Sr. Rita suggested the development of an improved communication network among city agencies.

The League of Women Voters is involved in an ongoing study of the judicial system. This year's study focuses on the juvenile and probate courts, marking the fourth year of the study.

Mayor Proclaims Sunday 'Bishop Thomas Daily Day'

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has proclaimed Sunday "Bishop Thomas V. Daily Day", in honor of almost 20 years dedication to his work as a pastor and missionary.

In his proclamation, Mayor Hannon said of the Bishop:

"He has never lost his faith in helping people deal with problems, whether at St. Ann's where he served for so many years, or in the mission fields of South America where he counseled the Indian people of Peru." Hannon said it was this compassion for his fellow man which led to Daily's appointment as Bishop of the Archdiocese of Boston.

St. Ann's Parish in Wollaston has planned a reception for their former curate to coincide with Quincy's celebration of Bishop Thomas V. Daily Day. A reception for all children of the Parish will take place from 2 to 4 p.m. at St. Ann's School Hall. Then at 5 p.m. Bishop Daily will offer a concelebrated Mass in St. Ann's Church.

A reception, with a buffet and music by Ruby Newman's orchestra will be held at Florian Hall, Dorchester following the Mass.

Said Mayor Hannon, "I urge all citizens of Quincy to join me in expressing congratulations and appreciation to Bishop Daily for his contributions to the civic and moral character of our city."

Kennedy. Past Grand Knight Richard J. Koch is general chairman and Grand Knight Edward J. Keohane is Honorary Chairman.

Tickets are now available and may be purchased from Knights outside guard Thomas Cashman or Raymond Duval co-chairmen of the ticket committee, at the Council Home, 6 Hollis Ave.

Invited guests include Mayor Walter J. Hannon, Supreme Knight Dr. John W. McDevitt, and Knights of Columbus District Deputy James V. Bauer. Past State Deputy Michael E. Faherty is chairman of the Reception Committee.

A members dinner honoring Past Grand Knights will be held at the Council Home Tuesday, April 1. The 54th anniversary dinner-dance of North Quincy Council is scheduled for Saturday, April 26.

College Boards: Are They Necessary?

By BEV BERGMAN

When you think of attending college, you almost automatically think of College Boards; but are they really needed?

Perhaps it would be better, and a lot fairer, if colleges eliminated the Boards, and looked at a student's school marks. After all, isn't it more important that a college know how a student does in school over a number of years, rather than how he or she does on one test?

The SAT's contain tests in english and math. What about the student's ability in science or in a language? The Achievement Tests contain these, but many schools do not require the Achievement Tests.

Colleges may accept you or reject you on your College Board scores. In all fairness to the students, should one test decide our future?

Keohane Funeral Home Accepted In International Golden Rule Order

The Keohane Funeral Home, Inc., 785 Hancock St., Quincy, has been accepted for membership in the International Order of the Golden Rule for the 11th consecutive year.

The announcement was made by Roger Ytterberg, Executive Director of the Order, from the home office in Springfield, Ill.

The order is the world's largest limited-membership organization for funeral directors. Before being admitted, a firm must be recommended by families it has served and by other professional people in the area. To remain affiliated, a firm must requalify annually.

"Over the years," Ytterberg said, "the Order has become a more and more professional group. There are now nearly 1,300 members throughout the world, and the knowledge and experience they share make them uniquely able to serve their respective communities."

Ytterberg pointed out that regional meetings and an international conference are held each year to offer members sources of new information relative to the professions.

"Our entire concept of what is 'relative to the profession' has changed in recent years," Ytterberg said. "With the growth of thanatology, grief therapy, and other fields of study in the universities, we are able to obtain speakers with new and valuable things to say. The emphasis is now placed upon making funeral service truly helpful and meaningful to the survivors, to those who are left behind and must go on."

Continuous research is conducted at the Order's home office, and information is made available to members through newstape and newsletters.

"Our continuing goal," Ytterberg said, "is to work with our members for the improvement of the profession and the benefits of the families they serve."

One day we had a blizzard. And after the blizzard stopped, I got my shovel and my father and my brothers helped me make a big snow pile. Then I called up my friends and told them to come over. ALI BABA AND THE FORTY THIEVES

I liked it because of how we could sing and how everybody went up on the stage. I liked the girl that danced. I liked how the thieves kept saying, "Open Sesame." How they kept falling. I liked the lady that played the guitar. How the Uncle sat on Pattie Ridlen, my friend. The play was very good. How they talked loud so everybody could hear them. The scene in the background was nice. I didn't see any mistakes. The boy in the green suit was very funny. It was very good. Thank you for inviting me.

Here's What It Costs To Own A Car These Days

By Philip J. Lawrence
President

Colonial Federal Savings

And Loan Association
of Quincy, Holbrook and Wareham
8-6 Weekdays 8-7:30 Thursdays

Most Americans realize that, next to their home, the most expensive thing they buy is usually their automobile. Few are aware, however, how expensive a car really is.

Thanks to studies by the Federal Highway Administration, Transportation Department, for 1972 and 1974, we are able to get an idea not only of what it costs to own and operate an automobile but also of what inflation has done to increase these costs.

Back in 1972, the U.S. agency noted that it cost about 13.55 cents a mile to drive and maintain a 1972 standard-size car. Assuming a 10-year life and 100,000-mile performance from assembly line to junk yard, this meant a total cost of $13,552.95.

The study, which had been previously made in 1950, 1967, and 1970, came up for the first time in 1972 with figures also for a compact car [10.81 cents a mile or $10,807.60 for 10 years] and a subcompact [9.4 cents a mile or $9,443.03 for 10 years].

The Department of Transportation recognized that the car rarely had one owner throughout its lifetime. It justified the 100,000-mile vehicle life on the basis that half of the popular-size, popular-brand cars were still on the road at the end of 10 years.

An interesting comment in the 1972 report, in the light of the more recent energy crisis, was that many people believed that their single greatest outlay for automobile transportation was gasoline. Not so, said the report. It ranked third highest for standard cars and fourth for compacts and sub-compacts. "Gasoline is still one of the best bargains on today's market," the report noted.

The 1974 figures reveal that the cost for an automobile has leaped to about 15.89 cents a mile, or $15,892.36 for the life of the car. Compacts now cost 12.88 cents a mile, or $12,879.53 for using the car for 10 years. Subcompacts cost 11.15 cents a mile, or $11,153.10 for 10-year use.

The original car cost, depreciated, remains the greatest single expenditure [$4,201], with gas and oil [excluding taxes] up by over 50 per cent to $4,032. Maintenance, accessories, parts and tires are now $2,940, as compared with $2,147 for 1972. Insurance increased from $1,350 to $1,618. Garage, parking and tolls rose from $1,800 to $1,960. State and Federal taxes make up the rest.

With an inflation rate for cars of over 17 per cent in two years reflected in these figures, thoughtful persons will review their automobile use and the luxury of having two or three cars in the family.

ENC Students Participate In 'Shamrocks Against Dystrophy'

For the second year students of Eastern Nazarene College spearheaded by the Sigma Delta Zeta Society joined hundreds of other organizations across the country in supporting the Muscular Dystrophy Association's "Shamrocks Against Dystrophy" campaign.

In exchange for contributions, volunteers gave out Lucky Shamrock tags and balloons at various locations throughout the community. They were out on Friday and Saturday, trying to better last year's total of over $700. This year's goal was $1,000., with proceeds going to MDA's Southern Massachusetts Chapter.

Funds raised from "Shamrocks Against Dystrophy" and other events for MDA go towards research grants on a world-wide basis towards finding a cure for MD. In the past year, over $400,000 in research grants were awarded to leading institutions in the Boston area alone.

In addition to research, contributions also go towards maintaining over 140 free clinics throughout the country with two in the Boston area, physical and occupational therapy, wheelchairs, leg braces and other orthopedic appliances and a variety of recreational programs, including a summer camp in Haverhill, Mass.

Former Wollaston Woman Bequeaths $15,000 For Hospital Scholarship

A former Wollaston resident has willed $15,000 to Quincy City Hospital to establish scholarships for students in the School of Nursing.

Mrs. Helen M. Calef, who died in 1973, bequeathed the major portion of her estate, totaling about $350,000, to numerous charities, including churches, schools and organizations specializing in helping the poor and disabled.

According to Quincy Atty. Paul A. M. Hunt, executor of the estate, "Mrs. Calef became acquainted with the nurses at the hospital during her husband's last illness. She did not forget their kindness and indicated in her will that a scholarship be established for nurses' training.

Mayor Walter Hannon, who accepted the check on behalf of the city, praised the generosity of the former Quincy resident and her willingness to provide financial assistance to nursing students.

"Mrs. Calef's desire to establish this scholarship comes as a result of the exceptional care and concern which our nurses provide to patients at the hospital," he said.

Atty. Hunt said that Mrs. Calef, who has no surviving relatives, also provided in her will for St. Ann's Church, and the Society of St. James the Apostle.

Mrs. Calef moved to Wollaston with her husband, Albert J. Calef about 1962, where he died a few years later. He had been Vice President of the Columbian Insurance Company. It was during her husband's last illness in Quincy that Mrs. Calef became acquainted with the nurses of the Quincy City Hospital.

She remained in Wollaston for several years after her husband's death where she came to know the kindness of Rev. Thomas Dailey, who was then a curate at St. Ann's Church, and who has recently been elevated to Bishop. When Mrs. Calef became seriously ill, she elected to return to her native Lynn, until her death. She did not, however, forget either the nurses at the Quincy City Hospital or Father Dailey, and therefore provided in her will for the Quincy City Hospital [through a scholarship for nurses' training], for St. Ann's Parish and for the Society of St. James the Apostle, for which Father Dailey had voluntarily served in Central Massachusetts.

33-Hour YMCA Aquathon April 5-6

Quincy YMCA will hold its third annual Aquathon Saturday, April 5, and Sunday, April 6, for 33 continuous hours.

The purpose, according to Paul Harvey, men-boys director, is to raise funds to help sponsor needy youngsters to YMCA camps and regular Y memberships, support on-going Y programs and help support YMCAs in other countries, through YMCA World Service.

This year's goal is $8,000. The Y is looking to the community for support in this fund raising effort. Quincy Heritage and the Y have designated the Aquathon as an event in the 350th birthday celebration of the City of Quincy.

The Quincy Education Association and the School Committee at recent meetings unanimously endorsed the event. More than 1,000 applications have been distributed to each school for teachers to participate by obtaining sponsors and swimming during the event. The City Council at its February meeting was asked for endorsement through a presentation made by Floyd J. Folmsbee, president of Quincy YMCA, and Y Executive Director George Ramsden Jr. Mayor Walter J. Hannon, Councilman John Lydon and Sen. Arthur Tobin will swim and kickoff the Aquathon at 9 a.m. April 5.

Bob Perchard of the Quincy Police Dept. and Tom Maguire of the Fire Dept. are coordinating the support of their respective departments in helping the Y help youth.

Harvey said that the Y, through its Aquathon, promotes the theme "Swim for the Health of It" and at the same time help needy youngsters in a worthwhile cause.

Anyone can participate in the event by obtaining a swimmers' application at the YMCA and solicit sponsors for any amount per length he wants to swim. Swimmers also may sponsor themselves. Each contribution is tax deductible.

When swimmers have all their sponsors they wish to solicit, they should go to the Y anytime from April 5 to 9 a.m. to Sunday, April 6, at 6 p.m. and swim their lengths. If a person prefers not to swim but still to participate, she should call a Y professional staff person, who will be swimming.

Takes King's Tourney

ENC Winds Up On Strong Note

The Eastern Nazarene College basketball team, lacking the big man who might have made it one of the top small college teams, struggled over the first half of the season. It rebounded strongly over the second half and, winning nine of its last 10 games, finished up with a 17-2 record, capturing the King's College Tournament for the fourth time in the past five years.

The big disappointment for the Crusaders was losing to King's in the finals of the National Christian College A.A. district tournament, the loss knocking ENC out of the national tournament.

"Our final win over Kings was by far our biggest of the season," said Coach Jim Smith, who a few weeks ago gained his 100th coaching win and finished the year with 110 ENC career wins. "It was a great ending to the season and my ball players have never shown more desire in my five years here."

A 78-68 loss to Kings in the NCCAA district finals snapped a six-game winning streak for the Crusaders. They then went on to win three more to win the Kings tourney, gaining revenge against the host school, 91-83, in the finals.

In the Kings Tournament opener ENC had edged Eastern Mennonite College, 82-80, and followed up with a 69-68 squeaker over Barrington.

Prior to the NCCAA loss to Kings, the Crusaders had run off six wins in a row over New Hampshire College, Southeastern Mass. University, Nyack, Kings, Berkshire Christian College and Barrington.

If Smith had one more good big man [he sorely missed Quincy's Rick Reyenger, 6-7, who graduated], there is no telling how far ENC could have gone.

His biggest man was Howie Briggs at 6-6½ and the team usually found itself at a decided height disadvantage.

One of ENC's weaknesses a year ago was a lack of good ball-handling guards and helping immeasurably to solve the problem this year was 5-7 Steve Miller of North Quincy, Captain and sparkplug for last year's North Quincy High team.

"Many colleges were after Steve, but he was interested in playing soccer as well as basketball and wanted to stay in his own backyard," Smith pointed out.

"So he made his choice and certainly did a great job for us. He is one of the best ballhandlers I've coached and he also scores well and rebounds very well for a small man."

Another former North Quincy captain, Dan Zink, a senior, also played a key role for ENC this year and was a good rebounder and scorer.

Miller played the hero's role in several games this year. During the six-game win streak Steve tapped in a rebound just before the buzzer to top Kings and hit on four foul shots in the last two minutes to cut short a late SMU rally.

In the semifinals of the Kings tournament he scored 11 points and scored nine of ENC's last 11 points from the foul line in the two-point win. In the finals Steve scored 16 points and his ball handling received Smith's plaudits.

Smith loses only three players by graduation and will have eight varsity players back.

They are 6-1 Mike Cox, 6-4 Gordon Wetmore, 5-10 Steve Parks, 5-9 Dave Rouse, 6-3 Mike Barefoot, 6-3 Jim Flinner, 6-1 Rick Giove and Miller.

Miller, Giove, Flinner and Barefoot are only freshmen.

Two of ENC's seniors, Capt. Gerry Whetstone and Briggs, received Kings Tourney all-star honors, Whetstone making the first team and Briggs the second. The other senior is Zink.

The ENC women's team, coached by Nancy Detwiler, had another winning season and finished second among eight teams in Division 1 of the Women's Christian Association Tournament at Barrington, R.I. One of the team's standouts was former Quincy High star Jean Macchi, who sparked in the tournament.

Bantam A's

The Bantam A team defeated West Roxbury, 6-1, to make its record 22-3-1.

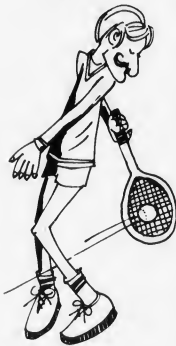

Don Perdios, Eddie Kane, Jim Fitzpatrick, Mike Bondarick,

FIRST ONE IN Seeking match? just be cool

By ED COLLINS
Copy News Service

Are you having trouble picking up matches at the local public courts? Do you stand around all afternoon like a wallflower waiting for someone to walk up and ask you to play? If so, it's probably because you have not figured out how to play the role of the "tennis buff." You're not cool enough.

First of all, consider your apparel. Nobody — I mean nobody — will walk up to you if you're wearing a pair of plaid bermuda shorts and high-top black converse tennis shoes. Get with it! You must invest in some tennis togs.

Remember though, white is out and color is in. Go for something heavy, like navy blue shorts with a canary yellow shirt. Don't forget to roll your socks down and wear a pair of fancy leather shoes.

Now check out your equipment. Better throw away that racquet press or you'll spend your whole career beating your brains out against the backboard. Carry two racquets, preferably wood, in racquet covers. Carry them under your right arm. In the other hand carry a towel and an unopened can of (yellow) tennis balls. (Check around to see what everyone is using — it'll only help.)

If you play it right, people will notice you as soon as you show up. Don't exchange their glances. Be cool. Just stand around nonchalantly and watch the match on court No. 1 (it's usually the best tennis). Someone will probably walk up and ask to play.

If you haven't been approached within five minutes, take your racquet out of its cover and start fiddling with it. Be careful — you must know how to handle the racquet with respect.

Hold it in your right hand at the throat and move the strings around with your left hand. You always see the pros do this, right? It's because the strings get out of place as they brush the ball with topspin.

Now hit the racquet face with the palm of your left hand. Put your ear next to the racquet and listen for the ping of your gut (naturally) strings. You're checking the tension of the strings.

If you've followed directions carefully, you should have a match by now. Don't blow your cool yet. If you do, your new partner just might happen to notice that his match showed up.

As you get to the court, lay your extra racquet against the net and quickly open your can of balls. Accidentally drop one of the balls on the court. After it stops bouncing, take your racquet and tap it hard, contacting it at the top of the frame with the racquet at a 45-degree angle to the ground. Hit it hard once and pull the racquet away. It should bounce up to you. If you succeed — congratulations! This is the biggest psych job in the world. He's apt to be impressed.

Now spin the racquet on the ground and simultaneously say, "M or W?" If he picks "M" then casually glance at the butt of the racquet and say, "It's W. ... I'll serve." (If the racquet doesn't have an "M" or a "W" do it anyway. They'll never question you.)

Don't let him warm up. If he sees how bad you are, he'll think of an excuse not to play. Tell him you like to warm up slowly as you play. Once you serve, he'll have to finish at least a set. Otherwise, you win by default.

Stand as close to the center service mark as possible. (That's the little line in the middle of the long line at the end of the court.) Hold one ball up for him to see (put the other one in your left pocket). This means that you are ready to play. Do not play "first one in." That is definitely uncool.

Bounce the ball a few times. Now look across the net and dribble it a few more times. Look again and bounce it down once more. (Don't bounce it off your foot!)

Toss it up slowly and hit it ... "Fault!" Whatever you think, never question his call. Take the second one out and go through the same bouncing routine. Toss it up and tr; it again — "Double fault!" Oh well!

Improvements Goal

Workshop Explores New Downtown Image Possibilities

The Quincy Center Improvement Program held a workshop Tuesday to begin to investigate with the downtown community a new image for the Center.

The introductory workshop, the first in a four-part series, was held in the site office of Kenneth Parry Associates at Cottage Ave. and Hancock Sts. The architects held the workshop in conjunction with the Downtown Development Office. Both offices, funded through a federal Economic Development Grant, are working to improve the downtown's visual environment to create a sounder economic base for Quincy.

In addition to improving the visual environment, the Downtown Development Office, which is part of Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development, is seeking long range improvements in the areas of more effective land use and traffic patterns.

"The workshops are one of the mechanisms by which business people and the community can have maximum input to the creation of long and short range goals for the Center," said Harvey L. Towvim, Director of the Downtown Development Office. "The program is theirs," he added. "We are here to provide technical assistance and act as catalysts."

In order to generate thought about possible alternatives businesspeople can take in improving Quincy Center, Parry Associates designed several overlays of Hancock St. Rudy Houk, one of the architects, discussed a need he perceived to create a "place" out of Quincy Center. A long range goal for the Center should create a sense of order around a unifying idea, he said.

Some of the unifying ideas displayed in the sketched overlays showed a strip of trees planted in the center of Hancock St., an enclosed mall with ground sculptures and displays, and an arcade. All of these created more "people-space" for shoppers.

"None of the sketches are proposals for Quincy Center," said Kenneth Parry, head of the Quincy architectural firm. "They were designed to show possibilities, and to interest businesspeople in creating their own image and goals to strengthen and enhance Quincy Center."

He stressed that there are many possible themes that might be appropriate for the center such as Quincy's historic past.

In discussing improvements for the downtown, the architects pointed out that the center is a "one story landscape". The upper floors on buildings aren't utilized as much as they might be. Suggestions for bringing in restaurants and additional office space on these floors were made.

One point that the architects stressed was once a goal was established by businesspeople, all the individual efforts being made to improve and remodel stores, could work towards achieving that goal.

The next workshop which will take place in early April will be devoted to financial alternatives for businesspeople. Representatives from the Small Business Administration and two local banks will answer questions about loans and financial resources. Remaining workshops will be used to discuss progress being made by the architects, and to establish a set of goals by business people for Quincy Center.

"We strongly encourage people who weren't able to come to the first workshop to attend the next," said Mr. Parry. "The program is based on the participation and support of the downtown community," he said.

Tobin Asks $50,000 For Freedom Park

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin plans to recommend the use of up to $50,000 of a proposed $2 million bond issue for Freedom Park plans.

At Monday's City Council meeting, Mayor Walter J. Hannon requested authorization of the $2 million bond issue for city-wide neighborhoods improvements to parks and public works. The matter was referred to the Public Works Committee, a council committee comprised of all Council members.

Committee Chairman Leo J. Kelly said the councilors will meet "within seven to 10 days" to discuss the bond issue.

Tobin called the terminology in the bond issue request "too general" and said he wanted to earmark specific amounts of money for specific improvements.

Referring to the term 'beautification' used in the proposal, Tobin asked, "Will they go out and paint a lamp post and call that beautification?"

The Community Development Act of 1974 provided Quincy $983,000 in federal funds for neighborhood improvements. City Planning Director Geoffrey Davidson said the city is seeking the additional $2 million "to triple, in effect, the impact of the program."

In addition to the Freedom Park funding, Tobin also plans to submit other amendments to the bond issue request including:

- A substantial increase in the $10,000 allocated for elderly services.

- Specifications for the use of $75,000 now called 'contingency funds'.

- Input from each Ward Councilor on his planned improvements in his district.

Tobin emphasized that his proposed amendments would in no way alter improvements planned for other areas of the city, specifically for Houghs Neck, Atlantic and Southwest Quincy.

Calling the Houghs Neck area "the number one target area," Tobin said improvements there will include upgrading of drains, sewers, streets, curbing as well as the planting of trees.

Mayor Hannon said the $2,983,000 combined federal and local funding would give Quincy neighborhoods a sorely needed "shot in the arm." He said:

"Quincy's highest priority must be to keep our neighborhoods strong. While the federal bloc grant of $1 million will help us take important steps forward, the HUD total represents less than what Quincy was averaging in the early 1970's under the old categorical programs.

"Because of this reduction and the federal moratoriums between 1972 and 1974, our neighborhoods need a real shot in the arm. This combined federal and local program can provide that shot."

Cars To Be Towed From Section Of Larry St.

Senator Arthur H. Tobin [D-Norfolk], announces the MDC will install "No Parking - Tow Zone" signs on a portion of Larry St. in West Quincy, which is under the jurisdiction of the MDC.

The action, he said, is the result of the combined efforts of himself and Ward 4 councillor James Sheets.

"For several weeks Jim Sheets and I have been receiving numerous complaints from residents of the Larry St. area," Tobin stated. "We have received reports of cars being left on the street for weeks at a time, making passage into the streets and driveways difficult at best. I have expressed, on behalf of Councillor Sheets and myself, our thanks to the MDC for their continued interest in the safety and traffic problems of our area."

Direct Bus Service From Quincy Center To SS Office

The MBTA has established direct bus service from the Quincy Center Station to the social security administration offices in North Quincy.

This service was begun at the request of Ward 1 Councillor Leo J. Kelly and Putnam Borden, executive director of the Council on Aging, in an effort to provide the elderly convenient access to the offices.

Kelly said many senior citizens had found it difficult to reach the new social security office after its location was changed.

Regular service is now available on the Hancock St. via North Quincy route. Buses leave the Quincy Center Station at five minutes before the hour and 25 minutes past the hour. Service starts at 9:25 a.m. and continues until 4:55 p.m.

Kelly added he would be distributing bus schedules to various senior citizens groups in the near future.

Hannon 'Working Diligently' For Negligible Tax Increase

$8 Million City Budget Hike Seen

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Indications are that the 1975 city budget may reach the $70 million mark, an $8 million increase over last year's budget.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon is reportedly "working diligently to come up with a negligible tax increase." Current rate is $159.90.

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin plans to call a special meeting of the City Council next Monday, to formally accept the city budget from Mayor Hannon. He said the budget will be immediately referred to the Finance Committee for review and pruning.

Accurate estimates of the new tax rate could not be made since several sources of revenue - including hospital receipts, state revenue and property valuation - still remain a question mark.

Last year's city budget totaled $62,028,177, with some $24 million earmarked for the School Department and some $13.3 million for Quincy City Hospital.

Both the School Department and the Hospital budgets are expected to jump by $3 million, bringing the school budget to just under $27 million and the hospital's to over $16 million.

However, the rise in the hospital budget is expected to be offset by increases in hospital receipts.

Budget Director William Grindlay said he plans to meet with Mayor Hannon this week to

William Villone To Retire As Veterans Director

William L. Villone will retire as director of the city's Veterans Services Department after nearly 27 years of service to Quincy.

His retirement will be effective May 2.

Villone began his career in Quincy in 1948 when he became an investigator in the Veterans' Services Department.

He brought with him two years of experience as a special agent in the Counter Intelligence Corps and another three years' experience as a special investigator in the Army Criminal Investigation Division in Hawaii.

A graduate of Boston Mechanical Arts School [now Boston Technical High School] and Northeastern University School of Law, Villone was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar Association in April 1935. He practiced law at 10 Post Office Square in Boston before entering Counter Intelligence School in Hawaii.

Villone was appointed assistant director of Quincy's Veterans' Services Department in 1958 and became director one year later.

Married in 1943 to the former Ann Cleary of Quincy, Villone has been a resident of Wollaston 28 years.

After 21 years as a governmental appeal agent for Quincy's Selective Service Board, Villone retired in 1971. He received a certificate of appreciation for his many years of service to the nation from former President Richard M. Nixon.

Villone is a past president of the Southeastern Massachusetts Veterans Agents and Directors Association and a past vice-president, executive board member and legislative officer of the Massachusetts State Veterans Agents and Directors Association. A past director of Quincy's branch of the American Red Cross, Villone is also a former member of the

LaRaia Urges Business

Community To Give Input

To City Government Decisions

Mayorality candidate Joseph J. LaRaia urged the business community Monday to provide their input into the decisions of city government.

"Government service requires the input of every citizen before decisions are made," Councillor LaRaia told the members of the Kiwanis Club at a luncheon meeting at the Quincy YMCA.

"Too often in the past, the input followed the decision-making process," LaRaia said.

One example of LaRaia's willingness to solicit opinions for policy making, he said, is the "Tell-it-to-Joe" headquarters which is now being devised.

LaRaia also suggested that while the federal and state governments work out their problems, local communities search for ways to improve their status. He cited Quincy's involvement in the bicentennial celebration as a way to provide the "needed adrenaline for the city's economy."

He also urged less traffic congestion and more parking availability as a method of stabilizing the economy in Quincy.

LaRaia was the first of several candidates being invited by the Kiwanis Club to present their views.

Adams Family May Seek Court Action

City Seeks Merrymount Park

The city of Quincy is making another attempt to obtain the 6.6-acre Merrymount Park land site occupied by the Army Reserve Center to use for park and recreational purposes.

City Commissioner of Natural Resources Richard J. Koch has written to Congressman James A. Burke asking him to "provide the influence necessary to persuade the Department of the Army to abandon the site and return it to Quincy, as a major bicentennial project.

The entire 73-acre park was donated to Quincy by Charles Francis Adams in 1885 as a recreational area to be used and enjoyed by Quincy Citizens.

Thomas Boylston Adams indicated the Adams family will begin legal action if "voluntary congressional or governmental action" both fail to return the land to Quincy.

The 6.6-acre site was acquired by the federal government by eminent domain for use as a Nike battalion headquarters. After these weapons became obsolete, the site was used as an army reserve unit.

The land now houses some 235 personnel of the 187th Infantry Brigade. A total of 30 full-time personnel occupy the buildings on the site. Each month 125-150 young men are trained at the Center.

The Quincy Park-Recreation Board has offered three alternate sites where the present reserve contingency could relocate: the Army Reserve Center in Hingham, the South Boston Naval Facilities recently abandoned and newly-acquired by the federal government, and Quincy's National Guard Armory.

Koch said the 374-acre-site in Hingham exceeds Quincy's total park area which serves a population of 90,000. Koch estimated that only one-third of the Hingham site is used by the Army.

Noting a dwindling amount of open space areas in Quincy, Koch said the need for Merrymount Park is as strong as ever. Koch said:

"...The living Adams family members, the Quincy Park and Recreation Board, the Quincy Conservation Commission and many Quincy residents...question the federal government's need of this area for military purposes - very small and minute

Dan Cupid In Skid

Marriages Take Big Drop Here

Is marriage going out of style in Quincy?

In 1974, according to City Hall statistics, there were 985 marriages—a drop of 134 from 1973. It was the largest plunge for Dan Cupid in the past decade.

And, it marked the first time in eight years that the number of recorded marriages in the city dropped below 1,000.

Last year's 985 figure is just one more than the 984 performed in 1966.

And the downward trend is apparently continuing into 1975. Only 24 marriages took place in Quincy during January of this year. A glance at the marriage records shows that 75-100 marriages usually take place each month in Quincy.

Josephine Carnali of the Quincy City Clerk's office, said the January total of 24 marriages was so low that figures were re-checked and re-counted for error. No error was found.

A glance at the marriage figures over the past decade shows a slow increase between 1964 and 1966. The number of marriages performed in 1965 rose to 977, 32 more than the previous year. The total crept to 984 in 1966, then jumped to 1,107 the following year, an increase of 123.

Between 1967 and 1970 the number of marriages performed in Quincy

5,000 Students In MBTA Anti-Vandalism Poster Contest

Quincy residents with an artistic eye will be able to help judge the anti-vandalism poster contest sponsored by the MBTA.

A total of 5,000 Quincy public school students in grades 1-12 have created posters carrying the theme "Vandalism Hurts Everyone".

Special Advisor for Marketing Morton R. Tapper, director of the project, said 200-300 semi-finalist posters will be selected from all entries and displayed at South Shore National Bank.

Ballots will be available at the bank during the week of March 31-April 3. Quincy residents are encouraged to vote for the posters of their choice.

This public balloting will account for 50 per cent of the final judging. A six-member panel will round out the judging squad.

Winning posters will be reproduced and hung in MBTA subway cars and buses.

Rampant vandalism throughout the nation triggered this newly-launched campaign, said Tapper. He noted that vandalism cost the MBTA nearly $500,000 last year alone.

Tapper said the campaign and contest, first launched in Quincy, will be extended to all 79 other cities and towns in the MBTA area.

"We want to instill the feeling of respect for property," he said.

In order to supplement and sustain this respect for property, Tapper said the MBTA is co-ordinating an audio-visual presentation on the causes and effects of vandalism. The show will be available to all schools within the MBTA area.

In addition, a coloring book designed for elementary school children will help to teach youngsters about property and the meaning of property damage.

The posters will be judged according to four grade-level categories: Grades 1-3; 4-6; 7-9; and 10-12. A total of 56 prizes will be awarded - one first-prize, three second-prizes and 10 third-prizes within EACH grade level category.

First-prize winners will receive an unlimited one-year, pre-paid MBTA pass for one person. Any member of the winner's immediate family may use the pass.

Second-prize winners will receive a $100 savings bond and third-place winners will receive a $25 bond.

A total of 200 contestants will be awarded honorable mention certificates and everyone entering the contest will receive a certificate of appreciation from the MBTA.

Sunday, April 13 is slated as Awards Day. At 11 a.m. that day, the "Anti-Vandalism Express", a silver bird, four-car train will arrive in Quincy Center Station to pick up all contest winners, their families and city dignitaries.

The train will carry its passengers to the Cabot Transportation Center in South Boston where the presentation of prizes will take place.

Promotion Attracts Over 4,000

Easter Bunny's Arrival Like Having Robert Redford In Town

PEOPLE OF ALL AGES kids, teenagers and adults - wait with outstretched arms for another barrage of ping-pong Easter eggs, in downtown Quincy promotion. One woman uses inverted umbrella to make an easy catch.

The arrival of the Easter Bunny in downtown Quincy Saturday could be likened to the arrival of movie star Robert Redford amid a sea of eager fans.

An unexpected crowd of more than 4,000 gave a wall-to-wall people look to Hancock St. near Woolworth's, as the "celebrity" arrived.

He carried with him ping-pong Easter "eggs" redeemable for free gifts, and the crowd of all ages pushed and shoved and screamed.

People sometimes grab at movie stars, hoping to take home a glove, a fragment of a shirt or coat. The crowd reacted similarly to the Easter Bunny. Before the egg hunt was over, he was minus his cotton tail.

The hordes of people awaited the shower of ping-pong ball Easter "eggs" with inverted umbrellas and outstretched arms. "Eggs" were distributed via helicopter as well as via Mr. Bunny.

Jack Kerrigan, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA), the sponsor of the promotion, said "the new twist" of redeeming the ping-pong balls for prizes combined with the current economic "hard times" to draw unpredictable crowds to Quincy Center - crowds which also caused some unpredictable

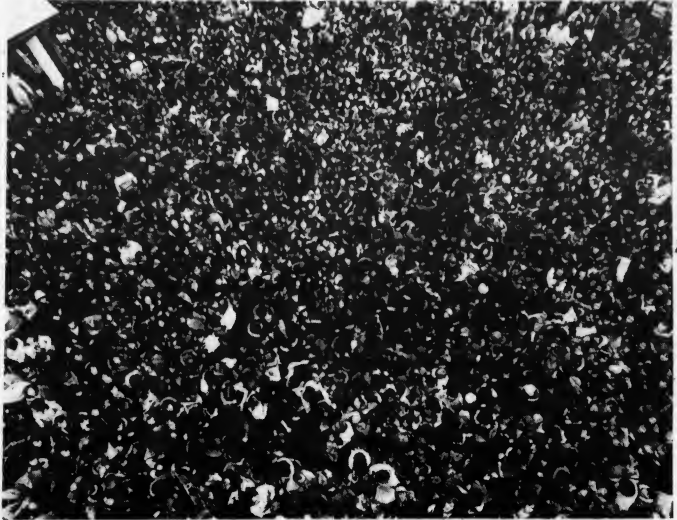

N. Quincy MBTA Bus Route Revised

The MBTA's spring bus timetables are now effective.

Only Quincy route revised, is the North Quincy Station-Fields Corner No. 250 run.

The route was revised to operate outbound via the State Street South complex. Buses operating from Fields Corner Station will now operate a regular route as far as Hancock Street, Quincy, then via Newport Ave. Extension to West Squantum St. and into the North Quincy Station.

problems. Three people were slightly injured during the rush for "eggs" but wild rumors circulated of a woman dying, a child being crushed in the crowd and a pregnant mother losing her infant.

Kerrigan called Saturday's events "a blessing in disguise" and said the QCBPA will plan other promotions with an eye towards crowd control. He said: "Quincy has the power to attract people in to the center and we'd like to continue to do this. As best as possible we'll plan for larger crowds in the future. This is a blessing in disguise. We can learn from this promotion and go on from here."

Business on Saturday varied from store to store, said Kerrigan. Some stores did "a booming business", he noted, while others conducted their normal day's sales, while still others were down in sales.

Kerrigan noted that "some unfortunate pushings and shovings" were started "by people in all age groups". He said he was happy "all the vicious rumors proved untrue." He added:

"The Quincy Sun pictures explain more than words can - of the unpredictable response to this promotion. I feel that most of the people in Quincy will be able to understand what happened."

STRICTLY PERSONAL Husband allergic to her perfume

By PAT and MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My husband and I have a good relationship with one minor exception. He has allergies which make him sneeze and break out in a rash. He is very susceptible to cats, dogs, rabbits, dust, soaps — and my perfume. We have no pets, no flowers, and I keep the house as dust free as possible.

I want to use perfume because I like it. I work and see nothing wrong with putting on a little cologne. By the time the day is over, the perfume is so weak that it would take a bloodhound to smell it. However, my husband complains that he sneezes each evening because of my perfume. Is this possible? By evening I can't smell a thing.

The Bloodhound's Wife

Dear Wife:

If perfume bothers your husband, stop using it. It can't be that big a sacrifice. After wearing a fragrance all day, you may not notice it.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

Believe it or not I made it home from the dentist without having a cardiac arrest. I am frightened beyond hope when I enter that little room. The chair looms ahead as if it were the one in the gas chamber.

One time I got so nervous that I cried. The fear simply brought tears to my eyes. Unfortunately, I was wearing false eyelashes. They lost their grip and sort of hung there. My dentist kindly plucked them off. I don't know what makes me afraid, but the fear is very real. If you have any suggestions, I would be eternally grateful. My dentist will be even more in your debt. He's stuck with me.

28 and May Not See 29

Dear 28:

If it comforts you at all, there are thousands of fellow sufferers in the same position. This fear often stems from childhood and plagues men and women for years.

See your dentist often. This procedure actually cuts down on the work to be done. If your teeth require a great amount of care, don't bite off more than you can chew. Make several appointments instead of one or two marathon sessions.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

The other day I answered the door and the man asked if he could speak with my mother. This isn't the first time. I am 5 feet and I guess I do look younger than 24.

My friend is 5 feet 10 inches and when we go shopping clerks will make dumb comments like, "There goes Mutt and Jeff." Being petite has many disadvantages. I feel as if I should wear a sign around my neck. Please tell people to take a look at the person. Five feet doesn't necessarily indicate that a person is under 15. Thanks for letting me get this off my chest.

Petite and Put Out

Dear Petite:

They are told. However, there is a flip side to your problem. Tall people are many times treated as if they were older than they are. Youngsters who mature quickly are often expected to perform at a different level than a small or average child. The answer is to look at the person — not the size.

Coffee table book brings big yawn

By ANN RUDY
Copley News Service

Certainly by now you are familiar with what is referred to as the "coffee table book."

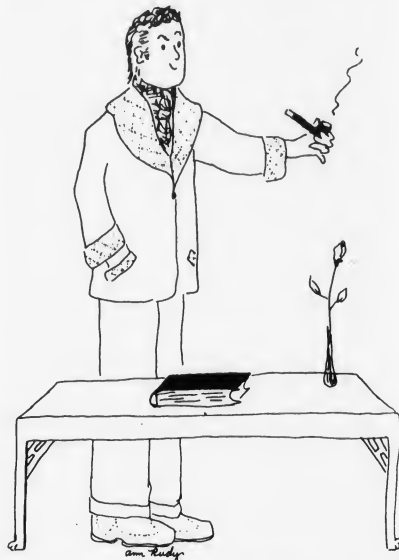

And if your reaction is anything like mine, you are stifling an ill-concealed yawn. But in case you have been in India for the last five years conferring with your Guru (in which case you may well be above all such irritations) let me tell you that a coffee table book is a huge and heavy volume, for purposes of display, usually sold in better book stores for what you would normally pay for about 3,500 sticks of gum.

And if you like to chew gum as much as I do, you might think twice before parting with that amount of money these days — especially when you consider the hazards of such a book.

For instance, a very dear friend of mine who aspires to the better life and is willing to sacrifice a few trinkets to appear to have attained it, bought himself a coffee table book and displayed it, not surprisingly, on his coffee table.

Then, properly attired in his smoking jacket, ascot and pipe, he invited a few friends over for a gala evening of intellectual exchange.

Pointing to the book with his pipe, he announced, "Picked that up the other day at Hunter's Book Store. Expensive as hell, but fascinating. More about ethnic art in there than I care to know." Then he added a little chuckle to let us know he was only kidding.

"Really," he continued, sobering, "an incredible collection of photos." One of the guests who had set down a drink on the cover quickly removed it and his wife tried to lift the book to take a look.

"If you picked this up without help," she told our host, "you are stronger than you look." There were polite titters all around and then each of us thumbed dutifully through about 400 pages of woven baskets, fetishes and Etruscan vases.

Those of us who were not too far-sighted to read the small print, informed the others, aloud, about what we were learning. I haven't been so bored since my eighth grade history teacher decided to call off recess in favor of reviewing the Battle of Hastings.

But don't let me stop you if you want to buy a coffee table book. Buy two if you want. That is, if your budget, your coffee table and your friends can stand the strain.

STITCHING WITCHERY

Pretty patches for kids' pants

Dear Betty:

I found a way to make kids happy and save money at the same time. Instead of throwing away their favorite pants because of holes in the knees, sew on pretty patches. They don't cost much ... or you can embroider your own. Coloring books have a lot of cute things to draw on to your patch. Our oldest boy is in kindergarten and he always wants to wear his patched pants! — Martha Ferrell, Tullahoma, Tenn.

What a winning combination! Can't beat that with a stick.

QUICK STITCH: Why work harder than you have to? Do all the sewing you can before going to your ironing board. Saves ups and downs.

Like your bean steak well done?

LONDON — Meat which tastes like the real thing but consists of protein produced from soy beans and other vegetables will replace one-tenth of the meat in our diets in 15 years, according to a prediction by Prof. Alan Ward, chairman of the Food Standards Committee.

Vegetable protein products could maintain variety in the diet and serve as a safeguard against shortages of high-protein food, but Ward says he cannot see them as a complete replacement for meat.

RIGHTS 'N' WRONGS Jeans are 'out' for job market

By RIV TOBIN
Copley News Service

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
My daughter is a college senior with a 3.5 scholastic average. She has been called to be interviewed by several major companies who are seeking college graduates with her background but each time she has been disappointed because they never give her a concrete answer. She is very poised, knows her field and is well prepared for the interview. I keep telling her I think the interviewers are turned off by her attire. She insists on wearing jeans, a jersey and boots. She says this is the way she dresses for class and the interviewers should be examining her capabilities and not her wardrobe. Who is right? — Jan's mother

Dear Mother:
I believe you are. Classroom attire has become very casual and is not suitable for the job market. Jan should stand on a street corner at noon and see what the clerks, secretaries, receptionists and other young business women are wearing.

Jan's days of "doing her own thing" are over. If she's as smart as you say she is, she'll forsake her jeans and jerseys and join the mainstream of the work-a-day world. I'm sure she is aware of the unemployment situation and today's employers can be just as choosy as they wish. Of course, Jan has a point but so do the employers ... and that's the way it is.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
Is it considered good etiquette to have a small jar of toothpicks on the dining table? The little cut glass holder belonged to my grandmother and I cherish it. — Mrs. B.

Dear Mrs. B.:
Dentists deplore the use of toothpicks and since the invention of floss, oral jet sprays, scientifically designed brushes and pastes that cleanse, polish, fluoride and deodorize, toothpick holders have become curious. Your cut glass jar belongs in your curio cabinet.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
I'm going to have a "stereo party." (That's where all the kids bring their favorite record and we all sit around and listen.) I'm 14 but some of the guys are 15. I want to serve beer and pretzels but my mother won't let me. Don't you think the boys should have the right to drink beer? — Mary J.

Dear Mary J.:
Sorry, but I'm going to have to agree with your mother. A 14-year-old girl shouldn't be serving beer to a 15-year-old boy. And what is wrong with a cola and brownies? If you make the brownies yourself I guarantee you'll chalk up more points with the boys than you will with a six-pack. Try it and let me know!

Fighting Cancer With Right Diet

The American Cancer Society has documented evidence that Cancer of the colon and rectum is often caused by excessive eating of beef. Lack of fiber, or roughage, in our diet can also cause this malignancy, according to medical research. To offset this diet deficiency eat whole grain cereals and vegetables like broccoli, brussels sprouts, eggplant and summer squash. Also berries of all kinds provide the necessary fiber or roughage. If, by eating less beef and more roughage, we might, just might, prevent the most common cause of cancer today, intestinal cancer. Doesn't it make sense to at least be aware?

YMCA To Offer Aerobic Dancing Course

The Quincy YMCA will offer two Aerobic Dance Courses starting March 31 and April 1 for 12 weeks.

times a week.

QSO Conducting Special Sponsors Drive

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra is conducting a special sponsors drive, seeking support of the community.

The QSO is a non-profit, cultural organization with a 55-member musical ensemble that practices every Tuesday evening at Canterbury Hall, Eastern Nazarene College, Elm Ave., Wollaston.

Those interested in assisting may obtain sponsorship cards from Joseph Doran, drive treasurer at Doran and Horrigan Insurance Center, 19 Billings Rd, North Quincy or members of the orchestra. Those assisting in this special fund raising effort will insure the continuing success of this organization.

A large committee is participating with Richard J. Koch as general chairman. He is being assisted by QSO president Andrew T. Walsh, first vice president Richard Thayer, second vice president Mrs. Frank Vallier, treasurer Mrs. Henry F. Phelan, recording secretary Mrs. Wilfred T. Williamson, and members of the Board of Directors.

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra was formed by the Thomas Crane Public Library in 1953. First conductor was Richard Boyer who acted in that capacity for five years until succeeded by Armand Vorce in 1958. Nicholas Van Slyke became the conductor in 1963, and was succeeded in 1965 by Professor Robert E. Brown who is now serving his 10th season as conductor.

The orchestra conducts four major events annually, including the mid-winter concert in February, and the Youth Performers activity held each April. This years program will be conducted on April 16, with the North Quincy High School and Quincy High School Glee Club joining with the Eastern Nazarene choral union for the program at North Quincy High School.

Major attraction of the season for the orchestra is the annual Pops Concert, which will be held Thursday May 22, at the George Bryan VFW Hall, 24 Broad St., Quincy.

The Quincy Symphony closes out its year with childrens concert in November. But there are also outdoor concerts and various other programs offered to the city of Quincy, and community organizations each year.

Finnish Cultural Center Plans Bicentennial Meeting April 6

The Finnish Cultural Center of Fitchburg State College will hold an organizational meeting Sunday, April 6 to awaken Finnish-American interest and participation in local and national bicentennial celebrations.

Walter Nisula of 368 Franklin St., South Quincy, a member of the Uljas Koitto ["Noble Endeavor"], Temperance Society, said more than 1,000 Finnish-Americans now live in Quincy. Some 40 years ago, he said, Quincy's Finnish population exceeded 2,000.

The U. K. Temperance Society was formed in Quincy in 1890 and now has a membership of 80 South Shore Finnish-Americans.

A temporary steering committee will conduct the April organizational meeting. Individuals and representatives of organizations are welcome to attend.

Nisula also noted that two Quincy churches used to bear Finnish names. The West Quincy Congregational Church on Bickley St., was formerly the Finnish Congregational Church.

And Faith Lutheran Church, formerly Trinity Lutheran Church, used to be the Finnish Evangelist Lutheran Church.

Mary McCarthy Art Winner

rehash the budget, making additional cuts where possible. "Everything we can cut, we are cutting," said Hannon. "We had to make tough decisions to come up with a decent tax rate." Several areas slated for the budgeting axe include part-time personnel, overtime and job vacancies.

Grindlay noted that all department heads will be required to maintain an expense budget equivalent to last year's, thus forcing programs of economy. He said Hannon plans to hold firm to a "no capital outlay" policy during these economically shaky times.

Grindlay also said the city has used its Emergency and Deficiency Fund E & D "very prudently" this year by drawing all city employee raises from this surplus fund. He said the city hopes to build "a sizeable E & D Fund" for the coming fiscal year by collecting back taxes, water bills and hospital receipts.

City Seeks Return Of Merrymount Park

to them, but a large site of great importance and significance in an urban area where land of this type for public use is almost extinct."

In correspondence two years ago, Col. Virgil H. Williams, executive officer of the Army Reserve in Washington, D.C., told Congressman James A. Burke that training area was available at Hingham but that no additional facilities could be used at that time.

Koch noted the present availability of the South Boston Naval Facilities, suggesting the transfer of the entire 187th Infantry Brigade out of Merrymount Park and into South Boston or Hingham.

Koch also suggested the transfer of the present National Guard Army site on Hancock St. to another armory site, making the building available for use by the 187th Reserve Unit.

Citing Quincy's rich heritage as a city of presidents, and noting the upcoming Bicentennial celebration, Koch said the return of the 6.6 acres of land would be most appropriate at this time.

In a letter to Congressman Burke, Koch said:

"This request is certainly not to be interpreted as a negative approach. Agencies or persons seeking this land are not against the Army, the 187th, or its personnel; in fact, the Reserve Center officers and staff have always been most cordial and cooperative."

"The approach is a positive one," he continued. "It is a question of the need for this 6.6 acres for use of the citizens of Quincy, the original purpose of the deed from the Adams family."

The Park and Recreation Board said the relocation of the reserve center could open Merrymount Park as a recreational area to include beautified areas, beaches, conference rooms for coaches, teams or civic groups, archery, tennis and basketball courts, arts and crafts rooms, and a small outdoor swimming pool for the retarded children at Happy Acres Day Camp.

increased an average of 20 each year. By 1970, the total had reached 1,166.

A drop of 47 marriages brought the 1971 yearly total to 1,119. The next year, the total number of marriages performed increased by 51 but dropped by the same number the following year.

One can only guess the reasons for this slowdown in marriages. Perhaps young couples are waiting to become more financially secure before marrying. Perhaps they realize that "two cannot live as cheaply as one."

Other reasons for the decline in marriages could be social ones. Some young couples, may opt to live together, contending they are testing their love for each other before making a life-long commitment. Others may live together for reasons purely rebellious or fadish.

Those who ARE marrying are now choosing the month of September to tie the knot just as often as the traditional boom month of June.

June is still an ever-popular month for marrying, yet September is challenging its reputation as the month for brides. For instance, in 1964 a total of 76 of the year's 945 marriages took place in September. But 104 of last year's 984 marriages took place in September. In 1962 there were 108 September marriages versus 133 in 1972. The year 1963 saw 106 September weddings while 1973 saw 131.

But June is still as strong as ever. A total of 394 June weddings took place in 1962 through 1964. And a total of 416 June marriages took place in 1972.

Community Food Co-op Re-established

The Quincy Community Food Co-op has been re-established through the joint efforts of Quincy residents and the South-West Community Center staff.

By combining many household food orders into one large order, food can be purchased at wholesale prices.

The Co-op now purchases fresh fruits, vegetables, eggs, meats, breads and - later in the month - cold cuts. Food items will be offered at 10 per cent

Membership in the Food Co-op is open to anyone regardless of income or geographic location. Initial membership fee is $2. Additional charges would be discussed and voted upon by Co-op members.

Being a co-operative venture, each participating household is required to perform one of the jobs listed on a task sheet.

Members can place their orders on Tuesdays at the Center from 2-8 p.m. The Center is located at 372 Granite St.

Payment for food orders may be made in the form of cash, check or food stamps. Food stamp users must pick up their orders on Thursdays between 4 and 8 p.m.

When ordering, members must sign the job list. Members must also bring with them grocery bags or boxes in which to carry away their orders.

Rotary Club and of the Elks. Villone said he felt retirement "was in order" after reaching the age of 65.

"I want to spend more time with my wife," he said. "I'd like to catch up on reading, do some shopping and a bit of travelling. We'll go wherever the fancy takes us."

In announcing his planned retirement to Mayor Walter J. Hannon, Villone wrote: "I am retiring after nearly 27 years of service with the City with the full satisfaction that I performed my duties to the best of my abilities."

A dinner in honor of Villone will be held Thursday, April 24 at the Morrisette Legion Post, 54 Miller St.

Quinn To Seek 10th Council Team

By HENRY BOSWORTH

There may be two City Council at-large seats open in this fall's election but one of them will not be John Quinn's.

Quinn, now in his early 50's, is the "dean" of the City Council with the longest stretch of service.

He will be completing his 18th year in the council this year—all in that same at-large seat he isn't ready to vacate.

There had been a few rumors he might be in line for an appointment that would make it impossible for him to serve in the council, too.

But, apparently there's nothing to that speculation.

"I'm definitely a candidate for re-election," says Quinn.

SPEAKING OF THE City Council at-large picture we may have a bonnet in that ring this year. Sabina Stenberg, the beauty salon operator and former model who is active in many charitable-civic causes is "giving it a lot of thought."

The fair sex hasn't been represented in the City Council since Mrs. Edna Austin retired undefeated in the late 1950's. And she is the only woman ever to serve in the City Council since Quincy became a city in 1888.

DEAN NICASTRO, meanwhile, is doing a bit of mental wrestling: he's trying to decide whether to run for a City Council at-large or School Committee seat.

And, there are those, trying to convince him to seek the Ward 2 Council seat being vacated by Clifford Marshall to devote full time to his new duties as Norfolk County sheriff.

Nicastro is probably leaning toward the School Committee race where there will be two vacant seats. [Harold Davis, Daniel Raymond, both running for the council] and where he made an impressive run four years ago.

Nicastro finished sixth in a 23-man race in the primary that year and sixth in the final. But he carried Ward 2 and old Ward 3.

He thus would be a tough opponent for Raymond who is running for the Ward 2 council seat if he yielded to those who want him to get into that one.

But it would seem that the school committee race would be the more logical place for him. But you can never tell.

Nicastro, a Harvard College and Harvard Law School grad. is now an attorney.

THIS SEEMS TO be the year for political candidates to "keep 'em guessing". Add Michael Peatridge to the list. He has bumper stickers out that say simply: "Peatridge". Which means he could be running for anything—including mayor. Insiders say, however, he's going for the Ward 5 council seat.

TEENAGERS seem to be doing a lot better than their parents did in "The Battle of Nicotine". The Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association reports a national survey shows that only 15.8 per cent of teenagers are regular smokers. Some of the other findings:

- 77 per cent think cigarette smoke is a form of air pollution.
- 87 per cent feel smoking harms teenagers.
- 72 per cent disagree that low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes are safe.
- 56 per cent are bothered because many adults can't stop smoking.

PAST PRESIDENT George Reardon stole the show at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce dinner dance recently at The Lantana. Instead of making the traditional past president's speech, Reardon sang his own lyrics to "My Way". Went like this:

And now past president, and so I've faced the final curtain Meetings every day, as dawn was breaking of this I'm certain My business suffered heavy toll, as I travelled South Shore's highways,

Yet, I believed it heart and soul—I did it my way. We dreamed, and then we planned, to organize the towns and city.

To tape executive strength that lay so dormant—'t was a pity. The polls began to fear us like threat of nuclear fission. Ah, yes, the State House soon learned well our mission. Yet there were times the negatives demanded more than they'd give.

But through it all the staff stood fast; directors backed us to the last.

We faced it all and stood so tall and did it our way. And now you hear and feel a tortuous trembling ground. Each town and Quincy dear is organizing its own Council. To think we did it all, but just like Eric not in a shy way. The membership began to grow—we did it our way.

For what's a chamber—what's it mean as our economy splits a seam

To band together, spite the times to unravel government rhymes And in the end—we do not bend—we do it OUR WAY.

Current President William Kelley presented Reardon with a handsome caricature done by Bill Robertson and the crowd gave him a standing ovation. [Sinatra never did it better.]

1975 Outlook Good

Quincy Center Business 'Thriving'

Business in Quincy is thriving according to a recent survey conducted by the Downtown Development Office.

Although businesses are generally experiencing a period of recession, 80 percent of 10 Quincy Center retail stores questioned, indicated a hopeful economic outlook for 1975. This was based in many cases to a rise in sales during the 1974 Christmas season as compared to previous seasons, or to strong consumer interest for marked down items the following month.

"Sears experienced its largest sales volume year in its history in Quincy during 1974," said William Woskie, former manager of the Quincy store. "We also had the finest percentage of profit increase of all the Boston area stores during this past Christmas season."

The 10 stores participating in the survey in addition to Sears, included Remicks of Quincy, Barker's Stationery, Boston Organ & Piano, Montilio's, Thom McAn Shoe, Singer Company, Fanny Farmer, Cummings and W. T. Grant Company.

According to Harvey L. Towim, Director of the Downtown Development office, the uniqueness of Quincy is a factor which facilitates successful businesses.

"The ratio of municipal parking spaces to square feet of retail space is far greater than other city shopping areas," he said.

"The downtown offers a wide range of services from schools and historic sites to government buildings and libraries. These services in addition to the range of consumer needs fulfilled by the variety of stores make Quincy Center a very convenient place, attracting many people."

Public transportation is another factor which attracts customers, he said. A rapid transit system, which is soon to be expanded further south, connects the downtown business section with the major metropolitan area of Boston.

Expansion to a better location in the downtown area was one factor which significantly improved the economic outlook for one store in the survey. Barker's Stationery recently expanded and increased 1974 Christmas profits "approximately 150 per cent over December 1973."

"I'm very optimistic over the capabilities of the business in our new location, said Richard Barker, owner and manager of the store. "We have a great future here."

Remick's of Quincy saw a stable 1974 with an increase in sales keeping pace with inflation.

"During January, however, our sales were quite strong greatly surpassing the inflation factor," said Frank Remick, owner of the store.

Montilio's, a bakery with another store in Cohasset and one to open soon in Boston, found that their Quincy store showed greater sales growth. Their sales volume this past year in Quincy during December was 20 percent greater than sales the previous year.

W. T. Grant recently announced that their Quincy store will remain open although many of their other stores are closing because of poor sales.

According to Charles Ryder, manager of the Quincy store, their best year was 1974.

"We've been in Quincy for the past 20 years and we plan to stay at least another 20," he said.

Other factors which contributed to the success of these businesses include increased advertising, in addition to a growing trend to make physical improvements, both in terms of exterior remodeling and interior customer areas. A significant number of business people have already improved their stores or property, and many others have indicated an interest in participating in the Quincy Center Improvement Program, Towim said.

Sears has invested over $300,000 in capital improvements over the last two years with the anticipation of an additional $40,000 in 1975.

"This included investments in computer equipment, fixtures and other interior improvements," said Woskie.

Hannon Declines Comment On Central 'Fire Trap' Criticism

Mayor Walter Hannon was expected to present a preliminary report on the structural soundness of Central Junior High School to the School Committee Wednesday night.

Hannon declined to release the report Tuesday pending review by both Building Inspector Allan MacDonald and Fire Chief Edward Barry.

The report will include an assessment of Central's heating, wiring, ventilation, plumbing and structural soundness.

Hannon indicated he wants both MacDonald and Barry to inspect Central Junior High School to make their own assessments.

Last week Mayor Hannon told The Quincy Sun that the city might be forced to spend "hundreds of thousands of dollars" to modernize Central Junior High School which he called a "fire trap".

The school's certificate of occupancy expires Oct. 18, 1977.

Earlier this week, several city councillors criticized Hannon's comments on Central, accusing him of trying to force the council to approve a new North Quincy High School. Hannon declined to comment on the councillors' reaction.

Criticism came from eight of the nine council members: Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin and Councillors John J. Quinn, Joseph LaRaia, an announced candidate for mayor, Warren Powers, Leo Kelly, John Lydon, James Sheets and Dennis Harrington. Clifford Marshall made no comment.

Hannon Asks N. Q. Residents To Suggest Sub-Police Station Site

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has written to residents of Vane St., North Quincy, asking for their suggestions and comments on locating a sub-police station in their area of the city.

Due to the non-availability of buildings for such a facility, Hannon said in his letter, he has been in contact with the Office of Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to acquire house trailers to place in the Vane St. parking area.

The trailers, he said, can be acquired at no cost to the city, and would be of a temporary nature until other available space could be acquired. They would be manned from 8 a.m. to midnight, seven days a week.

Recent plans to locate the police facility in a storefront on Billings Rd created problems with leasing, so other sites have to be considered, he said.

However, when that site was first suggested, Billings Road residents responded very favorably to having a sub police station in their neighborhood, he said.

The sub police station in North Quincy is one of a number of programs being implemented in cooperation with the Quincy Police Department to bring police protection closer to the residents, the Mayor said.

"We are especially concerned with the rising number of incidences of vandalism and burglary, not only in North Quincy, but in other areas of our city," Hannon said. "As a result, foot patrols with policemen 'walking the beat' are now being deployed throughout all our neighborhoods to stop crime before it starts.

"In addition, we are seeking citizen support and participation, in such programs as the Neighborhood Watch Program and the Radio Alert Program."

Lydton Proposes Routes For Trucks, Commercial Vehicles

City Councillor John J. Lydton has requested the establishment of truck and commercial vehicle routes in Quincy to channel such traffic out of residential neighborhoods.

In a letter to Planning Director Geoffrey Davidson, Lydton said many Quincy-bound trucks exiting from the Southeast Expressway use side streets to avoid traffic lights and traffic congestion, especially on Newport Ave., the Upland Rd. extension and on Hancock St.

Urging the cooperation of the Planning Department and the state Department of Public Works, Lydton said development of truck and commercial routes would "reduce traffic and noise in residential areas...and reduce heavy carbon monoxide fumes...emitted from trucks."

Served 57 Years At Hospital

Over 300 In Tribute To Constance Lundy, Margaret Godfrey

More than 300 well-wishers attended a dual retirement banquet Friday in honor of two Quincy City Hospital nurses who have devoted over 57 years of service to Quincy.

Assistant Hospital Director Miss Constance Lundy, member of the hospital staff for 35 years, will retire Friday, and Chief Admitting Officer Mrs. Margaret Godfrey, a staff member more than 22 years, will retire one week later, Friday, April 4.

During the banquet, both Miss Lundy and Mrs. Godfrey received an engraved silver pitcher from the medical staff at the hospital, a plaque from Mayor Walter J. Hannon and a cash gift. Miss Lundy plans to donate her gift to establish in-service education for non-professional personnel.

Both women also received a bouquet of red roses and an orchid corsage.

Relatives, friends, members of the hospital staff and city officials attended the event, held at the Sons of Italy Social Center.

Accordianist Mabel Biagini provided entertainment.

The two women were also to be honored at a two-hour afternoon tea Wednesday in the hospital cafeteria.

Miss Lundy, a life-time Wollaston resident, graduated from Quincy City Hospital School of Nursing in 1935 and then joined the hospital's nursing staff. Before enlisting in the Army Nurse Corps in 1943, Miss Lundy served as night supervisor of the hospital as well as charge nurse on a private floor.

During her five-year stay in the Army Nurse Corps, Miss Lundy achieved the rank of captain. She returned to Quincy City Hospital in 1948 as an admitting officer. In one year she became chief of that department and served in that capacity for 12 years.

In 1961 she left the admitting office to serve as assistant director of the hospital. She has remained in that office 14 years.

Succeeding Miss Lundy as chief admitting officer was Mrs. Godfrey. A 1937 graduate of Quincy City Hospital, Mrs. Godfrey worked as a surgical nurse until she married Albert Godfrey in 1939. Godfrey is a retired Quincy firefighter.

While raising a family of three - Thomas, Paul and Patricia - Mrs. Godfrey worked part-time as a staff nurse. In 1955, Mrs. Godfrey returned to the hospital on a full-time basis, serving in the admitting office. Six years later, she became chief admitting officer, a position she has held 20 years.

A resident of Quincy since the age of 10, Mrs. Godfrey and her husband moved to Plymouth two years ago. Her children and four grandsons all live in Quincy.

Miss Lundy, still a Wollaston resident, lives on Beale St. with her 96-year-old mother and her brothers Frank and Robert. She also has a brother William in North Dartmouth and two sisters, Mary of Quincy and Lucille Lundy Lagerloef of Greenwich, Conn.

Both women expressed mixed emotions about retiring from Quincy City Hospital.

"I know I'm going to miss it," said Miss Lundy. "But there are so many things I've wanted to do and haven't done... I want to work in my garden. I've never had enough time to devote to my garden. And I want to be more free to travel."

Leaving her job with dual emotions, Mrs. Godfrey said: "I'm looking forward to retiring but I've always enjoyed my work here very much. I've been very happy here."

Travel plans for Mrs. Godfrey include Florida during the winter months, while Miss Lundy is planning a summer trip to the Caribbean.

Passover

8-Day Festival

Passover Marks Exodus And Liberation For Jewish People

By LESTER GLASSER

a new life.

The eight-day festival of Passover began at sundown Wednesday marking the biblical Exodus from Egypt and emancipation of the Jewish people.

Services are being held during the eight-day period at Quincy's three synagogues in very much the same way as throughout the world.

At Temple Beth El, 1001 Hancock St., services are being conducted by Rabbi David J. Jacobson and Cantor Morris Sepjagan - Wednesday and Thursday evenings, at 6:30 p.m.; Thursday and Friday mornings at 9:15. Concluding day services will be held Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, April 1-2 at 6:30 and Wednesday and Thursday mornings April 2-3 at 9:15, with special Yizkor memorial prayers on Thursday morning at 11.

At Beth Israel Synagogue, 33 Grafton St., Rabbi Jacob Mann is conducting the services, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, at 6:45; Thursday and Friday mornings at 9 a.m. Tuesday and Wednesday evenings April 1-2 at 6:30; Wednesday morning April 2 at 9 a.m. Thursday morning, April 3, there will be two services one at 6:45 a.m., and the other at 9. The Yizkor will be recited during both services.

At Congregation Adas Shalom, 435 Adams St., service are being conducted by Rabbi Samuel Kenner and Cantor Tevele Ring - Wednesday and Thursday evenings at 6:15; Thursday and Friday mornings at 9. Services for the last two days of Passover will be held Wednesday and Thursday mornings April 2-3 also at 9 a.m., with Yizkor April 3 at 9 a.m.

To find the beginnings of the story of Passover [Pesah, in Hebrew] one must travel back thousands of years to the land of Egypt. The Book of Exodus tells how the Jews were enslaved by a heartless Pharaoh. Taking pity on His people, God chose Moses to lead the Jews out of slavery.

First Moses implored the Pharaoh to let the Jews worship the Lord in freedom. But Pharaoh refused. The Lord then sent one plague after another upon the Egyptians until they reluctantly allowed the Hebrews to leave. He then commanded the Red Sea to open so that Hebrew slaves might escape the pursuing Egyptians and go on to land, the thankful Jews offered up praise to God for their deliverance. Having tasted the bitterness of slavery, they thrilled at the challenge of liberty. So important is the emancipation story, that the whole Passover ceremony is built around it.

On Passover eve, the entire family gathers at the dinner table for the traditional Seder. Both a meal and a worship service, the Seder is celebrated with prayers, songs and blessings performed in a given order. In fact, Seder, is the Hebrew word for "order".

Every member of the family, no matter where he may live, tries to be home for this important occasion. Almost always, there are guests at the table, for it is a custom to share the blessings of the holiday with friends, neighbors and even strangers who are unable to get to their own home.

Among Orthodox and Conservative Jews, the Seder is held on both the first and second nights - this year Wednesday and Thursday - of the eight-day holiday. Reform Jews, who observe a seven-day Passover, usually hold their own Seder on the first evening.

Many synagogues now also conduct a Seder for their entire congregation. The appointed order for the Seder ceremonies is contained in the Haggadah, an ancient book whose oldest portions date back at least 2,500 years. Haggadah itself is the Hebrew word for "telling", and the Passover service is based on the Biblical injunction: "Thou shalt tell thy son in that day saying: 'It is because of that which the Lord did for me when I came forth out of Egypt.'" [Exodus 13:8].

The Seder is a meal as well as a religious service, and very special foods adorn the table. Arranged on a platter are: matzoh-wafers of unleavened bread; maror-bitter herbs; haroseth - a mixture of chopped apples, nuts, cinnamon and wine; the shank bone of a lamb; a roasted egg; parsley and watercress. Each of these foods has a particular significance to the Jewish people, reminding them of some event, sweet or bitter, in their deliverance from slavery. As in most Jewish ceremonies, wine is a part of the ritual, and a cup of sweet wine is placed at each setting.

Life styles change. Traditions and customs change. So does funeral service. Today, no two funerals are alike, because no two families are alike. Today a competent funeral director must provide a broader spectrum of services than ever before.

funeral service isn't what it used to be

It's a challenge. Funeral directors affiliated with National Selected Morticians meet this challenge with a wide selection in a broad range of prices so each family may choose what best meets its needs. As members of NSM in this area, we helped bring it about. We believe in matching the service to the need. It helps make us someone to count on, every time.

Father Cut Shoes For TR

Mrs. Minna Holmes Honored On 97th Birthday

Mrs. Minna M. Holmes of Wollaston, whose father cut shoes for Theodore Roosevelt, celebrated her 97th birthday last Saturday.

The Elmwood Nursing Home, 210 Arlington St., where she now lives, honored her with a festive party Friday afternoon, and her family joined her Saturday as she received a special birthday greeting from Congressman James Burke, the Rose of Remembrance from Roy's Flowers, a special announcement from WJDA radio, cards, gifts, flowers, and many visitors.

Mrs. Holmes was born in Marlboro, but moved to Salem, as a young girl. Several years later her family moved to Brockton, remained there for three years and then to Roxbury, where she graduated from high school.

Mrs. Holmes was an excellent English student and her other interests were in music and art. January 1897, after her high school graduation, her family moved to Wollaston.

Mrs. Holmes' father, Frank Brown Smith, was considered a fine shoe cutter, and much of his life was associated with Norman & Bennett Co., a specialty shoe company in Boston. Mr. Smith cut shoes for Theodore Roosevelt when he went to San Juan. He also had regular customers for sport shoes in the Philippines, and made actresses costume shoes.

Shortly after her family's move to Wollaston, she married George Adlington Holmes of Brockton, June 30, 1897. She was married at her home on North Central Ave., then traveled for four years with her husband for the International Correspondence School Courses. They returned to Wollaston from their lengthy "honeymoon".

Their two children are Mrs. John Q. Adams, presently of Boston, and Mrs. James W. Y. Smith, of Wollaston. The family joined the Wollaston Unitarian Church where both parents were active for years.

Mrs. Holmes belonged to the Women's Alliance, was an early member of the Wollaston Women's Club, and was also a member of the Eventide Auxiliary for a number of years. She was made a Life Member of the Unitarian Sunday School Society in gratitude for her years of service as a Sunday School teacher.

Fenno House Residents Make Historic Quincy Quilt

As part of a Bicentennial project sponsored by Quincy Heritage, senior citizens from the Fenno House, 540 Hancock St., have for the past three months worked on a quilt depicting four historic sites of Quincy.

Each picture on the quilt was handpainted and then glued on to a blue background. In the center is the City Seal surrounded by two flags, one with 13 stars, and the other 50, the Old Court House, the First Parish Church, and the Adams' Birthplaces.

Twenty senior citizens worked an estimated 1,060 hours on the Quincy Quilt during the months of January, February, and March. Each participant worked on a segment of the quilt, while Percy MacLean and Mrs. Betty Pickles did the painting.

Others from the Fenno House who worked on the quilt were: Mrs. Mary MacLean, Mrs. Clara Bauer, Mrs. Angla Brady, Mrs. Doris Coull, Mrs. Helen Ciampa, Mrs. Lottie Slater, Mrs. Grace Evans, Mrs. Alice Doherty, Mrs. Rose Baldassari, Mrs. Mary Hannaway, Mrs. Minna Wallace, Mrs. Irene Linholm, Mrs. Ursula Namulla, Miss Helen Parker, Mrs. Jean Bauer and Mrs. Mary Carr.

The Quincy Quilt will be donated to the Quincy Historical Society at the Adams Academy. Accepting the quilt on behalf of the society Monday was H. Hobart Holly, president of the Quincy Historical Society.

BI-CENTENNIAL QUILT made by Fenno House residents will be housed in the Quincy Historical Society museum. From left, Mrs. Betty Pickles, one of two painters of the historic sites; Doris Oberg, Quincy Historical Society Librarian, accepting the quilt on behalf of that organization; Mrs. Grace Evans, who worked on the quilt; Rev. Talented Husband-Wife Team Gena Rowlands, John Cassavetes, And Little Old Oscar, Too?

By ROBERT J. DONOVAN
Quincy Sun Writer

By all rights, Gena Rowlands and John Cassavetes should be pretty pleased with themselves right now.

Aside from being husband and wife, the pair have been nominated for Academy Awards this year as Best Actress and Best Director, for their work in "A Woman Under the Influence", now playing at Boston's Cinema 57.

Passing through Boston on an extensive personal appearance tour, the Cassavetes met with the press at the Ritz-Carlton.

In "A Woman Under the Influence", Gena Rowlands plays Mabel Longhetti, a scatterbrain one would never refer to as being chic. In contrast, Miss Rowlands is a slender, fashionable blonde with a warm smile and green eyes. She has shared the marquee with such names as Edward G. Robinson, Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas, Judy Garland and Frank Sinatra.

Having recently won a Golden Globe Award from the Hollywood Foreign Press Association for her performance in "Woman", Miss Rowlands was asked how she has been accepting the praise and applause.

"I think it's terrific," she said laughing. She explained, "We're only human. Ultimately, if you can reach somebody, it is satisfying."

That, in essence, is what the talented team is after. Communication of an idea, thought or emotion.

Cassavetes reinforced his wife's feelings, saying, "A rip-off film is geared to be successful whether it's good or not. There are other people who will work for two years on a film knowing that they will say something with this great opportunity we have to affect you. We want to extend ourselves to the fullest so that when you see a film, you say 'not bad.'"

Husband and wife have worked as actress and director before. The relationship could be looked upon as being difficult, but Miss Rowlands is quick to point out the advantages.

"A man who loves you knows areas of you that nobody else could. He knows the variations of your disposition and can use it to bring you further in a role. I trust John implicitly."

Cassavetes pointed out that when working with his wife, or with a close friend, such as Peter Falk, who also stars in "Woman", he plays no favorites. All the actors are equally important to him.

"We're a team," he said. "Directors and actors are diametrically opposed. But I respect actors who are temperamental. It's a significant sign that they care."

In "A Woman Under the Influence" Gena Rowlands plays a workingman's housewife. In a painfully realistic love story, a husband (Peter Falk) finds that he cannot restrain his uncontrollable wife. He never knows what to expect from her. While totally devoted to her, he realizes that he is dealing with a potential time bomb. Eventually he is faced with the prospect of committing her.

As Mabel Longhetti, Miss Rowlands walks that fine line between sanity and insanity, sometimes appearing much wiser than her peers, and other times appearing pitifully lost in a threatening world that is tightening around her. Her performance is frighteningly real.

But the film is not without humor. Both Rowlands and Falk bring a warmth to their characters. The unpredictable Mabel is often kookie in a loveable way. She says what she wants and does as she pleases, often with comic results.

Still, the film is not a light-hearted romp either. It is a serious story of a husband and wife, and their three children, who together cope with, and ultimately survive, a torturous crisis.

Even though we are presented with a modified happily-ever-after ending, we realize that life does not come easily for the couple. They must both work at it to achieve success. And helping them along is a binding love that defies condemnation and defeat.

Cassavetes said, "I wanted to make a love story, but not in the conventional romantic sense. The hardest way to stay in love is when times are tough. I have always been interested in husband-wife relationships and wanted to show emotionally how difficult it is to love."

A screenwriter as well as a respected director and actor, Cassavetes has, in the past, created a number of film roles for his wife to play.

"John has written several good roles for me," Miss Rowlands said. "I'm really in a unique position for an actress. My other actress friends would like to put their hands around my throat and squeeze."

She added that she sees Mabel Longhetti "not as a woman going crazy, but as a woman trying to find her sanity."

Selectivity in choosing roles was also mentioned to Miss Rowlands, who replied, "If you wait for the really good roles, you'll wind up playing in no more than five films in your lifetime. You try to find the roles that interest you. You may have to wait an awfully long time for 'just the right role'. You can wind up losing that thing that makes you want to express yourself."

The later afternoon get-together ended on a light note when Cassavetes was asked to explain, from a director's viewpoint, the difference between an actor and a performer. He replied that one usually thinks of singers and so on as performers, but chalked the difference up to a distinction in terms.

"Both can be equally good," he said. Referring to television's bald detective, "Kojak", he added, "I don't know about dramatic actors singing, but Telly [Savallas] makes me giggle."

As the Cassavetes' left, they mentioned that their next project will be a historical drama involving a woman. But who knows, their next appearance may just be on television the night of the Oscars when the presenter asks for The Envelope before announcing, "And the winner is..."

Ellington concerts bare his essence

By ROBIN WELLES
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Duke Ellington's Third Sacred Concert, "The Majesty of God," as performed in Westminster Abbey is an appropriate memorial to the great musician.

Ellington's last Grand Tour began with the premiere of his third and final sacred concert in Westminster Abbey Oct. 24, 1973, precisely six months before his death.

The album is much more than the brilliant music you hear. It's a statement of Ellington's philosophy, the essence of the man.

Despite the acoustical problems which must have been presented by the vast reaches of Westminster Abbey, the RCA stereo album is clear and crisp. Ellington considered his sacred concerts his most important work because they gave him an opportunity to serve as the Lord's "messenger boy."

The message received from such memorable selections as "Every Man Prays in His Own Language," "Is God a Three-Letter Word for Love?" and "Hallelujah" is moving indeed.

Bert Kaempfert paints some lush musical portraits in a new "gallery" LP for MCA.

The album contains still another version of "The Entertainer" from the movie hit "The Sting." Kaempfert startles the ear by doing it without piano, instead using clarinets in Dixieland fashion — and Joplin's masterpiece benefits from the treatment.

Other highlights of the album: "Look Me Up in New York Town," a bouncy little thing that Kaempfert had a hand in writing; "My Blue Heaven," which goes way back; and "San Francisco," which will bring a smile to anyone who's been there.

If you want to sit down to a pleasant interlude of old favorites — "Mona Lisa," "The Gypsy," "The Wayward Wind," "Secret Love" — sung with easy grace and relaxed style, put on "You Send Me," Sam Cooke's latest offering on the RCA-Camden label.

Bobby Womack's army of admirers will be happy to know about his latest album, "Bobby Womack's Greatest Hits" on the United Artists label. They're all here — "Sweet Caroline," "The Preacher," "Fly Me to the Moon," "You're Welcome, Stop on By" and more, all done in Bobby's distinctive style.

Paul Williams' versatile talents are evident in the original soundtrack recording of "Phantom of the Paradise" (A&M Records) — not only did he write all the songs for the film, his band cut the tracks and on top of that, he stars in the movie.

Patricia Laretto Has 'Painting Of The Month'

The "Painting of the Month" now on display at the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy is a watercolor entitled "Anchorage" by Mrs. Patricia Laretto of Avon. Mrs. Laretto is studying with Ronald Brake of Dorchester, past president of the Milton Art Association.

She's Quite Serious

Watch Out If Mary Applies For Boys Basketball Or Baseball Job

By TOM SULLIVAN

Mary Pratt, probably the finest all-around women's athlete ever produced in Quincy and one of the best in New England, is giving sportswriters plenty to write about these days.

Mary surprised Athletic Coordinator Carl Leone by applying for the job of North Quincy High football coach, a position recently vacated by the resignation of Ralph Frazier.

There are many who scoff at Mary's application, saying it is a publicity stunt, but don't you believe it.

We have known Mary for too many years to believe that. We know she is serious about it and, although there apparently is little chance of her being appointed, watch out if she ever applies for coach of the Quincy or North Quincy boys' basketball or baseball teams.

Mary admittedly was upset that she was leaked out, but said, "I feel I have the same qualifications men have coaching girls' field hockey here in the Quincy schools. I've never coached football but I know a lot about the game and it wouldn't bother me to coach 40 boys. After all, I've taught them for 30 years."

It is understandable that Frazier would be a bit resentful at first.

"I've been in the sport for 23 years. How many years has she spent in football? The other candidates for the job [about 40 others] have 25 or 30 years of experience." We know that at least one applicant has been a coach, either head and assistant, for 30 years.

"Mary will receive a fair and impartial interview," Leone promised. "She is a very competent person with a tremendous background, but I don't believe it includes football. But if any woman could do the job, Mary would be at the head of the list."

Mary, incidentally, applied for Leone's job when it opened up.

Mary first began to make a name in sports while a student at North Quincy High, from where she graduated in 1936.

For the next four years she attended Sargent's College [Boston University's physical education college for women] and played nine different sports. She received the highest award from that school when named the top athlete upon graduation.

She then played for the top softball team in New England, the Boston Olympets, being an outstanding pitcher and was referred to as "Lefty". She also gained nationwide recognition when she played with the All-American Women's Baseball League, playing out of the midwest.

In the late 40's, we referred to Mary as The South Shore's answer to Mildred [Babe] Didrikson Zaharias, who was regarded as the greatest woman athlete ever to live.

In 1947, while teaching physical education in the Quincy elementary schools, she organized the first girls' South Shore basketball league and the following year did the same in softball. In 1965 she was appointed assistant professor of physical education at Salem State College and remained there until she returned to the Quincy school system in 1968.

Mary was outstanding in all sports. She was just as exceptional in basketball and bowling as she was in softball and baseball. She could have played with any men's baseball or basketball team.

When girls' basketball was introduced in the Quincy junior high schools in the fall of 1973, Mary was named coach at Central and, as one might have expected, the "old pro" led both her varsity and junior varsity teams to the city championship. She also was the first coach of girls' softball at Quincy High when the sport was introduced a few years ago.

Mary says I'm no kook and am serious about this. I have my own ideas about how things should be done."

Most people say she hasn't the qualifications to be a football coach, which may be true. But we feel she is just as qualified as any man to coach a boys' baseball or basketball team and Leone and the screening committee would have to give her serious consideration if she ever applied for one of those jobs.

Bowling

Alley Kats Champs

The Alley Kats won the 20th annual South Shore Women's Candlepin Bowling Tournament Sunday at the Merymount Lanes by defeating the Women Merchants, 1500-1492.

Following the match, a trophy emblematic of the championship was presented to each member of the winning team by Dick Koch, tournament director, representing the sponsoring Koch Club, and a check for $50 was presented to Mal Nestor, Alley Kats captain.

The champions put it all together in the first string, bowling the tournament's high team single string of 555, to outscore the Merchants by 34 pins. The losers were trailing by 60 pins in the opening frame.

In the second string the Alley Kats hung on and saw the stubborn Merchants fight back to pick up 14 pins.

In the third string the losers tried valiantly to overtake the winners, but the Alley Kats paced themselves and picked up single pins when necessary to keep them out front.

The Alley Kats lost their top bowler last year with the death of Patricia Nestor, who for 16 years had led the team in tourney competition.

A trophy will be presented in her memory April 15 to the outstanding woman bowler in the 20 years of tourney competition.

The winner will be decided on the basis of outstanding bowling for at least 10 years and a consistent number of matches for each tournament.

The Alley Kats were paced by Roseanne Donahue's high three of 321 and were aided by a steady team performance of Mal Nestor, 294, and Joan Hamblin, 291.

Noreen Mastrolanni, with a 316, was high for the Merchants, followed by Bev Putnam, 310; Elaine Rozanski, 293; Edna Walker, 289, and Ellie Iacobucci, 284.

Individual tournament awards were won by Donahue, with a high tourney average of 107; Helen Riley of the Carlyle Community League of Whitman for high three of 355, and Doris Sunnerberg for high single of 134.

Montclair Regains Lead In Little Loop

The Montclair Men's Club regained first place on the basis of total pinfall in the Quincy Bowling Little Loop last Saturday by shutting out the School Comm. Hal Davis Club, 4-0. DA George Burke Club dropped three points to James R. McIntyre Club and is tied for the lead in points, while Granite Lodge 1451 IAM fell one point behind by splitting with Wollaston Bowldrome.

Jim McAllister of Atlantic and Paul O'Toole of Bryan Post rolled the weekly high three of 322, McAllister had high weekly single of 125 and Bryan Post the high team three for the season of 1406 and high single of 483.

Mike Regan leads the Top Ten with an average of 103.4, followed by McAllister, 100.36; Brian O'Toole, 98.3; John Andrews, 93.61; Joe Godas, 93.9; Paul O'Toole, 93.36; John Gullins, 92.57; Ken Brodie, 91.38; Jim Little, 89.54 and Paul Anastas, 89.51.

The team standings: Montclair, 48-30 [27,027]; Granite Lodge, 58-30 [27,646]; Burke Club, 57-31 [28,299]; McIntyre Club, 52-36 [27,822]; Bryan Post VFW, 51-37 [27,842]; Hennessy Plumbing Supply, 48-40 [27,378]; Rep. Joseph E. Brett Club, 47-41 [27,694]; Richard Morrissey Club, 45-43 [27,825]; Local 513, NEJB, AFL-CIO, 45-43 [27,395]; Wollaston Bowldrome, 43-45 [27,855]; Davis Club, 33-55 [26,984]; Hutchinson Oil, 32-56 [26,908]; Atlantic Fuel Oil, 32-56 [26,690]; Quincy Elks, 19-69 [26,765].

Saturday at 1 p.m. Quincy will host Keene, N.H., Rugby Club, at Faxon Field off Southern Artery.

Nearly 200 hardy fans braved a cold drizzle to watch Quincy roll to a 6-0 lead with less than five minutes to go in the match, only to have the determined Old Gold team come back in the last minute to tie it.

Lee Watkins was Quincy's outstanding player as he scored the go-ahead try [a rugby touchdown worth four points] on a fine broken-field run only moments after he had another try called back by a penalty. Co-Capt. Colen Riley kicked the two-point conversion and that was all the scoring until the Old Gold forwards fell on the ball in the Quincy end zone with less than a minute to play. The conversion was good and the game ended 6-6.

Playing outstanding games for Quincy were Steve Poore, one of the team's founders, and newly-elected co-captain Larry Munson.

Squad Small, Hopes High

North Trackmen Open Season Against Abp. Williams

The North Quincy track team opens its season Tuesday at Veterans Memorial Stadium with a non-league meet against Abp. Williams and Coach Lou Tozzi hopes his Raiders continue to show the progress made since last spring.

"We have returning veterans in most events but are a little concerned with the size of our squad," said Tozzi. "Last spring, my first year as head coach, we had a fine 11-4 record. We were fourth in the state meet last fall in cross country and this past winter set a new North record with nine wins, finishing 9-3-1 overall. We were undefeated in our last eight meets.

"So, we are looking mostly for boys with a positive attitude. We have our usual small group of 37 with only eight seniors but are very pleased with the turnout of sophomores. We feel our program here is catching on quite well."

North's strong area again will be in the distance runs with Junior Bart Petracca, one of the best ever at North Quincy, leading the way.

Tozzi expects Petracca, a superlative competitor to do 4:20 in the mile and 9:20 in the two-mile. Behind him are senior Artie Barrett, who has done 10:03 in the two-mile and holds the school's indoor record; junior Ken O'Brien, the most improved runner and a hard worker, and Ed Yee, co-captain and a three-year veteran. Marty Levenson, Ian Sheridan, Mike Morin and Bob Levenson, are four sophomores Tozzi feels are as good as any around.

North should also do well in the middle distances. Jerry MacKenzie, a sophomore, placed in the state meet 1000-yard run during the winter and Tozzi sees a possible 50 second quarter mile for the excellent prospect. Co-Capt. John Mackey is a very hard worker with a fine attitude, and senior Mark Canavan, one of the Raiders' best, has been injured but is a potential 1:48 half miler.

Rounding out the middle distance runners are sophomore Keith Lindberg, who has been impressive but needs experience; Junior Phil Maloney and sophs Dick Kennedy and Phil Strungis.

North should be fairly well off in the sprints and hurdles with a number of good prospects.

Co-Capt. Paul Doherty, called the team leader by Tozzi, has tremendous attitude; Paul O'Donnell is a three-year veteran; junior Mattie Constantino has good size and strength, junior Brian Doherty is an excellent athlete whom Tozzi uses where he needs help; junior Dave Lorman is a promising high hurdler, Chris Morton a good low hurdler, Dan Cuddy and Mattie King promising sophomores.

For the 440-relay Tozzi plans on Paul and Brian Doherty, Constantino and O'Donnell.

Mackey, MacKenzie and Canavan will be on the mile relay team with the fourth runner still to be selected.

Assistant Coach Brooks Maloff will be in charge of the field events and is not overly optimistic. He feels the Raiders will be strongest in the shot put and javelin.

In the javelin there are junior Pete Hemphill, who did 150 feet as a sophomore; junior Mike Nee, who has good size; Frank Strzuzala, a junior, and O'Donnell. Paul Doherty is expected to hit 48 feet in the shot and sophomore Harry Knudson has looked good in practice.

Discus prospects are fair with senior Jack Gallagher, who did 118 feet last year, expected to hit 130 feet. Constantino, Lorman and senior Jim Wisell round out this group.

North needs experience in the high jump with Canavan, Cuddy and junior Rich Mahoney, a basketball player with good potential, vying in this event.

The long jump, jump, triple jump and a new event for North, the pole vault, pose the biggest problems.

Junior Tom Butler, MacKenzie, King, Morton, Brian Doherty, Strungis, O'Brien and Maloney are all trying the long jump and triple jump, while Mackey and Beaver Bonoli hope to score some points in the pole vault.

Also trying for spots are Kevin Doyle, Jim Frye, John Greene, Mike Crevier, Ed Carll, Joe Gori, Steve Doherty, Tom Joyce and Chris Green.

"I feel the Suburban League is the strongest in Eastern Massachusetts, just as it is in winter track," Tozzi said. "Brockton and Weymouth South are perennial powers and I also have plenty of respect for Quincy, Newton, Rindge Tech and Weymouth North. We are going to have a tough time doing better than .500 even though we are much better than last year."

TWO OF 12 unemployed plumbers to be trained at Quincy Vocational Technical School as pipe welders under the Quincy CETA program get a few opening day tips. Under CETA Program

12 Unemployed Plumbers Being Trained As Pipe Welders

Classes began Monday in a pilot training program for 12 area unemployed plumbers and gas fitters, paid for by funds under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act [CETA].

The 250-hour, nine-week course at the Quincy Vocational-Technical School will lead to certification in pipe welding and is administered by the Quincy CETA office in cooperation with the Plymouth and Brockton CETA districts.

The course was developed as a result of new technology and building code changes which require pipe welding on plumbing in new construction projects. The key feature of the program, according to Timothy J. Reidy, Jr., Training Manager for the Quincy CETA office, is that for every plumber and gas fitter trained in welding, two, or three other plumbers will return to work.

"Construction on many projects is being delayed because of the lack of plumbers certified in pipe welding," Reidy noted.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon, present at the opening orientation for the trainees, said:

"I am proud that Quincy is once again in the fore front in innovative uses of CETA funds. The program is designed to put people to work, and when you can put three to work by training one, you're spending your money well."

Charles Ahl, business agent for Local 12, Plumbers and Gas Fitters, whose members comprise the class, commended the Quincy CETA staff for its efforts in implementing the program and said that unemployment in Local 12 is over 25 percent. "The unfortunate fact," he said, "is that almost all of them could return to work if one in three had pipe welding skills. This program and others like it could go a long way in turning us around."

Committee To Screen Applicants For HN Community Development Program

Mayor Walter J. Hannon announces the formation of a screening committee to interview applicants for the community development program soon to begin in Houghs Neck.

"We decided to establish a committee to ensure community involvement in the selection of a staff for this program," Hannon said.

Three residents from Houghs Neck will serve on the committee. They include Russell Sines, 1087 Sea St.; Lois Murphy, 135 Sea Ave.; and Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly.

Joseph P. Shea, Executive Secretary to the Mayor, and Geoffrey A. Davidson, Director of Planning and Community Development, will also serve on the committee.

The Mayor said recruitment of staff personnel will begin within the next few weeks.

Following screening and interviews, the committee will make their recommendations of staff personnel to the Mayor.

Houghs Neck was designated a community development area in a recent application for federal funds under the Housing and Community Development Act, 1974. As a community development area, Houghs Neck will receive a significant portion of Quincy's $983,000 share of federal funds for public works and home improvement programs.

"The formation of this committee is the first step in getting this program under way," Hannon said.

Predicts 'Several Hundred Thousand' To Be Cut

Quinn Says Budget To Be Put Through 'Wringer'

By HENRY BOSWORTH and MARY ANN DUGGAN

Councillor John Quinn predicts the council's Finance Committee will prune "at least several hundred thousand dollars" from Mayor Walter Hannon's proposed $69,512,937 city budget.

"We are really going to put it through the wringer," Quinn told The Quincy Sun. "With economic conditions the way they are, if there is an ounce of fat in it, it's coming out."

"This is a time for necessities only and no frills. We'll take at least several hundred thousand dollars out of it."

Quinn said the first session of the full-membership Finance Committee will be held Wednesday, April 9 at 7:30 p.m. in the City Council chamber. The public is invited to attend.

Hannon personally delivered the proposed budget-up $7,484,760 over last year's-to the City Council Monday evening. It was referred to the Finance Committee.

Hannon, who broke with tradition by personally presenting the six-pound, three-inch document called it "an austerity budget". He told the council:

"It is absolutely clear that the people of Quincy can't afford more taxes. The budget I'm presenting to you tonight fits the times in which we live. There are no frills. There is no fat. All extras are gone."

Four times during his speech, Hannon reiterated the point that the citizens of Quincy "simply can't pay more taxes." He urged members of the Council to review the budget carefully and to make additional cuts where they deemed necessary.

He warned, however: "But across the board reductions will result in the severe curtailment of services to the citizens. Again, if we work together, the citizens of the city will benefit."

Hannon noted that the extra 30 days granted by the state [Cont'd on Page 10]

'11th Hour Remark' Hannon Replies

LaRaia Charges 'Betrayal' On NQHS Landtaking Plan

Councillor Joseph LaRaia, voting in opposition Monday to home-taking for a proposed addition and renovations at North Quincy High School, accused school authorities of "betraying" the City Council.

An announced candidate for mayor, LaRaia said school officials committed two "violations of trust" by increasing the size of the proposed addition from 100,000 square feet to 150,000 square feet and by recommending the taking of nine homes at Oliver and Hunt Sts.

Characterizing LaRaia's remarks as "11th hour", Mayor Walter J. Hannon told The Quincy Sun:

"It's too bad Mr. LaRaia didn't come up with a better site suggestion, rather than waiting until the 11th hour. I don't remember Mr. LaRaia making any suggestions of where the addition could be built, given the state guidelines we were under.

Hannon also said LaRaia's accusation of "betrayal" by school authorities was "an unfortunate and unkind thing for him to say".

Supt. of Schools Dr. Lawrence Creedon declined to comment on LaRaia's remarks.

Creedon did say, however, that Architect Barry Colletti will now begin work on preliminary drawings for the site. Though Creedon said the city is a little behind on the strict timetable which must be followed to gain 65 per cent state reimbursement, he said the city could easily catch up.

Commenting on the Council's decision to take nine homes at the school site, Creedon said:

"No one is pleased about the taking of homes. But I feel it is the best solution we could come up with under the circumstances. And will move ahead with that solution."

LaRaia said the $12 million bond issue for an addition and renovations at North Quincy High School - passed by the Council in January - carried stipulations prohibiting both home-taking and site expansion exceeding 100,000 square feet.

Although the proposed site has been expanded to 150,000 square feet to meet state requirements, Dr. Creedon said only 103,000 square feet represents usable learning space. [Cont'd on Page 10]

Hey, Kids!

Color The Boy After Whom Quincy Was Named

Hey, kids, if you like to color don't miss next week's Quincy Sun.

In it will be a special coloring contest for elementary school youngsters in connection with Quincy's 350th anniversary.

The subject matter is Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy is named.

It is a drawing of him based on the only known portrait of him. It shows him as a boy.

So, the contest is: "Color The Boy Who Grew Up To Have Quincy Named After Him."

There are a lot of nice prizes including gift certificates, a $25 savings bond, radios, a dozen pizzas and two dozen cokes and even a jumbo sundae big enough for 10 hungry people to tackle.

The coloring contest is being held in cooperation with Quincy Heritage and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

In addition to the contest drawing and rules, next week's Quincy Sun will also have a special pull-out section about Quincy's birthday dinner and the many other activities planned for next Friday and Saturday.

Don't miss it or the coloring contest. There will be prizes for all elementary school grade levels. If you like to color, you'll love this.

Don't forget, it's all in the April 10th issue of The Quincy Sun.

How Quincy Delegation Voted On Drinking Law Repeal

By RON IACOBUCCI

STATE HOUSE -- On Tuesday the House of Representatives voted 131 to 92 to reconsider action taken against repeal of the 18 year old drinking law.

On this vote Reps. Joseph Brett, Thomas Brownell and William Delahunt voted for reconsideration, while Rep. Robert Cerasoli voted against.

This action saved the repeal bill, which has been referred to the Ways and Means Committee for further consideration.

Earlier Monday on the same measure, the full House voted 113 to 111 to defeat the effort to repeal the 18 year old drinking law.

The Quincy delegation was split on the issue with Reps. Delahunt and Brett voting for repeal and Reps. Brownell and Cerasoli voting against.

When asked why he voted against repeal, Cerasoli responded: "A person who is 18 can vote and enter into legal contract. In fact, 18 is the recognized age of majority, therefore, there is no reason why 18 year olds should not be responsible."

Mother Of Zany Paul Benedict

Quincy Woman No. 1 Fan, Critic Of TV's 'The Jeffersons'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

One of the most faithful fans and most discerning critics of the new TV series "The Jeffersons" lives in Quincy.

She is Mrs. Alma Benedict of 45 School St., mother of Paul Benedict, alias Harry Bentley, the zany, yet refined, white neighbor of the black Jefferson family.

The new series which started Jan. 18, is a spin-off of "All In The Family", where the Jefferson clan played the black neighbors of the famed Bunker family.

'You Are One Step Ahead Of Japan'

Japanese Educator Visits Quincy To View 'Progressive Movement'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Prof. Takahisa Ichimura, teacher of Western progressive education in Japan recently ended a three-week tour of American school systems all based on the tenets and spirit of Col. Francis W. Parker.

His journey rightly brought him to Quincy where Col. Parker reigned as the city's first and famed superintendent from 1875-1900.

Col. Parker introduced to the city a "Quincy Method" which he himself described as "a spirit of study...a system of everlasting change," which focused upon the possibilities of human growth through education.

Wary of the term "method", Col Parker warned:

"Those who seek for some special and peculiar method or device in the Quincy movement will never find it. Faith, ideal spirit, explain all that pertains to our success, whatever that success may be. The outcome was what may always be expected under similar circumstances - progressive movement."

It is that "progressive movement" which Prof. Takahisa Ichimura came to view firsthand in the U.S. and in Quincy.

A 12-year member of the faculty at Waseda University's School of Education in Japan, Prof. Ichimura is compiling data on the history of progressive education in the U.S., focusing on the development of the now-traditional 6-3-3 grade division within many American school systems: elementary, [grades 1-6], junior high, [grades 7-9], and high school, [grades 10-12].

Now involved in his 10th year of study of America's progressive education, Prof. Ichimura wanted to supplement his book research with firsthand observation. He visited both the Francis W. Parker School and the Lincoln-Hancock Community School. After his tour, Prof. Ichimura smilingly observed:

"I think you are one step ahead of us in Japan."

The professor's research - which he plans to publish in a book - also centers on the birth and development of the junior high school. Before coming to Quincy, he visited Ohio State University where he believes the first junior high was established.

The Professor also toured Harvard's School of Education and visited Boston Latin High School as well as school systems in Concord.

He visited New York, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Houston and Los Angeles before returning to his homeland.

"I was very happy to be able to be here in Quincy," said Prof. Ichimura, "especially since this year marks the centennial anniversary of Col. Parker and the Quincy movement."

Treated Sewage Discharge To Be Strictly Controlled

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will issue permits this week to the MDC and to Boston allowing strictly controlled discharge of treated sewage and storm water into Quincy and Dorchester Bays.

Councillor Dennis E. Harrington, chairman of the Committee on Environmental Control, and Leo J. Kelly, committee vice-chairman, said all discharges of raw sewage at Moon Island will be chlorinated at Boston's Calf Pasture Station from May to September, helping to reduce any bacterial health hazards existing in Dorchester Bay and affecting Quincy shores.

In addition, the city of Boston will be required to notify Quincy's health commissioner Dr. Alfred Mahoney when a discharge is planned, giving prior notice to bathers and boatsmen.

The councillors said this requirement could help prevent a recurrence of the Labor Day weekend incident when residents "awoke to find the waters and beaches of Quincy and Weymouth inundated with solid waste and brown scum."

Kelly noted the Nut Island permit has also been modified to require prior discharge notification. He said the EPA has also adopted his recommendation to pre-chlorinate all sewage discharged at outfall 004 located 50 yards off the right side of Nut Island.

In addition, Kelly said the MDC will be required to notify Dr. Mahoney of all discharge of raw sewage at outfall 004 during the months of May through September.

These permit modifications stemmed in part from a public hearing held Jan. 31 at the request of the committee on environmental control. The hearing postponed issuance of the permits and allowed local input regarding needed sewage controls.

The councillors said the MDC has been granted a one-year extension to conform to sludge disposal regulations. Commenting on the extension, Kelly said:

"This leaves little room for excuses should the MDC fail again in its duty to eliminate sewage sludge from Quincy Bay."

The sludge disposal line at Nut Island terminates off Long Island in Quincy Bay. An environmental impact study will be conducted during the next year.

Knit scraps make stuffed toys

Dear Mrs. Kinser:

I enjoy your articles so much. I have always sewed and I use scraps for everything, especially lovely quilts. Why not remind your readers that knit scraps make durable, yet washable stuffed toys? By using the small scraps and old nylons or panty hose for stuffing, we are using yet another waste material. I'm a recycle bug. The waistband cut off panty hose before stuffing the toys makes good elastic for knit skirt waistbands — but we knew this, didn't we? — Eleanor Franklin, Martin City, Mont.

No, we really didn't. But we appreciate the suggestion. Your knit-scraps stuffed toys are a super idea, and the pattern books are loaded with such patterns. So, girls, get to work on those Christmas gifts!

Dear Betty:

Last summer, while meandering through our Expo '74 grounds, I was suddenly attracted by two of those silly, yet amusing Beer Can Hats, jauntily worn by a couple of carefree young men who didn't even notice this old lady stop, stare and chuckle.

I made a careful mental picture of those hats, determined to experiment until I could produce a similar piece of humorous apparel for my sons. So, you can guess how pleased I was to find your offer for the instructions. I enclose my 20c and stamped, self-addressed envelope. — Rita C. Dunne, Spokane, Wash.

What a happy letter, Rita! I would like to know someone like you.

COOKING CORNER

Home entertaining enhanced by fondue

By KAY JARVIS
Copley News Service

Since Americans are being encouraged to eat less, drive less, use less heat in their homes, and in all ways become less conspicuous in their consumption of resources, it would seem there is very little left.

One of the options, and a most pleasant one, is entertaining at home. Not the spurge once-a-year party with friends crammed to the walls, but small, simple get-togethers. They needn't be budget breakers, especially now when "Love to come, what can I bring?" is becoming a common form of acceptance to a casual invitation.

Since practicality is fast becoming a way of life, it would seem more fun to share the cost rather than miss the companionship.

Cheese fondue is one of the prettiest ways to entertain on a budget.

Seat your guests at the dining table or make it really casual and invite them to plump down on cushions around the coffee table.

Since the fondue is not extremely filling, it could be followed by a hearty salad and a rather rich dessert.

Some hostesses prefer to serve an appetizer preceding the fondue. It might be as simple as crispy, bite-size vegetables with a dip.

Following are some suggestions for a midwinter gathering.

SWISS FONDUE

- 1 pound Swiss cheese, finely diced or grated
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1 clove garlic
- 2 cups dry white wine
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- ½ cup kirsch
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- ¼ teaspoon pepper (prefer-

Cubes of heavy French bread, pumpernickel, rye bread, crusts left on.

Place cheese in a bowl, sprinkle with flour and mix lightly. Cut garlic in halves, rub inside of fondue pot until well flavored, then discard garlic.

Pour wine into fondue pot and place over low heat until bubbles begin rising to surface. Do not boil. Add lemon juice.

Add cheese by handfuls, constantly stirring with

Note: If you prefer, make the fondue in a saucepan on the range, then transfer to pot for serving, being sure the temperature is high enough to keep the fondue hot, but not boiling. If needed, add a bit more wine to thin the cheese mixture.

Egg roll eaten with fingers?

By RIV TOBIN
Copley News Service

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
Recently a friend and I have been going to a restaurant for egg rolls as a luncheon. I prefer to eat mine with my fingers while my friend cuts hers up and eats them with a fork. Would you please tell me if there is really a proper way to eat egg rolls?
— Three J's in Canada

Dear Three J's:
Of course, the Chinese eat their egg rolls with chopsticks and most westerners would use a fork, especially when such food is the main course. If the egg rolls were made bite-size and were served as hors d'oeuvres it would be perfectly proper to eat them from your fingers.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
I ordered some fold-over informals to be engraved, "Mr. and Mrs. John Ellis Macey." The printer left off the "Mrs." May my husband use them? — Janet Macey
Dear Mrs. Macey:
No. Men don't use informals. Furthermore, they don't use a title on personal writing paper. Of course his title, address and even his phone number may be used on business stationery. If the engraving order was correct when you signed for it, the stationer is obligated to make good.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

I called the president of a certain company and was put through to his secretary. "Who is calling?" she asked. I told her. "What is the nature of your business?" was her next question. That is when I blew my top! Should secretaries put callers on the defensive like this? If so, why?
— Irate in New Orleans

Dear Irate:

Callers, whether by phone or in person, should never be put on the defense. "May I tell Mr. Jones who is calling?" has a lighter tone than the flat-out question. The nature of your business with her boss should be of no concern to the secretary.

Many executives do ask their secretaries to get the name of the caller so they can gather together their thoughts and papers before the start of the conversation. No executive should ask his secretary to ferret out the reason for the incoming call. He should be the one to terminate any call he doesn't wish to continue.

I heard about one man who was put through the paces by a secretary. When she got to "the nature of your business" he said, "Tell your boss his house is on fire, the bank is foreclosing on his car and his wife and I are leaving on the next plane for Mexico!"

Girls smoking more than boys

NEW YORK — In 1974, the proportion of girls 12 to 16 years of age smoking at least one cigarette a week actually outnumbered that of boys, according to a Health Insurance Institute analysis of government reports.

While six years ago only half as many girls as boys between 12 and 18 smoked cigarettes, today there is practically no difference. — CNS

ON PREVENTING FIRES

To many people die each year from fires caused by pure negligence. Here are some tips on how to prevent them:

Don't smoke in bed or ANYWHERE when you are sleepy. Use large ashtrays, with islands in the middle, to keep cigarettes or hot ashes from falling out and starting fires. Don't use matches to hunt in closets. Be sure all burners and appliances are turned off after use — especially a heating pad when you get sleepy. Handle electrical appliances with care. Never touch electrical connections with wet hands or when standing on damp ground. Room heaters need screens almost as much as open fireplaces. Don't get too close to either.

If you make a boo-boo on one of these items and DO catch your clothing on fire, don't run. Drop to the floor and try to smother the flames by wrapping a blanket, rug, coat or other heavy material around your body and rolling over slowly. Start wrapping at your neck and keep flames from your face and head.

Martin plays character role

By NANCY ANDERSON

DEAN MARTIN

...we left the mistakes in'

HOLLYWOOD — In his new movie "Mr. Ricco," Dean Martin for the first time plays a middle-aged man who's no sex symbol and who saves himself in a fight with a younger, brawnier guy only by biting his opponent.

Martin press-previewed the movie at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas and later answered questions about the picture and his general expectations.

While "Mr. Ricco" gave Dean his first chance to play a guy as much in need of Geritol as a martini, it didn't give him his first character part.

"I've played character parts in lots of pictures," he pointed out. "But people forget about that. They just think of me as some old drunk who comes to Vegas. That's why my television show did so well. It stayed on 10 years, because we left the mistakes in."

In the picture, the killer whose confessed guilt sets off a chain of tragic reactions is the only major character to walk away from events totally free and unscarred, and Martin was asked whether he draws a moral from this.

"He'll get his comeuppance," Martin assured.

Gordon Lightfoot A Nice Exception

Most of the singers these days should stick to singing and leave the composing to those with a talent for it. But there are exceptions — like Gordon Lightfoot whose songs tend to be as good as the way he sings them, which is very good, indeed. Lightfoot's latest for Reprise Records is called "Cold on the Shoulder," which should be very hot on the charts.

Some of the titles give you an idea of Lightfoot's feel for composition: "Bend in the Water," "Rainy Day People," "A Tree Too Weak to Stand," "The Soul Is the Rock," and "Fine as Fine Can Be."

Lorenzo Music doorman voice

By RICK ROBERTS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Who does the voice for the doorman on "Rhoda?" Also, what is his name on the show? — J. K., Jefferson City, Mo.

A. The voice of Carlton the doorman belongs to Lorenzo Music, coproducer of "Rhoda." Music is also the creator of the Bob Newhart show and does the audience warmup for both shows.

Q. I heard recently that the host of "Meet the Press" is going to leave the show. Is that true and, if so, why? — P. M., Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Lawrence Spivak, 74, producer and moderator of the show, has decided to retire after 30 years with the show.

Spivak began the show in 1945 to promote a magazine, American Mercury, of which he was publisher and editor. The show had its first television broadcast in 1947, making it the longest running program on television.

Spivak's replacement on the show is expected to be Bill Monroe, NBC's Washington correspondent for the "Today" show.

Q. Why was the Paul Sand show canceled? Also, what is his background? — L. S., Jefferson City, Mo.

A. Like so many of the new shows this season, Sand's show, "Friends and Lovers," didn't get the ratings network officials had hoped for. His show has been replaced by "The Jeffersons."

Sand is a native of Los Angeles and began taking acting courses at the age of 11.

He spent a year with the Marcel Marceau mime troupe in Paris.

Sand returned to Los Angeles and appeared in some television shows, notably as a dancer in a Judy Garland special. Later, he became a member of an improvisational group known as "Second City" in Chicago.

Paul Novin, Paula Morrison Win Germantown Heritage Seal Contest

Winners in the Germantown Heritage Society's contest to design a seal for the society were recognized recently by the society at a meeting at Snug Harbor School.

Paul Novin of Taffrail Rd. and Paula Morrison of Doyle Terrace, fifth and sixth graders respectively at the Snug Harbor School were the first and second prize winners. Their designs were chosen by a panel of judges from a large number of entries submitted by students at the school. Prizes and certificates of merit were awarded to all participants.

The winning design depicts important events and places associated with Germantown's history. The Shed Memorial commemorates the early settlement of this area by Daniel Shed in 1640. The industrial enterprises of General Joseph Palmer established in 1752 are represented by a glass furnace. This area's close association with the sea are noted by:

* The representation of the Ship Massachusetts launched at Germantown in 1789.

* A fish representing the fishing industry which thrived in this area in the early 19th century.

* The Sailors Snug Harbor Building and the cemetery both commemorating the world-famed home for merchant sailors which opened its doors in 1852 and thrived on this peninsula until 1949 when the federal housing projects were built and which all but obliterated what remained of the old Hodgekinson Farm.

But does everyone get his or her comeuppance? Dean wasn't so sure about that.

If "Mr. Ricco" is a large box-office success, it will probably spawn feature film progeny. If it's only moderately successful, it will probably become a television miniseries.

Asked why he keeps on working, Martin ventured, "I think I have another 20 years left in me; I come over here to Las Vegas six times a year, and when they don't want me, I'll quit coming. You can't retire. Frank found that out. You can't get out of bed every day to do nothing."

Quincy Man Named Cuban School Superintendent

By PAUL HAROLD

An exciting runaway took place on Copeland St. this week. Owner, Malcolm Lafayette was unable to control his horse, which raced down Common St. and threw its rider when rounding the corner onto Copeland St.

The horse continued to run in the direction of the West Quincy depot, but was stopped before any damage was done, by Police Chief Ripley who happened to be in the area.

NEW SYSTEM FOR ASSESSORS

Mayor Hall instructed the board of assessors to adopt the "card system" for their field work.

According to the mayor, the new system would allow for the property of the city to be assessed at its proper and equitable value, for the first time. Every tract of land would be recorded on a card, so that when assessors entered a street, they'd know what neighboring properties were assessed at.

COURT ACTION

A Weymouth man was found guilty in Quincy District Court for unlawfully having smelts in his possession. He was fined $10.

Two Milton men were arrested at Wollaston Golf Club and found guilty of playing golf on Sunday. Each was fined $5.

Another man was put in the lock-up for larceny of 90 eggs.

The Quincy Police Department issued warnings throughout the city this week, warning residents to be on the lookout for a man soliciting piano tuning door-to-door.

According to reports, the man was an imposter. A $5 reward was offered for information leading to his arrest and conviction.

STRIKING GRANITE WORKERS HEAR REP. CAREY

Representative Carey of Haverhill addressed an open air meeting of striking granite workers gathered in Liberty Sq., South Quincy.

Five hundred workers had left the city as the strike continued into its third month.

legislature to prepare city and town budgets allowed a more thorough review of departmental budgets. He told the councilors: "The extra time has meant that we could delve into individual budgetary items in great detail. To the benefit of the taxpayer, these additional 30 days have meant that we have found places where additional cuts could be made."

Emphasizing his budget aimed at keeping the tax rate low, Hannon said "no competent, realistic prediction" of that rate was possible at this time.

Referring to the city's receipt of some $6 million in revenue sharing, Hannon said Quincy "would be in deep trouble" without those funds. He said he is urging Quincy's Senators and Congressman to vote for the continuation of revenue sharing which he said expires Dec. 31, 1976.

Of the total $69,512,937 new budget, $16,585,690 is earmarked for the social service branch of the city which includes Quincy City Hospital [$15,802,950], health services [$457,186] and veterans services [$325,554]. This year's social service budget exceeds last year's by $2,620,189.

The largest sum of money is slated for education. The total $26,877,494 education budget includes $25,527,413 for regular schools, $211,261 for school athletics and $1,138,820 for Quincy Junior College. This year's education budget exceeds last year's by $2,929,985.

The largest single item in the budget is salaries, said Hannon. He thanked all unions for their cooperation during salary negotiations.

"It has been hard work for everyone," said Hannon. "But the unions have been cooperative, understanding and realistic in their demands. I publicly thank the unions and their members for their cooperation."

Speaking on behalf of the City Council, Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin said he and the other eight city councilors would "reserve judgement" on the mayor's budget until they had scrutinized the document together.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia, announced candidate for mayor, said he, too, would reserve judgement on the budget until he and other councilors had a chance to review the document. But he added:

"I feel that the Mayor has not been, in my estimation, thrifty over the last three years. All of a sudden it's election time and he's talking what the people want to hear. It's three years too late. Yet he still has a chance to prove what he says in the budget presentation. I'll allow him that courtesy."

Quinn noted the council has 45 days in which to act on the budget which would mean it will get approval by or before May 15.

He said most of the finance sessions will be scheduled for Saturdays starting at 10 a.m., "to make it easier for residents to attend."

"We will go over the budget on a line-to-line basis," said Quinn. "We will zero budget some of the departments. This means they will start with nothing and have to prove they need the money-to prove they need the money-to prove that something is necessary."

"We will be looking for fat and if we find an ounce of it, it's coming out. Last year we trimmed several million. We will cut anything that is not necessary. All unnecessary programs—old or new—will be eliminated or deferred after careful review.

The remaining 47,000 square feet will be used to build necessary corridors to connect the two buildings and to accommodate student traffic, he said.

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin cast the only other negative vote on the home-taking proposal.

During the March 10 public hearing when more than 25 Quincy residents expressed fervent opposition to any home-taking on Oliver and Hunt Sts., Tobin told the gathering he would vote against land-taking.

"I talked to the people in that area," said Tobin, "and they pleaded, 'Please don't take my home.' They said no amount of money would be enough compensation. They had made many friends in the neighborhood. I told the people I would vote against the home-taking and I kept my word."

Citing "strong bonds and close associations" which develop in neighborhoods over the years, LaRaia said he felt school officials could have offered an alternate school plan not involving the taking of homes. He said:

"It all boils down to two things: Does the City Council really feel that the state is forcing them into this one alternative? And does the City Council really feel that school officials have really represented the Council's original intention not to take any homes and to come up with a 100,000 square foot addition?"

Underscoring its reluctance to approve the home-taking, the Council voted unanimously to pass a resolve introduced by Councillor James Sheets to appropriate $90,000 in contingency funds to assist in the re-location of families evicted from their homes. Sheets will chair a five-member committee formed to help in the placement of these families.

How Quincy Delegation Voted

Asked why he changed his vote, Brownell replied: "In the last few days I have heard of too many abuses occurring in a school situation. For this reason I have reconsidered and changed my vote."

Polls Show Hannon Leading LaRaia But--

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Insiders who claim they have seen most of the results say polls taken so far show Mayor Walter Hannon leading his No. 1 announced main challenger, Councillor Joseph LaRaia.

They say Hannon comes out with a 45 per cent voter preference to LaRaia's 35 per cent with the remaining approximate 20 per cent undecided.

These figures do not include Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin who is inching to the mayoralty ring but is still not an official candidate.

The big question: Is that a comfortable enough margin for Hannon at this stage of the race?

Some of the experts feel he should have a heftier voter preference cushion because LaRaia has hardly launched his campaign and would seem to have ample room for climbing between now and the preliminary election. Of course, Hannon could climb, too.

Hannon, however, reportedly comes out stronger in a poll taken for him a week ago. Some 285 voters were questioned.

Some 113 of those did not respond. They were either undecided or uninterested at this time. And that could change a lot of things around in the next few weeks.

Of the 172 that did reply, 94 reportedly expressed a preference for Hannon, 54 for LaRaia and 24 for Grace Saphir, who is also an announced candidate.

This gives Hannon roughly 54 per cent, LaRaia 31 per cent and Saphir 14 per cent.

Tobin was not included in this poll as a candidate, but there was a question concerning him. Those queried were asked if they would approve of Tobin being senator and mayor at the same time. The question reportedly got a heavy negative reaction.

INCIDENTALLY, Hannon will officially announce his candidacy for a third term at a reception May 18 at the State Street South courtyard. And not May 30 as reported elsewhere.

MEANWHILE, Rep. Joseph Brett says he has been asked by quite a few residents to run again for mayor. He lost a bid to Hannon in 1971 when Mayor James McIntyre stepped down.

Well, will Brett run?

"At the present time I would have to say no," says he.

But he leaves the door open with this afterthought: "I have a couple of months to think it over. I could have a change of heart."

NORTH QUINCY native Ken Coleman will have Woody Woodward as his broadcast partner for TV coverage of the Cincinnati Reds' games this season. Woodward is the brother of actress Joanne Woodward, wife of Paul Newman. And Ken's many friends are happy to hear that he has landed the Cincinnati job. He's still one of the nicest guys and top sports announcers in the business.

HAPPINESS IS... Mrs. Minna Holmes of Wollaston, who recently celebrated her 97th birthday, received a card this week from President Ford. It reads: "Mrs. Ford and I send our warmest congratulations on your birthday and wish you every happiness in the years ahead." It was signed by Ford.

Mrs. Holmes, a patient at the Elmwood Nursing Home, was "surprised and delighted", by the card which will be given a place of special honor in the Holmes family scrapbook.

STORK REPORT: School Committee member Harold Davis and wife, Bobby Kay, are the parents of a daughter, Erica, born at Beth Israel Hospital. The new arrival, their first child, weighed in at 9 lbs, 7/8 ounces. The baby was delivered by Davis' uncle, Dr. Benjamin Bornstein, assisted by his father, Dr. Albert Davis.

At the same time and same place, TV political satirist Dick Flavin and his wife, Betsy, became the parents of a girl, their second. Flavin who grew up in Merrymount and Bobby Kay are cousins.

And that's what you call a real family affair.

DID YOU KNOW that Quincy Patrolman Randolph Haslett is a talented painter? Haslett who has been on the force 30 years, took up painting seven years ago and virtually taught himself. He's done some 50 paintings since, mostly sea and landscapes. He has seven on exhibit at The Quincy Sun office and has others hanging at the Norfolk County Trust Co. downtown office, Dutton's and the Strand Theater. They range in price from $50 to $250.

When Haslett isn't working or painting, he has two boats and a house to keep up.

He seldom has a dull moment.

Forks were not introduced into England until 1620.

CONSUMER PROTECTION

By MARGARET LoDICO
Director

Quincy Consumer Protection
Each week in the Quincy Sun I will submit a question and answer column in order that any consumer that may have a question may submit it to me and I will answer it in the next week's column. You may send your questions to Margaret LoDico, Director, Consumer Protection, 1354 Hancock St., Quincy, Mass. 02169.

Q - What recourse has a consumer if a supermarket continually does not back up their specials?

A - The consumer protection act specifically states that it is a "deceptive practice" if a store fails to have available at all outlets listed in the advertisement a sufficient quantity of the advertised product to meet reasonable anticipated demands.

Q - If the consumer buys a refrigerator, TV, car or other expensive item, can the creditor repossess the item in the event the consumer defaults on the payments?

A - A creditor may not repossess your property if you have a legal reason not to pay. For example, you do not have to continue making payments if the TV set you purchased on credit does not work properly, or if home improvements were poorly done or not completed. A creditor may not repossess your property without first giving you written notice even if you default on a payment without a legal reason. This notice cannot be given until ten days after the default and must state that you have 21 days from the mailing of the notice to make your payment. During this period, the creditor may not repossess your property nor sue you for the balance due. A creditor may take possession of your property if, after the 21 day period has expired, you have not caught up on your payments. However, he must hold the property for 20 days, during which time you may re-obtain your property by paying the amount due plus any reasonable expense incurred by the creditor in repossessing and storing your property.

Q - Can a seller renege on express or implied warranties or can they undermine the warranties through written disclaimers?

A - In Massachusetts sellers cannot renege on express or implied warranties, nor can they undermine the scope of the warranties through written disclaimers. They can, of course offer additional remedies which a buyer may want to use. Warranties are designed to protect the consumer. Learn about them and use them.

Q - Are public utilities allowed to determine their own rates?

A - No, they are not. In Massachusetts the agency in charge of regulating service delivery and cost is the state department of public utilities. When the gas, electric, or phone company wants to charge its customers more money, it must request permission to do so from the DPU.

Q - How does the DPU decide the price a utility may charge its customers?

A - The law allows the utility companies to obtain a reasonable profit on its investment, which means a reasonable rate of profit to its investors. This is often stated as a percentage of the dollar value of what the utility owns. Its plants, its equipment, and the land. These things are very seriously taken into consideration when determining the rates.

Q - Is it against the law in Massachusetts to represent yourself falsely if you are a door-to-door salesman?

A - Yes, a new federal trade commission ruling defines the obligations of a door-to-door salesman. He must leave you a fully completed receipt or copy of the sales contract. The document must be written in the language in which the sale was made. The salesman must also provide you with a cancellation form, specifying the conditions of cancellation and providing an address to which you may send or deliver the form. A receipt for any money that was exchanged must also be in the same language the sale was made. The combination of state and federal laws regulating door-to-door salesmen puts the consumer in a stronger position - but only if the consumer is aware of this protection.

Q - Has a consumer any protection under the law when contracting for or leasing goods or services?

A - Yes, a consumer does have protection under Chapter 93A of the Consumer Protection Act. It enables the individual consumer to act as a private attorney would in general situations involving unfair and deceptive practices. Any person who purchases or leases goods or services for personal or household use and suffers any loss as a result of an unfair or deceptive practice may bring action for damages in superior court.

Q - What is a thirty day letter?

A - A thirty day letter is an instrument sent to a respondent [the person or company you believe cheated you.] Thirty days before you take court action. In this letter there are three things you must do: [1] Identify yourself, [2] Describe the unfair or deceptive practice in question such as false advertising, deceptive pricing, etc. [3] Describe the injury suffered. This is usually the amount of money you have lost in the initial transaction.

Parents Of Central Students 'Have Nothing To Fear'

Editor, Quincy Sun:

At a recent City Council meeting [March 24] the writer of this letter directed a question to Dr. Lawrence Creedon through City Councilor James Sheets.

The question was as follows; "In view of the public statement by Mayor Hannon calling Central Junior High School a fire trap, and providing you Do Not Agree With Him, will you please reassure the parents of students attending this school they have nothing to fear."

"Dr. Creedon, answered that the school meets all safety codes required by the Department of Safety and that the parents of students have nothing to fear!!"

Thank you for printing this factual reply to a very disturbing statement!!

A Complaint From North Quincy High School

Editor, Quincy Sun:

After weeks of rehearsing and painstaking care, some 130 faculty and students of North Quincy High School staged a Bicentennial musical revue. Saying that the show was a success is an understatement. It was much, much, more than that.

Here was a situation where faculty and students got together, on their own time and produced a series of musical and dramatic sketches depicting our country's history. Our show ran for four nights, and we played to capacity crowds - yet not one word was printed in the "Sun".

I can't understand, Mr. Bosworth, how you decide what community news is worthwhile, and what isn't.

The Quincy Sun will use pages and pages, to print all of the Youth Hockey scores and schedules, yet it fails to report on such a successful production as was the show at North Quincy High School. I cannot understand your judgement in priorities.

Believe me Mr. Bosworth, I am not seeking laurels, awards, or anything else - I simply feel that there could have been a small write-up, if anything, about such a successful endeavor.

Thank you,

Maria D'Arcangelo
N.Q.H.S. Faculty

[Ed. Note: We're going to have to plead innocent. Apparently Miss D'Arcangelo did not see the March 20 issue of The Quincy Sun. We refer her to Page 19 of that issue for an advance story on "Red, White and Blue". We also refer her to Page 12 of this week's issue - the North Quincy High School Page - for a student's review of that Bicentennial revue. This is the only information we have received on it from the school. And, yes, we do give considerable coverage to youth hockey but we think a program that keeps over 700 youngsters active and out of mischief is worthy of the space we give to it.]

Youth Speaks Out

- A national survey shows that only 15.8% of all teenagers are regular cigarette smokers. The problem is what are the other 84.2% smoking?
- In an effort to cut down vandalism, the MBTA is sponsoring an anti-vandalism poster contest. The winning posters will be hung in MBTA subway cars and buses - where they can be torn down and written on.
- Bill Russell was inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame even though he didn't want to be. It's one time almost everyone agreed that a person's freedom of choice should be overlooked.
- Now that Easter is over, the stores can start to put out the Christmas stuff.
- Elect Howard Hughes - Director of the C.I.A. - was his boat at the boat show?
- What's the roughest sport in the world - Hockey? Football? Lacrosse? In Quincy Square it's Ping Pong.

Dinner Held For Basketball Team

By JOHN LAWSON

On Monday, March 31, the North Quincy High School Basketball Team held a banquet for all of this year's "Red Raiders" basketball players. Players have been given complimentary tickets.

Money for the banquet was raised by the players who found stores in the Quincy area (and even some out of town businesses) to sponsor the team. If a store chose to sponsor the team, a donation was made and in return, the company's name and address was printed on the printed program.

Parents and friends also helped by sponsoring the team. These programs were distributed to the spectators at the 10 North Quincy home games.

Lastly, a dance was held for parents of the team at the Wollaston Legion Post in January. The proceeds from the tickets sold was also used to aid in paying the banquet expenses.

On Saturday, March 1, North sent an eight member Oratory team to Holyoke High School for a speech tournament.

Participating in the contest were Tony Poole, Dana Cetlin, Susan Barry, Bernadette Feeney, Gary Nankin, Mary Jane Summers, and Mary Satkewich.

There were 16 other schools at the contest. After competition in five categories [Drama, Prose Reading, Play Reading, Poetry, and Childrens Literature] the group went to the Golden Arches for lunch, and then awaited the announcement of the results.

Tony Poole won a second place championship speaker award with his dramatic interpretation of "Afraid of the Dark". Dana Cetlin captured fifth place in group discussion. Susan Barry received fifth place in Childrens Literature, and Bernadette Feeney took sixth place in the same category.

Again, on March 8, the team boarded the bus enroute for the Suffolk speech tournament. After another hard day the results came through. After competing in a field of 500 schools from all over the state, both Susan Barry and Tony Poole won awards. Susan won a fifth place speaker award and Tony won an eighth place speaker award.

So far, Tony Poole, Susan Barry, Bernadette Feeney, Bill Branton, Dana Cetlin, Jim McCarthy, Bob Mccolnigh and Helen Spiropoulos have made it to the state finals.

...Red, White And Blue

By JAMES MAIBACH

The N.Q.H.S. Bicentennial show marked the 200th anniversary with the presentation of four shows on March 20, 21, 24 and 25.

The N.Q.H.S. Bicentennial show was composed by Miss Byrne, drama coach and Miss Mader, social studies teacher, by taking familiar songs and dances from various eras since 1776 and working them into chronological sequences.

Work had been steady since before Christmas with many of the other faculty members helping: in choreography Miss D'Arcangelo along with help from Miss Nancy Palmer and Miss Diane Flanagan; Miss McKay in costumes; Mr. Watson, band director, and Chip Kennedy, a former student teacher at North, helped pianist

Stan Schertzer in getting music arrangements.

Lighting is being done by the Tom Field Company and, since the title of the show was "Shades of Red, White and Blue", those were the colors throughout most of the show.

Miss Byrne who has directed many of the past productions at North said, "This is one of the largest casts that I ever have worked with, and the first time ever directing this kind of show [variety show]."

We were fortunate to get so many faculty members working and interested in the show and the students involved gave up so much of their time in lengthy rehearsals, but at the same time the biggest problem was getting all the people in the show together to rehearse because so many of them have other commitments."

The show was subsidized by the Quincy Heritage Commission and because the show had minimum scenery props most of the money was for the costumes.

As the show progressed it was obvious that the audience was reacting to nostalgic numbers on stage. Most of the show was extremely successful in capturing the mood and spirit of the various periods in American history.

There was a successful blend of humor, music and drama. It is difficult to isolate a particular member for excellence for each was uniquely successful in its own right.

In short, this critic must say that the evening was extremely entertaining and that the students and faculty are to be commended for their contribution to Quincy's two hundredth anniversary.

They Seem To Manage

By JAY NELSON

Why are these people important?

Because they were the managers, the unrecognized ingredient of North's sports teams.

Many people don't understand the significance of such people and their jobs. The managers' job involves a lot more than just keeping the water bottle full. The manager takes on the seemingly meaningless jobs, meaningless only to the spectator.

For instance, statistics telling the number of hits in an inning, offensive rebounds in a quarter, or yards gained in a half don't just suddenly appear. It's up to the managers to take them down. They have to watch the entire game to do this, and this involves accuracy and complete knowledge of the game.

Another major aspect of the job is knowing how to be a trainer. He must know how to tape ankles and knees, as well as how to treat minor injuries. This is a responsibility which could affect the play of the athletes.

Equipment has to be locked up after every practice and game. This involves complete trust in the managers for they have keys to each of the rooms where equipment is kept. Halftime refreshments such as water and oranges are also their responsibility.

This job is just as time consuming for managers as it is for players. They too must attend weekend and vacation practices.

The managers get benefits from this job too. They go to the sports banquet, have free admission to all games, and some even go to sports camps free.

Although the managers job is unrecognized by the public, its importance to a team is without question. How would these jobs get done if suddenly there were no managers?

1975 HOME IMPROVEMENT GUIDE

Choosing a contractor? Here's how to pick one

The right contractor can be a big asset on any major home improvement project. Since a contractor's stock in trade is his knowledge and reliability, he ought to be selected on that basis, states the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association.

Most contractors are legitimate businessmen. But when planning a home improvement, the homeowner is a vulnerable target for "fly-by-night" home remodeling operators who take advantage of their unsuspecting victims.

For this reason, a homeowner can be confident he is in good hands when he deals with a locally established contractor, someone who is proud of the work he does and is anxious to promote his company's good will for the future.

Suppose your roof is worn out and needs replacing. The reliable and skillful roofing contractor can offer precise advice. Many homeowners don't even think about the roof until it springs a leak. A knowledgeable roofer can spot the signs early, help you select a new roof and provide you with a cost estimate.

If you are getting quotes from more than one contractor, be sure all roofers are bidding on the same quality of roof covering. For example, top-of-the-line asphalt shingles are designed to last up to 25 years. Although the initial cost may be higher than standard shingles with a 15-year life expectancy, they actually be lower on an annual cost-of-use basis.

Still the most popular roofing material, the trend in asphalt shingles is toward heavy textures that create a rugged, three-dimensional look. These low-maintenance shingles are available in popular earthtone shades that mirror the "back to nature" movement by helping relate a home to its environment.

Regardless of the home improvement project you have in mind, the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association offers several suggestions for selecting a reliable contractor.

Pick a company or individual who has been in business long enough to build a reputation; ask for a list of jobs he has done so you can inspect his work and talk to his customers; check with the Better Business Bureau; be sure he is insured for on-the-job accidents; and, obtain a copy of the contract to determine whether it covers everything the contractor has said he will do.

Home's exterior gets clean fresh look with vinyl siding

Give the exterior of your home a whole new fresh look that will give you greater home comfort and protection, plus the full satisfaction of having one of the most attractive homes in your neighborhood.

Starting where it counts, on the exterior, you'll be protecting your valued inside walls and furnishings from unsightly damage, besides giving your exterior a new clean look.

The exterior sidewall cover of your home has a number of purposes.

It must first provide you the needed protection against the damaging effects of nature's elements. It should guard you against water entering your home either from wind-driven rains or from melting snow or ice, and prevent moisture seepage.

Insulating properties.

It should also contain insulating properties to reduce the amount of heat entering your home during the summer, and keep the cold out in the winter. Similar properties for the purpose of reducing the outside noise level should also be inherent in the material.

Now, enthusiastic popularity is accorded this new exterior sidewall cover that can perform these tasks and more. It's solid vinyl clapboard and vertical styled sidings. For appearance, it creates handsome architectural effects especially when in use with other vinyl siding panels and with other natural siding materials, such as stone and brick.

Made of one of the toughest of all plastic compounds, solid vinyl siding is manufactured by Bird & Son, Inc., East Walpole, Mass. It is a triumph of modern technology, emerging as one of the most beautiful, durable building materials ever discovered or invented. It took years of research and development to perfect.

The look of wood

Solid vinyl has the look of wood, without the work. It requires little or no maintenance. Dirt and grime may be removed with a minimum of effort. It seldom needs paint or other surface coloring since the color of vinyl runs throughout the material. It is impervious to pollutants in the air, and is unaffected by fungi and termites. It has proved its rugged durability over many years under conditions of severe corrosion and weather exposure. It will not support fire nor will it conduct lightning or electricity.

Solid vinyl sidewall cover combines acoustical and thermal insulation properties with the aesthetic appeal of natural wood. It comes in colors proven to be most compatible to exterior designs: white and yellow.

A recent innovation in solid vinyl siding has been the development of BRANDED vinyl which accentuates handsome woodgrain textures, with vinyl-on-vinyl overtones.

TRADITIONAL BEAUTY AND CHARM endure when homes are clad in solid vinyl sidings by building materials manufacturer Bird & Son, Inc., East Walpole, Mass. The nuisance of continuous maintenance and painting are gone. Exterior sidewall cover made of solid vinyl cannot blister, peel, flake or warp like wood, nor can it corrode or rust like metal. It has proved its rugged durability over many years under conditions of severe corrosion and weather exposure.

COLONIAL clapboard styled sidings are preserved and maintained with durable, tough solid vinyl sidings by building materials manufacturer Bird & Son, Inc., East Walpole, Mass., and are complemented by a full line of vinyl accessories: shutters, gutters and downspouts, soffit and fascia board systems.

INTERESTING architectural effects may be achieved with solid vinyl-V-grooved vertical siding accenting highlight areas, such as doorways, porches, porch ceilings or gable ends of homes. It is often specified for the lower sections of garrison colonials. From Bird & Son, Inc., East Walpole.

The Bird & Son solid vinyl sidings and accessories have been accepted for insured construction loans by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA Material Releases No. 494b and No. 687), and conforms to the requirements of the Department of Commerce, National Bureau of Standards, Product Standards No. 55-72.

The firm also issues a siding warranty which covers defects of material and workmanship during the manufacturing operation.

Dress windows with plant life

If you want to break away from traditional window coverings like curtains and shades, try a lively and exciting look: plants.

A do-it-yourselfer could put several rows of shelves, spaced six to eight inches apart, over the window.

The carpentry involved isn't difficult.

Add a generous collection of sun-loving plants, in all sorts of varieties, and you have a beautiful window design, some privacy for yourself, and healthy greenery enjoying lots of sunlight.

Home improvements up due to economic trends

Tight money, soaring interest rates and astronomical prices have created an unprecedented decline in new home building and a corresponding surge in home improvement.

A realization on the part of many homeowners that it is cheaper to improve than move and a desire to improve the efficiency of their homes, both for savings in fuel bills and conservation of energy, has created a brand new market for manufacturers of quality building materials and the professional contractors who are ready and waiting to tackle the thousands of new additions, kitchens and bathroom remodeling and other projects expected for 1975.

A further incentive for improving the home is the prediction that the "energy crisis" will be with us for another year, with gasoline in short and expensive supply just as it was last year. People, consequently, will continue to spend more time in their homes, more conscious of the inadequacies of their home environment and more likely than ever to invest in bettering their living through home improvements.

With new home financing difficult and expensive, remodeling is the homeowner's simplest and most workable answer. The time is right. There is no shortage of funds available for home improvements and there is nothing so satisfying as protection of one's investment through home improvement.

Americans spent $20 billion in 1974 on home improvements. They will spend even more, from all indications, in 1975.

One of President Gerald Ford's proposals to boost the economy involves putting $3 billion worth of federal government aid into the housing industry. The legislation, subject to congressional approval, allows the underwriting of mortgage financing by the government for about 100,000 new homes previously not eligible for government mortgage backing.

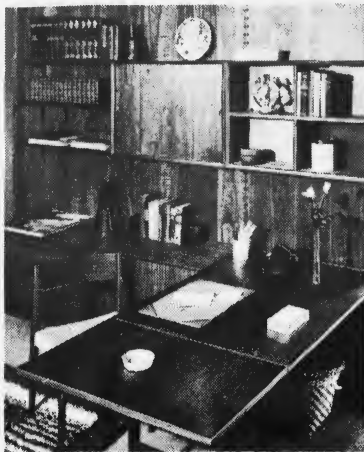

As another impetus to the housing and home improvement industries, a four-point program was presented at the recent conference on inflation held in Washington, D.C. to President Ford by John E. St. Lawrence, president of the National Home Improvement Council, the broad-based association composed of contractors, manufacturers, publications, lenders and others involved with the home improvement industry.

He called for increased government support of the home improvement industry as a means of offsetting the current recession in home building activity countrywide.

St. Lawrence pointed out that remodeling activity can be expanded by as much as $5 billion annually, and can have the important immediate effect of softening the severe recession now gripping new home construction activity.

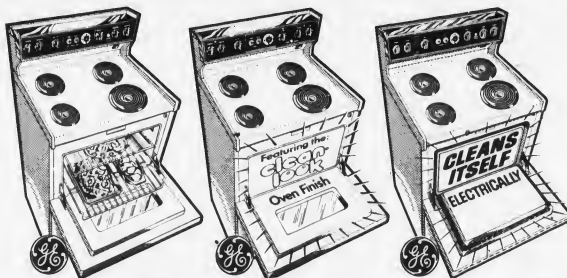

Among the proposals made by NHIC are the endorsement of a long-range home improvement program, provision for a $1,000 tax exemption incentive for homeowners to remodel, provision for a secondary market for home improvement loans, and revision of Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) regulations and other federal regulations.

A HOME OFFICE IS A COMPACT AREA created by System Cado, the sleek wall-hung furniture in walnut which comes complete with its own matching wood paneling. Movable storage units are almost invisibly supported on floor-to-ceiling wall panels which may be secured to an existing wall or erected back-to-back to form a room divider partition. Shown here is a wall-mounted drop-leaf desk, two sliding door cabinets, a four-drawer chest, a bookcase unit and shelves. System Cado comes in rosewood, teak or light oak.

How to finance fixing up

The homeowner who wants to make home improvements has a number of sources for financing, according to the National Home Improvement Council. Here's what's available:

Passbook loans: Most banks, savings institutions, and credit unions will allow a depositor to borrow up to 90 per cent on his savings.

Life insurance loans: When the homeowner has built up some cash value on his life insurance, it is possible for him to borrow most of that amount.

FHA Title 1: Special home improvement loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration are available from many banks and savings institutions.

Conventional loans: Interest rates on conventional, unsecured loans vary, but usually range from 10½ to 12½ per cent.

Contractor loans: These differ from the conventional loan only in that the contractor arranges the loan. It will cost more, but the convenience may be worth it.

Bank-based credit card: Although not recommended for larger projects, it is possible to charge home improvements projects to a bank-based credit card for up to 18 per cent interest per year.

Finance company loans: If the homeowner's credit is marginal or is notoriously "slow pay," he may find it easier to secure a loan through a finance company. However, credit is often as much as 20 and 22 per cent.

Mortgage loans: Generally speaking, second mortgages on a home should be avoided unless several thousand dollars is needed.

Turn that kitchen inside out!

Kitchen decorating has taken on a new concept.

A creative person, when faced with the task of re-decorating a kitchen, might make the often-used room look like an outdoor patio area.

Starting with the walls, put up house shaker shingles. Cover the floors with some wall-to-wall artificial turf—the soft, green indoor/outdoor kind. Brick-like tiles for the splash board area behind the sink complete the look.

With such a start, a person can go even further with individual accessory ideas, such as wrought iron dinette set or outdoor light fixtures which resemble lampposts.

NATURAL MOTIFS

Many "natural" motifs and concepts are becoming popular in kitchen designs. Ideas in this area include the use of stone, brick, bamboo, terrariums, and living plants.

Quincy Junior College To Offer Home Gardening Course Starting April 15

Quincy Junior College will again offer a course in Home Gardening to begin Tuesday, April 15.

Since this course proved so successful the first time it was offered last January, Quincy Junior College wants to provide the public with an opportunity to learn the techniques of gardening before the growing season begins.

Christos Mpelkas, of the Norfolk County Agricultural Extension Office and the University of Massachusetts, offers his expertise for growing vegetables and plants in the soil and land conditions of the South Shore area. A national authority on conservation, environmental affairs, and agriculture, Mpelkas recently chaired a seminar on the use of solar energy in the home.

Home Gardening will concentrate on the proper way to handle plants, the proper culture and soil for various crops, how to control garden pests, the advantages of succession cropping, and the best harvesting techniques.

Learning to grow your own plants and vegetables is not only a pleasurable year round hobby but also an economical way to save on food costs.

Home Gardening will be offered Tuesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m. for five weeks. Tuition for the course will be $15 for Quincy residents and $20 for non-residents.

For more information and registration material call the college at 471-2470.

LOOKS LIKE WOOD, but the clapboard look on the exterior of this home is actually vinyl siding with "wood-grained" finish. Vinyl siding is maintenance free, and is guaranteed for 20 years.

Drop ceiling and give room a lift

Dropping the ceiling. That's what many smart decorators are doing to revitalize a room.

The ceiling is not as inconspicuous as one might think. A poor-looking ceiling will stick out like a sore thumb, no matter how great the rest of the room is put together.

Dropping the ceiling with acoustical tiles will give it an even, clean surface that will need little or no care. It can also help to soundproof the room. And it's an inexpensive method for covering cracked, rough or stained ceilings yourself!

The standard method for installation on rough, uneven ceilings involves nailing up wood furring strips first (strips of wood about 1½" wide by ¾" thick), then stapling the tiles to these. Some remodelers use a new type of metal furring.

Whatever the method, installation is fairly easy, and there is a wide variety of fashionable tiles on the market to fit into any room decor.

An Experience To Remember

70 Mass. Fields Students 'Rough It' In Blue Hills Overnight

Seventy fifth graders from Massachusetts Fields School in Wollaston recently boarded buses for an overnight field trip to the Ponkapoag Outdoor Center in the Blue Hills.

The day of the trip marked the beginning of a long-to-be-remembered learning experience and the end of a hectic four-month fund raising campaign.

Both the school and the community became involved in the project as students began to work and to sponsor events to fund the trip.

Money was raised by students through snow shoveling, paper routes and allowance savings. Some sponsored puppet shows, magic shows, bingo games and garage sales in their homes.

During school hours, the fifth graders sold snacks - donated by parents - to other students. They also made and sold Christmas decorations and other novelties.

Community projects included a large cake sale and a luncheon sponsored by a group of mothers. Throughout the fund-raising months, children experienced the value of teamwork, individual effort, dependability and community spirit.

During the trip, students explored the forest and the wonders of nature, reawakening their five senses. Students tapped sugar maple trees, collected the sap, operated the evaporator and cut wood for a fire under the supervision of a Ponkapoag staff of 10.

The students were divided into study groups to delve into different projects. One group made a blind for tracking animals, another played a camouflage game and a third took a walk blindfolded.

Others made a web of life, learned to use a compass and climbed the famous lemon squeeze rock formation. Students also made red-cedar medallions, nature mobiles and shellers.

All students experienced a nightwalk without flashlights, to enjoy the sounds and sights of the night. They were accompanied by a group leader. In the morning, the kids rose early for a pre-breakfast study group and a chance to watch the sun rise.

Children also worked together during meal time, setting tables, acting as hosts and hostesses and cleaning up. They enjoyed the chance to live for a short time with their teachers and classmates, sharing meals, playing soccer and talking.

Mrs. Nancy Renn, Mrs. Jane Minton and Miss Gail Weatherhead, all fifth grade teachers at Mass. Fields School, accompanied the students on the trip. Fifth graders involved in the overnight excursion were:

MONEY TALKS What Is Happening To The Dream Of Home Ownership?

By Philip J. Lawrence
President

Colonial Federal Savings

And Loan Association
of Quincy, Holbrook and Wareham
8-6 Weekdays 8-7:30 Thursdays

The concept of home ownership is taken for granted as part of the American dream. Of 63.4 million occupied housing units counted in the 1970 census, nearly 63 per cent [about 40 million] were lived in by their owners. More than seven million home owners were added to the U.S. total between 1960 and 1970.

The increasing opportunity for Americans to realize their home ownership goal is reflected over the past thirty years by the fact that when the first complete housing census was taken in 1940, less than 44 per cent of the U.S. homes were owner-occupied.

The number of homes increased proportionately more than the population across these decades. Quality of housing improved: Over 93 per cent of the homes boasted indoor plumbing in 1970; 58.2 of 63 million homes in 1970 could be called uncrowded [one person or less to a room].

Satisfying a family aspiration, increasing living comfort, and expanding the American "capitalist class" are only part of the values indicated in this ideal of home ownership. Behind all this is a vitally dependent upon it and a giant housing industry whose vitality is important to the health and vigor of the American economy.

High interest rates and severe competition for savers' dollars have reduced the flow of money into the nation's savings and loan associations. Since they are the principal source of mortgage funds by which buyers can achieve home ownership, the entire housing industry is suffering.

A principal culprit in this competition is the Federal Government itself, whose short-term Treasury bills offer higher rates of interest than the S&Ls are authorized to offer. Thus the Government ignores Congressional mandates that gave housing a priority in the public interest and established S&Ls as home-financing specialists as it adds fuel to inflationary fires with its monetary policies.

Here's how all this has affected just one of the housing industries: Some 80,000 companies cut, manufacture, wholesale, and retail lumber and other timber products. In 1971 the country built about 1 1/2 million housing units. In 1972 the figure went up to 2.4 million units. By the close of last year, the number of housing units had dropped back to 2 million. The 1974 figure will be substantially lower, according to Bill Dean, editor of Random Lengths, an industry guide.

"The market is based on home building and on the availability of mortgage money," says Dean. "And that depends on government-set interest rates. So a crystal ball is needed for this business."

Better than a crystal ball, maintains Dr. Maurice Mann, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco, would be "our willingness and ability as a Nation to institute the type of pricing policies, laws, rules, regulations, and the kinds of institutional and structural changes as are appropriate to the needs of a full-employment economy."

A government that cannot live within its means and upsets the private economy by invading money markets to pay its soaring debts is hardly likely to come up with a sound plan to restore reasonable fiscal stability.

Meet Boston Monday

Raiders Have Several Power Hitters In Lineup

For the last five years Charlie Bunker's North Quincy baseball teams strived vainly for a spot in the Eastern Mass. Tournament.

Every season the Raiders had a good first half of the season but faded over the second half to miss out. Twice North tied for second place in the Greater Boston League but lost playoff games to decide the runnerup spot and a tourney berth.

Spring was the most frustrating for Bunker and his team. With three games to play North had a 13-4 record and needed one win to make the 14-6 qualifying figure. But the Raiders lost all three, two by one run, to end 13-7 and for the fifth year in a row under Bunker missed out.

This year North is in the Suburban League, considered by most to be stronger than the GBL.

"I hope we will have better luck in the Suburban League," Bunker said. "The last five years I had good teams but just couldn't make the tournament. We have a lot of boys back and things look good. But this is a real strong league and I am keeping my fingers crossed."

Bunker has an outstanding catcher in Steve McKinnon, a good power hitter and an excellent receiver with a good arm. Behind him is Steve Martinelli, who can play just about any position. He had a fine year in 1974 with Lou Ioanilli's strong jayvee squad and will definitely be in the lineup somewhere.

John Lawlor, last year's third baseman, has moved over to first. He is another power hitter and will also be the number two pitcher.

Cooper Jordan, who played jayvee ball and came up late in the year to play a few varsity games, or Martinelli will be the second baseman.

North is all set at shortstop with Jack Rabel, one of the best around, returning. He is an excellent fielder and a good line drive hitter.

Richie Marino, up from the jayvees, will be the third baseman and looks good. He is another line drive hitter who will get the big hit when needed.

Another versatile player is Bill Driscoll, a power hitter from the junior varsity, who will play either in the infield or outfield. He is certain to see a lot of service, according to his coach.

In the outfield will be Frank Miceli, a veteran and a fine hitter; Jack Hatfield, a good batter up from the jayvees; Dennis McGuire, a veteran who is another good hitter and who will also do some pitching; Rich Magnarelli, who didn't play last year but looks good; and Sophomore Mike Adams.

Topping the pitchers is veteran Tim Clifford, one of the best in the GBL last year and who is expected to have another big year. Also a good batter and defensive player, he will play elsewhere when not on the mound.

Lawlor is the number two hurler, followed by Jordan, Martinelli, McGuire, Mike Holleran and Peter Fallon. All are righthanders.

Bunker feels North's new pitching machine should improve the team's batting. The machine can throw any type of pitch, fastball, curve, slider, etc.

The Raiders, who have a busy scrimmage schedule, open their season Monday at Adams Field against Boston English in a non-league game. They will face Boston Tech next Thursday at Adams in the only other non-leaguer and on Monday, the 14th, will host perennial league power Brockton at Adams.

Ioanilli is again the Raiders' junior varsity coach.

Open Against B.C. High Quincy's Hopes Rest On 5 Junior Hurlers

Quincy's baseball team had a disappointing season in 1974, finishing with a 10-9 record thanks to a fast finish, and Coach Bud Mosher lost virtually that entire starting team.

When the Presidents open their season today [Thursday] against B.C. High at Adams Field, they will have a new look and Mosher feels the key to the team's success rests on five junior pitchers.

Quincy will again host B.C. High Friday, April 11, at Adams and will open their first Suburban League season April 14 against Weymouth North.

"We expected to do better last year and it was a shortage of pitching which was the main reason we didn't," Mosher said. "This year I have a lot of promising pitchers but most are inexperienced."

The five junior pitchers who will be heavily depended upon are Paul Vespaziani and Steve Infassilli, who pitched some varsity ball last year; Lou Fishman, Dave Rafferty and Steve Sylva, all up from the jayvee squad. Vespaziani will play third base when not pitching and Fishman, a good hitter, will be in the outfield.

All are righthanders as is John Riley, who looks good and who will play in the outfield when not pitching. Mosher has high hopes for a sophomore southpaw, Pat Gibbons, who could work into the starting rotation.

Senior Dave Gosselin has the inside track on first base but is being pushed by junior Mark DeLuca, up from the jayvees.

There is a real dog fight for second place with Paul Southerland, Eric Carrera and Bob McIntosh, all jayvee graduates, battling it out.

At shortstop a transfer from South Boston, Dan O'Leary, looks good and is being given a battle by Bob Marucci, another jayvee graduate.

Sonny Thomas, also up from the jayvees, and Vespaziani will share the third base duties.

Preston Carroll, who played with the jayvees two years ago but stuck to track a year ago, will be in the outfield and should be in for a good year. He is a fine fielder and a good batter. Jim Duggan, up from the jayvees and a converted infielder, will also be in the outfield and could also see service in the infield.

Other outfielders will be Fishman and Riley and still another jayvee graduate, Don Ignanni.

Paul Ferris, who excelled for the jayvees, will be the number one catcher, with a promising sophomore, Sal Coscia, backing him up.

"I lost the entire team which I had for three years and this has to be classified as a true rebuilding year," Mosher said. "If we play .500 ball I will be satisfied and it all depends on how mature our many juniors will be."

"The hitting will be a question mark and we have been handicapped by not being able to practice outdoors. I wish the season was opening a week later. But, we have a group of hard workers and I think we will give a good account of ourselves. We are in a very strong league this year and will have to work awfully hard."

Quincy, like North, has a new pitching machine which can throw any kind of a pitch and it should help the batters.

Rich Hutchinson is back as Mosher's junior varsity coach.

Bart Petracca Standout Runner For North Quincy

By TOM SULLIVAN

Through the years North Quincy High's track and cross country teams have been graced by some outstanding runners.

But few have exceeded the brilliance of Bart Petracca, a junior who has numerous records to his credit and who carries the hopes of the Raiders' spring track team.

Bart first began to attract notice when he ran for Central's Junior High team when in the ninth grade.

He turned in many excellent performances and showed a good deal of promise.

BART PETRACCA

He placed fourth in the state Class B championships at Franklin Park and was named to the all-scholastic team.

"Bart received a terrible break when he was struck by a car and had to undergo a knee operation Dec. 1," Tozzi said. "He made a remarkable recovery and after returning to the winter squad he continued to sparkle."

Bart took second in the Suburban League championship mile, set a new school mile record of 4:31.4 in the state Class B trials, and took fourth in the Class B championship mile run and fourth in the mile in the State Coaches Invitational Meet.

In addition, he was defeated only by the much more experienced George Conefrey of the Oregon Track Club in three road races since last fall. Conefrey is one of the top runners in the East.

He finished second to Conefrey in the Quincy YMCA five-mile race last fall and again in the Y's five-miler on Washington's Birthday. He won the NEEAU 2 1/2-miler at Fresh Pond recently.

"Cross country is my favorite race, although I also enjoy running the mile and two-mile," Petracca said. "I'm looking forward to running with the Quincy Track Club again this summer."

Bart set several records for the Track Club in its first season last summer. The weekly meets were directed by Tozzi.

"We feel Bart's attitude is superb in all respects," Tozzi said. "He had two major setbacks in the last eight months [struck by a car and a knee operation], yet he still is one of our team leaders. He is an extremely hard worker in practice, always willing to learn more about distance running."

He is just now learning some of the things championship distance runners need, such as pace, race tactics and the psychological aspects, but we are all very proud of him. Although it has been said a million times, I repeat, if we had a team of kids like Bart, we'd be New England champs."

And North Quincy will have him back for another year.

When he entered North Quincy High he immediately drew attention as a sophomore a year ago as he set a school record in the indoor mile (4:39.3) and a new school mark in the outdoor mile (4:34.3) among other fine efforts.

"We knew we had a real standout in Bart and he certainly hasn't disappointed us this year," Coach Lou Tozzi said.

In cross country last fall Petracca twice broke the Quincy course record and also set new marks over the Milton Academy, Waltham and Weymouth South courses. His only cross country defeat in dual meets was at the hands of Weymouth South's Dan Doyle, who has won 27 straight meets.

Quincy Nets Win In Debut

The Quincy Nets, an amateur basketball team made up of high school and college players, mostly from Quincy, made their debut last week with a 62-58 win over Pine Brothers in the Charlestown Open Tournament.

The Nets went after win number two last night [Wednesday] against Somerville. Rick Reno paced the Nets in their opener with 22 points, followed by Al Wolfe with 15 and Tim Lennon with 11. Steve Martinelli and Jack Uhlar combined for 21 rebounds and Ed Monti had nine assists.

The Nets are coached by Brian Cox of Wollaston. The players are Martinelli, North Quincy High star this year; Uhlar, who shone this season for Quincy High; Ed Monti, Rick

Baker, Dan Minton and Steve Cordeiro, all from Quincy; Kevin Gibson, high scorer for Quincy Junior College; Reno, Wolfe and Lennon, all from Massachusetts

Community College. The team also has added Steve Miller, last year's North Quincy High captain who had a brilliant season for Eastern Nazarene College this season.

Keene second stars.

Saturday both Quincy teams will travel to Newton to meet the Boston College Rugby Club. Bob Bertoni, Lee Watkins and Paul Wilson did the scoring for Quincy, which fell behind, 6-0, in the first half, then scored 15 unanswered points in the second half. Keene kicked a late game penalty goal to end the scoring.

37 Pack 30 Cub Scouts Clean Up West Quincy

A total of 37 cub scouts and three den chiefs from Pack 30 of St. Mary's Church helped to "Keep America Beautiful" by cleaning up the streets of West Quincy Tuesday.

As part of the scouts' April project theme on "Nature", six dens in the pack tackled different streets within West Quincy, picking up scattered papers, debris and other litter.

Den 2 members Kevin Flaherty, Richard Merna, James Kelly, Ricky Kelly, Tommy Geoffrey and Brian Scalata combed O'Rourke Playground with the help of Den Chief Daniel Flaherty.

Paul Dixon, Brian Adams, Christopher McEachern, Michael Tanner, Daniel Carroll, John Krantz and James Deweaver, members of Den 4, cleaned Furnace Brook Parkway at Cemetery Lane.

Cleaning Furnace Brook Parkway at Willard St. were members of Den 5, Steven Deweaver, William Coose, Joseph Comperchio, Hilton Glynn, Joseph Wholey, Mark Sprague, Dominic Avitable and Breon Hutton.

Den 8 scouts are Michael O'Connor, Richard Marnell, Michael McGrath, Stanley Johnson and James Nabstadt.

Frederick P. Fineran is cubmaster of Den 30. Den Mothers are Mrs. Rose Flaherty, Mrs. Patricia Roche, Mrs. Lorraine DiBona, Mrs. Marie O'Callaghan, Mrs. Janice O'Connor and Mrs. Mary Ann Fineran.

The scouts will receive official recognition of their civic-minded efforts at the April 7 meeting of the City Council.

and actor, says Mrs. Benedict. "Paul calls me every week after the show. He looks to me for criticism. He'll ask what I thought of the show and ask how he came through."

To many viewers, Benedict - who plays a Russian-speaking Englishman employed as a United Nations representative - seems to be the star of the show. Mrs. Benedict confides she received many phone calls from area viewers who proclaim devotion to the series because of Benedict. A proud yet humble mother said:

"I think Paul adds a lot to the show. He fits in well. And people do call me, telling me he's really the star of the show. He is funny - in a sincere way."

At 36, Benedict boasts more than 60 plays and seven films to his credit. He has appeared in Shakespearean dramas as well as in "Bad Habits" on Broadway, "Old Times", "Live Like Pigs", "The Dwarf", and "A Nice Place To Visit". His film roster includes "Taking Off", "Front Page" with Jack Lemmon and Walter Mathau and "Up The Sandbox" with Barbra Streisand.

He also recently appeared with Quincyite Lee Remick in "The Hustlers", a drama developed especially for TV. They had lunch together and chatted about Quincy, though Paul has never lived here himself.

Mrs. Benedict said she moved to Quincy in 1972 after her daughter Katherine Benedict McCarthy of Milton convinced her to move from Boston to avoid the possible dangers of "the big city."

Benedict has also appeared on "Kojak". At first hesitant to tell a story related to the filming of the show, Mrs. Benedict, saying her son would be furious with her, told of a grand compliment paid to her son by Kojak himself, Telly Savalas. She explained:

"After the filming, Savalas came up to Paul, shook his hand and said, 'Well, at last they've sent me an actor.'"

Though Mrs. Benedict herself acted in plays as a young woman, she disclaims any passing-on of talent to her son: "I had a longing to be an actress," she confessed. "But in those days, my parents refused to let me pursue an acting career. And I obeyed them...But Paul got it on his own."

Calling her son "a natural," Mrs. Benedict said Paul has been acting almost since day one:

"He was acting when he was 18 months old," she said. "He was a little star. We had open radiators in our home - the kind that run from floor to floor. Paul would talk or sing down through them and then yell, 'You can applaud now.' He was really quite remarkable."

Born in Silver City, N.M., where his father, an army doctor was stationed, Benedict was raised in Arlington and in Hyde Park. He attended Sacred Heart School in Andover and graduated from Boston College High School and Suffolk University where he majored in journalism.

Benedict acted in plays throughout his high school and college career, winning the Gold Medal Award for best actor in play competition at B.C. High. This month, Suffolk University plans to honor its famous alumnus with the "Man of the Year" award.

Former owner of the Image Theatre on Charles St., Boston, Benedict was a member of the Boston Theatre Co. for 12 years, rubbing noses with other actors on the rise like Dustin Hoffman and Al Pacino.

And this month, Benedict will be returning to his hometown Boston area to appear in a play for his former director David Wheeler. No doubt, Mrs. Benedict will be seated in the front row on opening night.

And what about this talk of a possible spin-off from the spin-off for Benedict and his character of Harry Bentley? Mrs. Benedict's comment:

"I wouldn't be surprised if, in a year or so, maybe they'll have a little series for him."

Over '200 In Prizes For Coloring 'Boy After Whom Quincy Was Named'

Hey, kids!

The "Color The Boy For Whom Quincy Was Named" coloring contest opens today with more than $200 in prizes for the winners.

There are 30 prizes including a jumbo ice cream sundae big enough for 10 people and a $25 savings bond.

The contest is open to youngsters from kindergarten to grade 6 and there will be prizes at every grade level.

All you have to do is color the drawing on Page 17 of today's issue.

The drawing by Richard Purnell, Quincy Heritage graphics designer, is based on the only known portrait of Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy was named.

It shows him as a boy. There is no known portrait of him as a man in existence. So you'll be coloring "The Boy Who Grew Up To Have Quincy Named After Him."

According to two sources, the portrait from which Purnell made the drawing is the only one of Col. John Quincy in existence.

One source is "Three Hundred Years of Quincy 1625-1925" by Daniel Munroe Wilson printed in 1925 in connection with Quincy's Tercentenary celebration.

The other source is "John Quincy, Master of Mt. Wollaston" published in 1908 and written by Wilson in collaboration with Charles Francis Adams. The portrait appears in both books with the notation that it is the only "extant" portrait of Col. John Quincy.

The coloring contest is being held in cooperation with Quincy Heritage and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

All you have to do is color the drawing on Page 17, [fill out the form below it too,] and mail or bring it to The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy, 02169. Deadline is Saturday, April 19.

- The prizes include:

- A $25 gift certificate from Quincy Furniture.

Avoid Serious Injuries

Kennedy, Police Calmly Avert 'An Ugly Scene'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Edward Keohane, Grand Knight of the North Quincy Knights of Columbus, said Senator Edward M. Kennedy's calm and composure during Sunday's anti-busing demonstration averted the development of what could have been "an ugly scene".

Keohane also credited Quincy Police with "doing a good job" in keeping things from really getting out of hand.

Mayor Walter Hannon who was present at the Communion breakfast had "no comment" on the demonstration.

Though Kennedy was taunted, poked, pursued and jeered following his address at the Knights' communion breakfast, his self-control, poise and composure avoided any serious injuries to both the crowd and himself. Keohane said:

"He was very cool and calm. He never lost his composure. It would have been an ugly scene. The Quincy police did a good job, too, keeping things from getting out of hand."

Tobin Seeks $50,000 For Freedom Park

Pending City Council passage of a bond issue request for city-wide neighborhood improvements, Quincy will seek state funds to match a $50,000 appropriation for Freedom Park plans.

Three weeks ago, Mayor Walter J. Hannon requested authorization of the $2 million bond issue to complement $983,000 in federal funds under the Community Development Act of 1974.

The City Council voted 7 to 2 Monday to up the mayor's original $2 million bond issue request by $500,000. The bond issue has now been referred back to Hannon who must resubmit the bond before council action is possible.

As an amendment to the Mayor's original request,

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin recommended the use of up to $50,000 of the total $2 million for Freedom Park plans.

The matching funds sought by the city could come from the Mass. Bicentennial Commission. Quincy Planning Director Geoffrey Davidson, whose department has prepared "preliminary site plans" for Freedom Park, said Hannon, as the city's chief executive, would apply for a matching state appropriation when local funds have been made available.

In a meeting Monday with Edward McColgan, executive director of the Mass. Bicentennial Commission, Tobin learned the city could apply for three maximum grants of

Harold Davis To Seek Council At-Large Seat

Citing unemployment as the number one problem facing Quincy, School Committeeman Harold Davis Wednesday announced his candidacy for City Councilor at-large.

Davis fixed the unemployment rate of Quincy as in excess of 15 percent and said the City Council should help formulate programs to alleviate unemployment and its accompanying ills.

"The city should have as its goal the responsibility to insure that each man or woman who wants to work should have a place in the private economy," Davis said. "In particular, the City Council should make certain that Quincy residents are exposed to all available job opportunities, that the skills of the unemployed are upgraded through manpower programs and vocational training when needed and that existing employment opportunities are retained or expanded in this area."

Davis added that his own experience as Executive Director of the South Shore Council for Full Employment and Economic Development Manager for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce had given him valuable insight into the employment and economic problems of the City.

He cited the South Shore Job Fairs which have filled over 500 jobs and the training of disadvantaged Quincy residents in on the job training programs as contributions he had made towards solving Quincy's employment problems.

"Much remains to be done if we are to aid the over 5,700 unemployed Quincy residents and their dependents," Davis said. "As a member of the City [Cont'd on Page 28]"

Test Scores Indicate

Quincy Students' 'Growing The Way They Ought To Grow'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN
Asst. Supt. of Schools
William Phinney reports recently released standardized test scores indicate Quincy students "are growing the way they ought to grow."

The tests, administered every year to students in grades four, six, eight and 10, show the learning achievement of each student in relation to his or her academic aptitude.

The California Test Bureau developed a new test form in 1972. This year, then was the first year in which a two-year comparison could be made, assessing a student's growth in relation to the growth of a national sampling of 500,000 students taking the same test.

According to test results, the current eighth grade progressed in each of the three tested areas - reading, math and language development - surpassing their sixth grade scores by "significant" margins.

The current sixth grade, below the average reading score when tested in grade 4, now register at the norm, said Phinney. Though below the average in math, the current sixth grade is now above the average in language development.

The category "reading" refers to reading comprehension and vocabulary, while "language development" includes word usage, grammar, spelling and punctuation.

The current 10th grade, though maintaining its near-national reading average attained in grade 8, dipped slightly below the national norm in both math and language development.

Phinney partly attributes the overall-encouraging test results to a now on-going program first launched one and one-half years ago in the school system. The program, incorporated into the grade 4-12 traditional classroom curriculum, focuses on teaching students the skills of test-taking. Phinney said:

"We found that we were not paying enough attention to helping kids take tests. As we moved towards individualization in education, there was an effort to see that the responsibility for learning lay with the student. Therefore we wanted to give him help accepting that responsibility."

Phinney continues, "We think - and we have no statistics to back it up - that there was a slackening in formalized testing. Students were encouraged to work on their own or with partners. Yet once a year, we would sit them down in rows, clock them with timers, and have them fill in the proper discs on computerized answer sheets."

Phinney said he is especially pleased with the test results of the current eighth grade. When tested two years ago, the eighth grade registered at the average in reading and in language development and registered below the average in math. This year, the class has exceeded the average by "significant" scores, said Phinney.

"We are very comforted by the eighth grade scores," he said. "The test results are significantly above where they should be, indicating a greater than expected growth pattern. We believe the improvement is a result of the cumulative effect of their seven years of schooling."

Yet turning to the tenth grade, Phinney said the students "have not grown as much as they should have." When tested two years ago, the 10th grade registered near the national average and now registers at that national average. While this group scored at the national norm in math and language development when tested in grade eight, the current tenth grade is now "slightly below" the national norm in both areas.

Phinney said the reasons for this drop in scores could range from poor teaching to a lack of proper learning material to absences in the curriculum.

"We are using the test results," said Phinney, "to find out where we need to change our curriculum or add new learning materials to run in-service workshops for teachers for possible inadequacies."

Teachers, principals and system co-ordinators all receive a print-out of each student's test-score progress, Phinney noted. He said these print-outs enable the educators "to provide a more diagnostic approach to building on each student's strengths and working with him on any of his indicated weaknesses."

Parents, too, have access to a report form on their child's test scores. Teachers share test results with parents at regularly scheduled conferences, said Phinney.

CHILDREN

Kid's hair worth $15?

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM
Copley News Service

Q. My wife must think money grows on trees! She knows how hard it is for me to earn a buck, and yet she'll blow $15 on our 10-year-old daughter's hair. It's not that our girl's hair is really so bad. Pretty curly maybe, but it looks all right to me.

Do you think it's really so important to straighten out a kid's hair, to the tune of $15?

A. It's not what you and I think, but what they think that really matters. And their point of view is pretty obvious, isn't it? I learned a long time ago not to try using reason and logic on matters that pertain to how a woman or girl looks!

Q. Is talking in one's sleep important to worry about? Our 12-year-old son does almost every night, and he never remembers the next morning what he said.

Sometimes I can't tell very clearly what he talks about. Usually it relates to school — an assignment due, a recitation he didn't do well, or something else that went wrong there.

Should I talk this over with our doctor?

A. It probably wouldn't do any harm, but it might be more worthwhile to discuss it with his teacher. It seems obvious that he feels under more pressure at school. If you can help him find out earlier when assignments are due and assist him in scheduling his study time, perhaps he will feel under less pressure — and rest more comfortably at night.

Daytime problems of both children and adults are frequently carried over into the night. Identifying and reducing the pressures or anxieties often can lower nighttime tensions.

Q. Our youngster is obviously hyperactive. His teachers have told us he is, and it doesn't take an expert to see how he jumps from one thing to another, won't listen, and destroys things for no reason. He's always been very difficult to live with. He's now 8 years old.

Our doctor has put him on a drug, so that worries me. I recently read about using coffee as a way to cut down hyperactivity. When I asked him he said he doesn't believe in it.

What's your opinion?

A. To prescribe for a child who apparently acts out like yours does is a dangerous business when done from far away. So it's probably better to follow your own doctor's recommendations. If you are dissatisfied you can always go to another one.

The coffee prescription is still in its early stages of research. Even one of its major researchers (Dr. Robert Schnackenberg) admits that. It'll be interesting to watch as more research results come in, but so far they are incomplete.

Some food cost facts

The cost of food consumed in the home, according to the Northwestern National Life Insurance Co., rose 64 per cent from 1963 to 1973.

If food costs had risen as much as wages during that period, a typical family would now be spending $800 more per year for groceries. — CNS

The Natural Beauty Of Spring Fashions

Fashion is in a Spring fever of enthusiasm for the natural fibers. Once again, wool and cotton are the heroes. This return to natural resources for fabrics is happening for several reasons — partly because of the petroleum squeeze, which is being felt in the polyester industry already, and partly because of a natural consumer reaction against a steady diet of synthetics.

Doubleknits have been done to death. Furthermore, as the temperature rises, women remember the airiness and comfort of natural fibers that absorb moisture instead of holding it against the body — something to consider when planning a warm-weather wardrobe.

Biggest success story of the season, naturally, is the big-top dress. Most women will want to add a wide wrap belt, which instantly transforms it into the most gloriously bouyant shirt-waist of your life. The extra buoyancy, achieved through fullness of cut, is most flattering if there is no extra fullness of figure underneath. Try one of these "big tops" in lightweight woven wool and see how gracefully it swirls around your legs, making the most of a trim figure.

Warming up to the subject of warm-weather fashions, French and American designers have created ready-to-wear collections in natural colored cotton muslin. For daytime there are plenty of skirts with flip and flare in every length. Back wrap styles are popular; so are flat stomach panels with softness shirred in on either side. This latter design is particularly fetching, but you'd better have the flat stomach to put under it!

Natural muslin is turned into sophisticated pantsuits too, with shirts/jackets tailored as carefully as if they were cut in the most expensive couturier fabric. On the more casual side, muslin overshirts with peasant embroidery are so plentiful you'll think a folkdance festival is coming to town. These shirts look marvelous with natural muslin slacks in a ripple-textured cotton that needs no ironing.

By the way, if your natural fashion instincts include an instinctive aversion to the steam iron, you'll be happy to learn that a small percentage of polyester is often blended with these natural colored cottons — just enough to make the muslin scene as carefree as it is attractive.

After sunset, keep right on being a naturalist. Caftans of sunny colored wools will send you in divine comfort on cool Spring nights. As evenings get warmer, shift to gauzy cotton caftans which frequently are lavished with East Indian embroidery for surprisingly little cost. They're cool and comfortable as a nightgown and just as alluring. Enough of you shows through so that you'll want to be in perfect shape.

If there's room for improvement in your figure, start dieting now. The easiest way to lose unwanted pounds and inches is with Slender diet food from Carnation. One packet mixed with 6 oz. nonfat milk has 164 calories. Mixed with 6 oz. whole milk or enjoyed straight from the can, this delicious drink has 225 calories. Substitute one of these for a regular meal as needed. Slender is balanced to supply 1/4 of your RDA's with every glass, which makes this diet plan perfect if you're health-minded but naturally lazy.

Handbags have gone the natural route too. Canvas notes, quilted chintz satchels and chamois leather shoulder bags are your best bets for Spring. For sunny days, there's nothing newsworthy than the Chinese straws now blowing in the wind. Clutch at straw bags, and don't overlook the flattery of a natural straw hat. Wear as big a brim as you dare, and wind a different colored scarf around the crown to complement your different costumes. Straws are relatively inexpensive, and they work with all your suntime clothes. They're a classic example of how easy it is to be a natural beauty now!

STITCHING WITCHERY

Lingerie lace trims a sheet

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

What is prettier than lace? Nothing, especially if you put it on your bed. To match your tricot fitted sheet, trim a flat-top sheet with wide lingerie lace. So pretty you won't want to cover it up.

First I noticed it on my sister-in-law (but didn't mention it, of course!); then I noticed it on a lady at church (again holding my tongue). But when it happened to me, I decided it was time to take action.

Unlined knit jackets tend to turn outward and display their front bodice facings.

I cured mine by stitching stretch lace seam binding to the facing edge and then hand sewing to the underlining of the jacket. If your jacket is not underlined, you can use a strip of iron-on webbing (if your fabric will tolerate it) between facing and garment.

Or you can hand-sew the facing edge to back of fabric if you promise me you won't let it show on the outside.

Don't criticize leftovers meal

By RIV TOBIN
Copley News Service

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
Friends invited us for Chinese food at their home. When we sat down to eat the hostess said, "I had some leftover steak and rice so I added a can of this and a can of that and fried up the rice." She seemed proud of her menu but we weren't flattered to be served a meal of leftovers. What do you think? — Dismayed

Dear Dismayed:
I think she was honest, clever and economical. Would the meal have been any more tasty or nourishing if she had purchased all the ingredients that day? Would the conversation have been more spritely if the hostess had served steak Wellington? In these days when conservation is becoming a way of life, I think I would have asked my friend for her recipe.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
On a two-week voyage aboard a cruise ship, how much should a couple tip the cabin steward? We will be traveling on a one-class ship, if that makes any difference. — Two on a Tour

Dear Twosome:
If you don't request any special service, $25 is quite sufficient. Of course, if you are booked in a deluxe suite, $50 is the usual gratuity. Should you ask for regular cabin service, such as morning coffee, daily ironing and so forth, add $5 or $10 to the tip at the end of the cruise.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
Our father had a lingering illness and was terribly emaciated when he died. My brother and I did not want the casket open during the funeral but our mother did. Many people have told us Mother showed poor taste. Should we have insisted on a closed casket? — Jane and Jack

Dear Jane and Jack:
Such a decision is made by the next of kin. The people who voiced criticism showed poor taste.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
Should a parent teach his child to drive or should he hire a stranger? — Nervous parent

Dear Nervous:
Hire a professional. Driving instructors have nerves of steel. They can criticize and praise without getting emotionally involved. They know the standard of driving skill required by the law and they themselves are graded on their pupils' efficiency.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
We have received an invitation from a large organization. The R.S.V.P. is simply a phone number. How should I reply? — Mrs. Platt

Dear Mrs. Platt:
Introduce yourself to whoever answers the phone. Explain that you are replying to the company's invitation for such-and-such an event. The person who answers will probably have the guest list right at hand and will check you off in the yes or no column. If you should have to regret, no explanation is necessary.

BIKE RIDING RULES

Sure, bikes are great for fun and exercise, but in careless hands they can also cause serious injury. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare estimates that a million injuries result from bike accidents every year. An increasing number of them are caused by collisions with cars. But most of the spills, skids, crashes, and other mishaps that trap riders in a tangle of wheels and handlebars are avoidable with proper precautions. Here are some pointers:

riding in traffic.
Know and obey the rules of the road. Ride single file. Obey traffic signals, stay in the right hand curb lane. Never ride against traffic. By all means, never weave in and out of traffic.

Renovation Of Old Sailors Snug Harbor Home To Start In Summer

Past and present will be combined in the soon-to-be-renovated Germantown Multi Service Center, 9 Bicknell St., the former site of the old Sailors Snug Harbor Home.

Quincy's $32.40 Tax Rate Expected To Drop 50%

By PAUL HAROLD

Quincy merchants announced plans for the upcoming Quincy Days, stating that "South Shore shoppers would be in for the biggest value treat of the year."

The sales promotion would begin with a parade downtown, featuring 12 bands. Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway planned free bus service to Quincy Sq. for the two day celebration.

Members of the Quincy Days Committee were: chairman Norris Twombly of Lincoln Stores, Mrs. Helen Emerson of Gilchrist's, Gray Pearson of Sheridan's, John Chase of Enterprise Stores, John Conroy of H. J. Green Stores and Albert Baker of Baker's Clothing Store.

ST. JOHN'S HONORS MSGR. OWENS

Rt. Rev. Msgr. Owens was honored by parishioners of St. John's Church with a gigantic reception at the armory. The occasion was his elevation by Pope Pius XII to the position of Domestic Prelate.

Some 2,000 attended the event. A special telephone hook-up was built between the armory and the church convent since the sisters were unable to attend the event because of the rules of their order.

PLANS FOR NEW CITY HALL UNVEILED

A solution to the problem of a new City Hall was unveiled. It was proposed that the new building be erected as part of a national shrine for John and John Quincy Adams. In that way, it was thought that the federal and state governments would help pay for the cost of construction.

The plans called for the city hall to be built on the edge of the square, on Washington St. between Coddingtown St. and Faxon Ave., noting that the area "was not occupied by buildings of great value or significance."

The design was Georgian Colonial with a steeple similar to that of Independence Hall in Philadelphia. The design also showed a memorial wing, with a civic auditorium.

SPEAKER PREDICTS NAZI VICTORY

At the lecture sponsored by the Quincy Women's Club, Dr. William Elliot of Harvard University predicted that the Allies would lose the war. Dr. Elliot said that he came to that conclusion because of the Nazi's continuing "pulverizing hammer blows" to Europe.

Koch said the Bethlehem Steel Company had spent millions of dollars in its legal battles with the Industrial Union. In terms of wage and business to Quincy, Koch said that the money would have meant approximately $2. a week to every worker at the yard.

Quincy police maintained a low-profile presence during his visit in the city. While some criticized a lack of adequate police protection for the senator, Richard Koch, past Grand Knight and breakfast chairman, praised the police performance as "outstanding".

"As is his custom, Senator Kennedy requested low-profile police protection...and with a group of that magnitude, a larger police guard could have caused the crowd to be more boisterous, more agitated, causing greater problems. The police did an outstanding job... Out of a bad situation, the best developed."

As Kennedy entered Atlantic Junior High School to address a gathering of 260 Knights of Columbus, he was booed and jeered by some 200 demonstrators lining the walkway. Inside, the Senator first met with representatives of the South Shore Citizens Against Busing before entering the auditorium. There he was greeted warmly with a standing ovation.

Yet outside, the crowd reportedly mostly from outside Quincy, was preparing for the senator's exit by scrawling taunts on his car windshield, pasting anti-busing stickers over the vehicle and deflating the front left tire of the senator's official car.

Inside Kennedy told the Knights of Columbus he had taken a stand on busing and would not flinch from that stand. He said the courts had ordered the busing of Boston school children and said the law must be obeyed and enforced.

The senator also extended to the crowd outside an invitation to talk with him on the issues of busing. He said he would gladly arrange an appointment with representatives of the protesting group.

Before leaving the school, Kennedy conferred with aides to decide the best method of exit into the crowd. It was the senator who decided to walk calmly into the waiting mob instead of using a back exit. Keohane told The Quincy Sun: "I admire Kennedy's courage. He had the option to go out a back door but he said no - that was not the way he does things."

As the senator stepped outside, about half the crowd stormed towards Kennedy, waving placards reading "The Bay State Will Unseat Kennedy," "Learn To Swim", in reference to Chappaquiddick, and "Stop Forced Busing".

The police guard then tightened its ring around the senator, locking arms as they moved through the crowd to clear a way for Kennedy.

In the meantime, another segment of the crowd had barricaded a car designated for the senator. Some adults in the crowd sat their children down in front of and behind the vehicle.

Kennedy, grim yet calm, despite the obscenities and chants yelled at him, bypassed the car and began walking down the street towards the North Quincy MBTA Station, propelled by the police guard and forever-taunted by the mob.

Kenneth Runge, Knights of Columbus warden who helped flank Kennedy on the five-block walk to the subway, said he was appalled at the conduct of the women in the crowd:

"I can't get over the conduct of the women. They were more antagonistic than the men. The women were foul-mouthed, swearing and cussing, shouting obscenities in the Senator's face."

He said one woman persistently poked Kennedy in the back with the point of a miniature American flag. Runge said he broke the flag, but the woman immediately began jabbing the senator again with another flag. After breaking the second flag in two, Runge said he was "whacked over the head with a sign."

Some 50 yards from the school, another car was stationed for the senator, but as he neared the car, still plagued by the crowd, protestors swarmed the car, preventing access to it.

Quietly conferring with aides and police along the way, Kennedy proceeded to the corner of Hancock and East Squantum St. Coincidentally, an MBTA bus was stopped at a street corner and members of the crowd began to chant, "Put him on a bus."

Though constantly jostled and occasionally punched during the trek to the subway station, Kennedy remained cool and close-mouthed, trying to ignore the taunts and jeers.

Immediately after another conference with aides, Kennedy - then across Hancock St. - turned abruptly to his right and began to jog the remaining distance to the MBTA entrance.

Momentarily pinned against the double glass doors by the onrush of the pursuing crowd, Kennedy and two aides then pushed through the MBTA doors as police controlled the crowd and opened the station doors.

A handful of demonstrators sneaked in the door with Kennedy and one man grabbed the senator's leg, refusing to let go.

But police immediately freed Kennedy, emptied the station lobby and locked the doors.

Kennedy then boarded a Boston-bound Red line train which was met with a barrage of bottles and stones as it left the station.

Breakfast Chairman Richard Koch said he spoke to Kennedy by telephone later in the afternoon. Koch said the senator expressed concern over possible injuries to people in the crowd.

Kennedy kept an afternoon engagement at Trinity Church in Boston's Back Bay but was forced to cancel a 4 p.m. speech on national health insurance when some 100 demonstrators - many of them the same individuals participating in the Quincy fracas - occupied seats in the Sharon Junior High School auditorium, apparently intending to disrupt Kennedy's speech.

Keohane, Koch and Runge all said there were few, if any, Quincy residents involved in Sunday's Quincy demonstration. Koch said there were contingents there from different areas including South Boston, Charlestown and Hyde Park.

Yet Koch cautioned against branding an entire area on the actions of a few. He said:

"The actions of these people are not indicative of the people from South Boston or from other areas. It's not fair to label the entire area."

Bulger Cites 'Tragedy And Heartbreak'

Senator William Bulger of South Boston, featured speaker at a recent meeting of the South Shore Citizens Against Forced Busing cited "the tragedy and heartbreak that forced busing has brought to the people of Boston."

Bulger spoke for an hour and answered questions. He thanked the group of suburbanites for the support they have given to the people of Boston.

A collection was taken at the meeting and the group voted to donate the money to the Dorchester Alternative School known as the Dorchester Academy. The donation is being made in the name of Wendy Ross of Dorchester, a little girl, whose leg was removed due to cancer. Any one interested in sending Wendy a card can send it to Wendy Ross, P. O. Box 133,

May Be A Lot Of Bonnets In This Year's Ring

By HENRY BOSWORTH

You see more bonnets in Quincy's political ring this year than in a fashion show.

Grace Saphir of course, is already an announced candidate for mayor and she apparently is going to have plenty of female company on the rest of the ballot.

You might see four women as candidates for the two school commissioner seats being vacated by Daniel Raymond and Harold Davis to run for the City Council. [Raymond Ward 2 and Davis at-large].

A definite candidate is Mrs. Doris Ricciuti, wife of Public Works Commissioner James Ricciuti. Mother, real estate broker and one time assistant to the registrar at Simmons College, Mrs. Ricciuti says: "I positively am a candidate. As soon as the nomination papers are available, I'm taking mine out."

Being mentioned as possible school committee candidates are Mrs. Patricia Toland, active in the Quincy League of Women Voters; Mrs. Alice Kowlick, a prior candidate and Mrs. Mary Collins who made a bid for state representative last year.

AND, SABINA STENBERG confirms a report here a couple weeks ago that she might run for council at-large.

"I've decided I definitely will run," she says. "And it's not for the salary [$3,000]. "I'm running because I think I can do something for Quincy."

"If I'm elected, I will turn my salary over to Cerebral Palsy." [She is active in that cause].

MEANWHILE Marilyn Hanabury reportedly is considering a bid for the Ward 5 City Council seat. She was a McGovern delegate in 1972 and ran for state representative.

A COCKTAIL RECEPTION for mayoralty contender Joseph LaRaia is set for Friday May 16 at the Sheraton Tara, Baintree. A $50 per head affair with champagne from 8 to 9 p.m. and then an open bar and food until midnight. Ticket chairmen are Robert Beniers and Eleanor Woodward.

AND, a fund-raising buffet dance for School Committeeman Daniel Raymond, candidate for the Ward 2 City Council seat, will be held Saturday, April 19, at 7:30 p.m. at the George Bryan VFW Post. Dancing to the Marinelli Trio. Tickets may be obtained at the door.

FRIENDS REPORT former City Council President Vincent Smith is thinking of a comeback bid this fall. Has an eye on the at-large race. He formerly served Ward 6.

IN CASE YOU'RE thinking of running for anything [but an MBTA train,] Assistant City Clerk Thomas Burke says nomination papers will be available May 1. [The way things are going, you may have to stand in line.]

Youth Speaks Out

- President Ford wanted more aid for Cambodia, but it seems somewhat foolish to send aid to a country where the leader packs his bags and leaves.
- People of the 1970's must be stronger than past generations. In 1950 it took two adults to carry $15.00 worth of groceries, today a child could do it.
- Seniors at Quincy and North Quincy High get out on May 23. Other area schools get out at least a week earlier. Do you think they'll be many jobs left on the 23rd?
- The CIA is talking about the Big One that got away on their last fishing trip. It cost 300 million dollars in fishing tackle.
- President Ford's had to make some difficult decisions lately - Skiing or Golf?
- Some people suggest that having Rockefeller investigate CIA dealings is like asking Louise Day Hicks to study busing.

Rock Island Cove Improvement Assn. To Mark 50th Anniversary

The Rock Island Cove Improvement Association will observe its 50th anniversary at an April 12 banquet and dance at the Allerton St. clubhouse.

The organization developed from a series of Christmas parties for adults and children held each year in different farmhouses on the island. One of the few remaining is the old Pawsey farmhouse on Rhoda St., where 80 persons crowded into the kitchen one year.

The group is the oldest civic organization in Houghs Neck and one of the few in Quincy with its own clubhouse. It was incorporated April 25, 1925 with the late Charles N. Totten as president.

On May 16 of that year, the cornerstone for the clubhouse on Allerton Street was laid. It contained a copper box with names of officers and members. All work on the clubhouse was done by men of the community assisted by the women who drove nails as their husbands lined up wooden beams and put down floor boards. Four years later the building was jacked up on stilts so that a basement could be added.

The clubhouse was, and still is, the center for the social and civic life of the community. In its early days, weekly whists were held, bean suppers, block dances and penny sales to provide funds for its upkeep.

The late Ralph Parker established a neighborhood library there. It was headquarters for the Rock Island Cove Sewing Club, a Mothers' Club, Men's Club, and a Rock Island Cove Orchestra. Girl Scouts and Brownie troops, and the Rock Island Covettes baton squad were sponsored.

The Rock Island Cove Bridge

Club still meets, but in members' homes.

Civic efforts of the association were credited for installation of gas on Huntress St. in 1929, and mosquito control for surrounding marshes in 1930.

In 1938 and 1939 a government supported kindergarten was held at the clubhouse for Cove children too young for elementary school. When former Quincy Councillor David J. Crowley was president in 1941, street repairs and improved street lighting were completed for all of Rock Island Cove.

Since 1940, Labor Day celebrations have been held by the association, replacing earlier July 4th field days. There is a horribles' parade and competition, field day events, a mile marathon run, and refreshments.

The Rock Island Cove Improvement Association has survived transition from what was primarily a summer colony with a few year-round farm residents to a flourishing community. In the early 1900's, there were 23 families on the island. Now there are roughly 110 homes on its eight streets - only two are summer homes.

Membership in the association was open at first to all Quincy residents. As population increased, membership was limited to Cove residents "from creek to creek," on Rhoda, Pawsey, Allerton, Huntress, Hooper, Rockland, Woodman and Camden Sts. The area extends from the tip of Rockland to Sea St. 1975 membership includes 69 resident families, one summer family, four honorary members, and 13 associate families [former residents who have moved from the neighborhood].

There are bi-monthly civic meetings, whists, dances and special holiday parties. Members participated in the current series of Neighborhood Watch Programs of the Quincy Police Department.

Harold Crispo Jr. is now president of the association. Raymond T. [Tracy] Adams Jr., president for several years, died March 23 at Quincy Hospital. He was the son of Raymond Adams and the late Elsie Adams, association secretary for 30 years.

Mrs. Dominic Catrambone is secretary; Mrs. Gayle Mackay, acting secretary; Mrs. Lawrence Piscatelli, treasurer; and Mrs. Dennis Sheehan, financial secretary.

A 28-member teenage club is headed by Karen Arsenault, with Michelle Garcia, vice president; Cindy Urbanus, secretary; Robert Piscatelli, treasurer. Adult advisors are Marylea Urbanus, David Murphy and Cornelius Van Twuyver III.

All charter members of the association are being invited to attend its Golden Anniversary celebration. Robert Grenier, president from 1952-1954, will be master of ceremonies. Planning to attend is the group's only woman president and her husband, Mrs. Jacob Goldberg [Phyllis Davidson] of Quincy was president from 1942 to 1949 and served previously as treasurer for two years.

The anniversary committee includes Mrs. Piscatelli, chairman; Mrs. Grenier and Mrs. Catrambone, co-chairmen; Mrs. Paul Urbanus, Mrs. John Kelley, Mrs. Joseph Chernicki, Mrs. John Urbanus, Mrs. David Murphy and Mrs. Dennis Sheehan.

Recycling Seminar To Be Held Today

Six Quincy officials and educators will number among the panelists participating today [Thursday] in "Recycle Seminar", an all-day conference co-sponsored by the Quincy League of Women Voters and the Quincy Public Schools.

The seminar will begin at 9 a.m. at the Quincy Savings Bank, 1200 Hancock St., with Martha Stone, public works commissioner for Wellesey, as principal morning speaker.

Mrs. Janet Poole, president of the League, and Vincent Sullivan, science co-ordinator for the Quincy Public Schools, will co-chair the conference.

Following Mrs. Stone's presentation, a panel discussion will take place with the following individuals: Richard Koch, Quincy's Commissioner of natural resources; James Ricciuti, public works commissioner; William Willoughby, social studies teacher at Atlantic Junior High School; Brooks Maloff, science teacher at Central Junior High School; Clara Yeomans, executive secretary of the Quincy Conservation Commission; George McDonald, Norfolk County commissioner; and Mrs. Sarah Gilles, recycling co-ordinator in Baintree.

Moderated by Mrs. Stone, the panel discussion will end at 11:45 a.m. Following a luncheon at Quincy Vocational Technical School cafeteria, the seminar will resume at 1 p.m.

Dr. Evelyn Murphy, state secretary of environmental affairs, will open the afternoon session. A "swap shop" will follow Dr. Murphy's address, focusing on participant exchange of recycling ideas.

Attention will focus on Quincy's recycling efforts as well as the sharing of community recycling information.

The seminar will close with a discussion of existing recycling activities and an investigation of future recycling possibilities in Quincy.

THE WORLD OF MUSIC

Denver sings his heart out

By ROBIN WELLES
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The favored few among the world's great singers have had something special in their voices that is instantly recognizable — like Frank Sinatra, Judy Garland, Barbra Streisand, Elvis Presley, Edith Piaf, Nat King Cole, Maurice Chevalier.

And that newest of the newcomers to musical superstar status: John Denver.

It's when he lifts into the high notes on a song like "Sweet Surrender" that the sound goes into a quaver that is uniquely Denver.

As summer was slipping into autumn last year, Denver, that wheat-colored hair flashing under the spotlights, stood on the stage of the Universal Amphitheater in Los Angeles and did what he does best: sing his heart out to thousands.

He recalled years before when he had gone down to the beach to practice the music he had written, and how he had yearned then for someone to sing to. Now, in the huge amphitheater, he had his audience.

RCA technicians were there one night and recorded the songs that ranged from some new things to others that are already familiar Denver classics: "Sweet Surrender," "Annie's Song," "Rocky Mountain High" and "This Old Guitar." Of more recent Denver vintage were "Annie's Other Song," "Rocky Mountain Suite," "The Music Is You," and "Thank God I'm a Country Boy."

The two-record album now is out and it's titled: "An Evening With John Denver." Denver has had two albums among the top ten for months. Sure as those mountains in Colorado are rocky, this one will join them.

The Ferrante and Teicher music machine has spun out another album called "Beautiful," and it is one of their best. Some of their LPs are too bland, but this one mixes tempos and styles and the arrangements on the United Artists album are exceptional.

There is a hard-driving version of "Bad, Bad Leroy Brown," a clean and simple "The Most Beautiful Girl," and a wake-up-the-audience boogie called "Over Here." These cuts also are super: "The Entertainer," "The Way We Were," "You Are the Sunshine of My Life," and "The Best Is Yet to Come."

Joan Diener's Voice Magnificent

Brynner Powerful But Odyssey A Script Weakening

By ROBERT J. DONOVAN
Quincy Sun Writer

Webster defines an odyssey as a long wandering or journey marked by unusual changes in fortune.

In "Odyssey," the new musical now playing at the Colonial Theatre, the journey wanders a great deal, and the changes in fortune never quite turn out as grand as Webster may have imagined.

What "Odyssey" does have is Yul Brynner, who stars as Odysseus, the epic hero of the Trojan War. In the classic Greek poem by Homer, Odysseus wandered for 10 years in his journey home to Ithaca after the battle of Troy. Waiting for him were his son, Telemachus, and his wife, Penelope, who was avoiding the advances of suitors who were insisting on a new King for the land, thinking Odysseus dead.

Joan Diener stars as the patient Penelope. Possessing a magnificent singing voice that fills the theater with its operatic resonance, Diener does the best she can with what she's given, but there really isn't much to work with. She just keeps fending off her admirers with cold stares and terse quips. The same fate befalls Brynner, who suffers somewhat because of the script by Erich Segal ("Love Story").

Homer's Odyssey was overflowing with plot and action. In comparison, Segal's "Odyssey," directed by Albert Marre, is almost devoid of it. His version chooses to begin during the final year of the journey. By alternating back and forth from one location to another, she shows us a scene with the current dilemma of Odysseus, and then shows us what's happening back home, which never varies very much. The script is thin to begin with. Coupled with the problem of there being very little scenery to strongly identify locale, the result is a choppy storyline that never fully comes across. In general, the lead actors are never given the necessary time and material to firmly and believably establish their characters.

One relationship in the show which does work, however, is that of father and son. Odysseus has landed on the island of King Alkinoos, where the King's daughter, Nausikaa, played with a wonderfully light-headed comic touch by Diana Davila, falls in love with him.

However, her affection is suddenly re-directed when the younger Telemachus comes upon the island in search of his father. Odysseus does not let on that he is the man the boy is looking for, but he does take his son under his wing as a friend.

Overall, the score by Mitch Leigh, who composed "Man of LaMancha" [which starred Joan Diener], is good. Russ Thacker, as Telemachus, is given a pleasant everything-is-gonna-turn-out-all-right song called "Tomorrow," which he delivers nicely. Thacker is quite good as the inexperienced young man who is trying to fill the absence of his heroic father.

Eventually Odysseus does come home. He arrives disguised as a bedraggled old peasant who waits for "pity." As he peruses his wife's suitors, Penelope sees through his costume as she sings, "Did He Think I Wouldn't Know." And Brynner scores early in the show with "Show Me The Sun Again" when he is longing to go home and a nymph has used her magic to make the night eternal. As well, the show opens with a regal orchestration simply called "The Odyssey Theme" which sets an appropriate mood for this story of ancient splendor.

The show has but one setting, designed by Howard Bay. With blue and gold as the dominating colors, the stage floor is raked, or slightly tilted towards the audience. A curved cyclorama of hanging coins and golden medallions serves as a backdrop through which the actors enter and exit. Throughout the show, it picks up light in various ways and creates a shimmering dream effect.

"Odyssey," continuing through April 26, has some fine performances. Yul Brynner commands attention with his booming voice and powerful presence. But while Brynner is powerful, Odysseus should be overpowering. Joan Diener delivers her songs with great feeling, whether they have a whispery quietness or facially contorting high notes. And Russ Thacker turns in a credible performance as the son who searches for the father he's never known.

However, its story and stage are often too sparse. Performances alone do not make up for its shortcomings. In Homer's tale, the hero was a dominating force. Certainly Yul Brynner is perfect for the part. But as "Odyssey" now stands, its hero could easily wander right off into oblivion, and he might not even be missed.

Ruth Gordon Heads Celebrities

Over 800 To Attend Quincy's 350th Anniversary Party

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

A festive dinner-dance at Randolph's Chateau de Ville will open the city's 350th anniversary celebration Friday evening.

Some 800 Quincy residents - including native sons and daughters who have gained national recognition - will gather in the second floor grand ballroom to commemorate Quincy's proud heritage and history.

Also attending will be 20 Broadmeadow Junior High School students who have created plywood and paper mache models of Quincy landmarks. The students will man a display table outside the ballroom, explaining the creation process and the historical significance of each site replica.

Also on display that evening will be a porcelain sculpture of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Purchased by Remick's of Quincy, the sculpture will later be on display on the first floor of the Hancock St. store.

The dinner-dance will begin at 6 p.m. with a social hour, followed by a roast beef dinner at 7:30 p.m.

Rev. Robert Borsdorf, president of the Quincy Clergy Association, will offer an invocation and benediction.

Head table guests will include stage and film actress Ruth Gordon, Dr. Priscilla White, Massachusetts Supreme Court Judge and Mrs. Paul Reardon, Mayor and Mrs. Walter J. Hannon, former Mayors Thomas Burgin and James McIntyre, School Supt. Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence Creedon, Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Tobin, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Edward McColgan, executive director of the Mass. Bicentennial Commission and Leo Meady, chairman of the Quincy Heritage social committee.

Adams is chairman of the board of Raytheon and a direct descendant of President John and John Quincy Adams.

Master of ceremonies for the evening will be Robert Gallagher, original voice of the Boston Patriots and Miami Dolphins. A graduate of North Quincy High School, Gallagher has been sport director of several news stations including WEEI and WNAC-TV in Boston.

Throughout the evening, John Savini's 15-piece band will entertain guests with the original arrangements of Glenn Miller, Benny Goodman, Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Artie Shaw, Duke Ellington and Harry James. Quincy accordionist Mabel Biagini will also entertain.

As a complimentary gift of Quincy Heritage - the organization planning the celebration - each guest attending the dinner-dance will receive the city's official 350th anniversary medal in bronze. The front of the medal depicts the first Maypole dance at Merrymount and the back carries an engraving of the nation's first commercial railway in West Quincy.

As well as celebrating the city's 350th birthday, this event will help raise funds to support further anniversary and bicentennial activities planned by Quincy Heritage.

REPLICA of the first railway car, once used to transport Quincy granite for the Bunker Hill Monument, will be steam-cleaned this week at the Public Works Department in preparation for its Saturday display during Quincy's celebration of the city's 350th anniversary. Public Works Department men viewing the replica are James O'Brien, Roland Veho and Michael Forrer.

Replica Of First Railway Car On Exhibit

A replica of the First Railway Car will be on display in downtown Quincy Saturday as a feature attraction of Quincy's 350th birthday party.

The first commercial railway opened in West Quincy Oct. 7, 1826. A replica of the first horse-drawn car will go on exhibit on Hancock St. near Granite St., for the celebration.

Designed by Gridley Bryant, a young engineer of the day, the car operated much like the modern-day straddle truck and was used to transport Quincy granite for the construction of the Bunker Hill Monument.

Appropriately, six students from the Gridley Bryant School, named in Bryant's honor, will serve as guides during the day, explaining the operation and history of the car.

The replica to be displayed was made in 1926 by S. Scammel & Sons of Quincy in honor of the 100th anniversary of the beginning of the Granite Railway.

According to H. Hobart Holly, president of the Quincy Historical Society, the historic car was last on display during a Quincy Christmas parade some 10 years ago. Early this week, the car was moved from its home in Faxon Barn and transported to the Public Works Department where it was cleaned, waxed and polished.

During the infant years of the first commercial railway, the horse-drawn car carried Quincy granite - bound for Bunker Hill - from the Bunker Hill Quarry to the Neponset River, a trek of some three and one-half miles.

Although this first type of car operated only during the first few years of the railroad, the Granite Railway itself ran 40 years. It was then bought by the Old Colony Railroad Co. and later merged in the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co.

After several years of operation, the first horse-drawn car was replaced by Bryant's most important invention - the eight-wheel, two-truck car, still basic to railroad operation today.

Church bells throughout the city will chime, and Quincy residents will sing "Happy Birthday" to their city as a gigantic 5,700-pound birthday cake arrives in Quincy Square Saturday, mounted on a 30-foot, flat-bed truck.

Made by Ernest and George Montilio of Montilio's Pastry Shop, the colossal cake will measure nine feet by ten feet, stand two feet high and will feed 10,000 birthday guests.

The creation will be decorated with cake replicas of Quincy's historic sites including City Hall, United First Parish Church, the Adams' birthplaces, the Dorothy Quincy Homestead and the First Commercial Railway, forming a mini-map of the city on top of the cake.

Above the cake will be an arch connecting two wooden dummy cakes on either end of the truck.

According to George Montilio, son of Ernest, the cake will consist of 490 cake sheets, each weighing 10 pounds. The cake will require a total of 1,305 pounds of flour, 1,624 pounds of sugar, 8,700 eggs, 844 pounds of butter, 116 gallons of milk, 58 pounds of baking powder, 13 pounds of cream of tartar, and 40 pounds of salt.

Some 800 pounds of frosting will include 500 pounds of sugar, 150 pounds of shortening, 150 pounds of butter, two pounds of salt and five gallons of water.

The cake alone took four days to make, said the young Montilio, while frosting and decorations required another three days.

At 2 p.m. Saturday, this castle-like cake will be ushered to the corner of Revere Rd and Hancock St. via police guard until it reaches a roped-off area in front of the new Hancock Bank. A five-piece group from the Quincy High School Band will be stationed on the flat-bed truck to play the beginning strains of "Happy Birthday to Quincy".

Following brief remarks by Mayor Walter J. Hannon and Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin, members of the Quincy Women's Club Juniors dressed in authentic colonial costume, will cut the birthday cake, assisted by Quincy city councilors. Four serving lines will be roped off and manned by auxiliary and regular police.

Hancock St. from Granite St. to Revere Rd will be blocked off from 7 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. A full-size replica of the first Granite Railway Car will be on display at the corner of Hancock and Granite Sts., from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Members of the Quincy Historical Society will act as guides, explaining the history behind this first commercial railway car.

Under the co-ordination of Ellen Byrne, North Quincy High School teacher, students will perform selections from "Cabaret" and "Shades of Red, White and Blue", a musical revue created by students at North. They will also sing songs from the Gay '90's and from the Rock and Roll '50's. The students will be accompanied by Stanley Schertzler on piano. They will perform from 10 - 10:30 on the bandstand in front of the new Hancock Bank.

Vocalist Susan Krueger of Scituate will perform two half-hour shows, one at 10:45 a.m., the other at 12:30 p.m. Selections will include "You Are My Sunshine", "Country Road", "Cotton Fields", "Oklahoma", "Summer Time", "The Sound of Music", and "America" from "West Side Story".

The Quincy High School Band, stationed near Revere Rd, and the North Quincy High School Band, stationed near Granite St., will perform patriotic and other selections from 1:15 to 1:45 p.m.

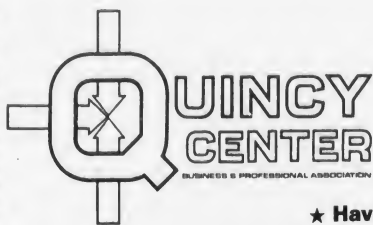

The Wollaston Glee Club will sing selections from the bandstand during the 15 minutes preceding the arrival of the birthday cake.

Circulating throughout the Square will be 1,000 balloons imprinted with "Happy Birthday, Quincy!"

Sculpture Of Declaration Signing

A porcelain sculpture of the signing of the Declaration of Independence will be on display Friday at the city's 350th anniversary dinner and ball.

Purchased by Frank Remick, owner of Remick's of Quincy, the sculpture was inspired by the famous Col. John Trumbull painting of the historic signing.

Quincy's planned celebration of its 350th anniversary and the nation's bicentennial will be the subject of the Wollaston School PTA open meeting April 15, at 8 p.m., in the school auditorium. John Graham, executive director of Quincy Heritage, will outline the plans and will also show two films, "Quincy's Pride: Patriots, Presidents and Possibilities" and "Mr. Adams of Quincy".

Quincy SSARC Sheltered Workshop Plans Open House

The South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens (SSARC), a nonprofit organization, has been dedicated for the past 23 years to promoting the general welfare of mentally retarded residents of the community.

It is affiliated with MARC and NARC, the Massachusetts and National Associations for Retarded Citizens, and served the nine South Shore areas of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth.

Among its many programs it sponsors the Sheltered Workshop for young adult retardates, wherein the clients perform work on subcontract jobs and receive wages commensurate with their production. The workshop is for their life and their future, for they are incapable of acquiring independent community employment with supervisory provision.

Some of the services the Workshop clients have performed on subcontracts obtained from business and industrial concerns include: folding, gluing, stuffing, inserting, labeling, mailing, grading, sorting, inspecting, stapling, heat-sealing, stringing tags, packing, unpacking, display card assembly, and disassembly jobs. It is their hope that more members of the business industry would avail themselves of these services and perhaps pay a visit to the workshop.

The Sheltered Workshop has scheduled an Open House Day for April 10, from 1 to 3:30 p.m., and 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. at 1201 Commercial St., East Weymouth, where the SSARC office is also located. The public is invited to attend. Drop-in visits may also be arranged by calling Executive Director, Mr. Dan Foley, at 331-1255.

Members of the Open House planning committee include: Mrs. Alfred Burroughs, Mrs. Lester Mosher and Mrs. Carl Kirsch of Hingham; Mr. Liam Long of Braintree; Mrs. Victor Melsky of Milton, Vice-President of SSARC, and co-chairman of the Workshop Parents Group; Mrs. George Cohen, Mr. John Durning, Mrs. George Moore, Mrs. Murray Roberts and Murray Roberts, chairman of the Workshop Parents Group, all of Quincy.

Montclair Food Stamp Center May Close

Food stamp applications will stop at the Montclair Men's Club on Holbrook Road within two weeks. Unless there is a larger number of applicants.

Reason for establishing an office at Montclair was due to the large amount of applicants from that area going to the Southwest Community Center to apply.

It was thought an office in Montclair would make it convenient for Montclair residents to apply. But applications are averaging only one a week.

KARA DELAHUNT, new baby daughter of Rep. and Mrs. William Delahunt and new baby sister of three-year-old Kirsten, arrived safely from Vietnam Sunday. The Delahunts described their adopted daughter, as "hefty and healthy."

'She's Sleeping Peacefully'

Rep. Delahunt And Wife Adopt Vietnam Orphan

A chartered Pan American jet touched down in New York Sunday carrying a passenger long-awaited and precious to the Delahunt family of Quincy.

Rep. William Delahunt, wife Kati and daughter Kirstin have adopted a four-month-old South Vietnam orphan born in Saigon. The dark-eyed addition to the Delahunt family was reported to be sleeping peacefully in her new homeland. She will be christened Kara Marie.

Four and one-half years ago, Delahunt said he and his wife applied to the Holt Children's Service Agency in Eugene, Ore., to adopt a child. Soon after, they had a baby of their own but later renewed their application at the agency.

"I always had it in the back of my mind to adopt a Vietnam orphan," said Delahunt. "And my wife also had it in the back of her mind, too. We're both very happy."

Mrs. Delahunt said in the past adoption agencies had had difficulty extricating orphans from Vietnam. She said it was a very happy coincidence that hundreds of South Vietnam infants were being flown into the country at a time when the Delahunts were hoping for a new addition to the family.

The plane landing in New York carried some 50 South Vietnam orphans and was chartered by the Holt Children's Service Agency. Kara Marie's two-day flight to the U.S. took her to Guam, the Philippines, Hawaii and Seattle where she landed Saturday night at midnight. The next day she flew to Chicago before the final landing in New York.

While Delahunt called his infant daughter "hefty", Mrs. Delahunt called her downright "fat".

"She doesn't look like she comes from a war-torn country," said Mrs. Delahunt.

Kara Marie turned four months old March 25 and will be helping to celebrate the third birthday of her sister Kirsten on Monday, Delahunt said:

"Kirsten loves Kara. She's her baby sister! Kirsten's the proudest of all."

Raiders Hosts Brockton, Quincy Meets Eaglets

The North Quincy baseball team, which got off to a promising start Monday, will meet Boston Tech today [Thursday] at Adams Field in a non-league game, will open its first Suburban League season Monday when it hosts Brockton at Adams Field. Wednesday the Raiders will play at Weymouth North.

Meanwhile, Quincy, which had its opener against B.C. High postponed, will meet the Eaglets Friday at Adams Field. The Presidents will play at Weymouth North Monday in their Suburban League debut and Wednesday will host Weymouth South at Adams Field.

Charlie Bunker's North team pounded Boston English, 10-3, in its non-league opener Monday.

Tim Clifford, the Raiders' outstanding pitcher who had an 8-2 record and an ERA of under one last year, pitched the first one inning and gave up one hit, struck out nine and walked three to get the win. John Lawler worked the last three innings, giving up one hit, striking out three and giving no walks.

North had nine hits and also collected five walks. Steve McKinnon had two doubles, Cooper Jordan two singles, Dennis McGuire a double and Frank Micelli a sizzling single which almost took the shortstop's head off.

O'Brien Club Wins Lynn Invitational Tourney

The O'Brien Club of Quincy for the second year in a row captured the Lynn Invitational Basketball Tournament, winning five games in the two-weekend event.

The O'Briens clinched the title Sunday with a 110-96 win over Salem. Quincy held a 51-41 lead at halftime. The O'Brien Club was the only South Shore entry in the 32-team field.

Gene Walcott led the scoring with 25 points, Mark Raterink had 21 and Eddie Miller 16. Miller was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player and Walcott and Raterink joined him on the all-star team. Also playing were Mark Jellison, John Douglas, Al Dalton, Ron Bradley and Fred Cabral. Miller, Jellison and Bradley are all former North Quincy High stars.

Miller assumed the dual role of player-coach for the tournament as Coach Leo Papile was vacationing in Florida.

Bantam B Minors Bow

The Bantam B Minor team was defeated by Rosindale, 5-3, to drop its record to 18-9-1.

Dan Sullivan, Kevin McGrath and Bob Barry scored the goals and Sullivan, John Keane, Len Micelli and McGrath had assists.

Quincy Trackmen Host Cambridge

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy track team dominated the Greater Boston League three of the last four years but this spring is entered in the strong Suburban League and Coach Tom Hall admits he will consider a .500 season satisfactory, although he hopes to do better.

Until last year when the Presidents were 5-4 in the league and 6-4 overall, they had won three straight league titles and 21 meets in a row.

Quincy, which has had some practice meets, will compete in the league relays Friday at Weymouth and will host Cambridge Latin Tuesday at Veterans Memorial Stadium in its Suburban League bow.

"We didn't have much luck in cross country or winter track and we will have our troubles in the Suburban League," Hall said. "This is a really strong league and we will be having some events we didn't have in the Greater Boston League."

Hall is troubled by the fact he has no winter athletes on the team. "I can't understand why a coach of a winter team doesn't want his boys competing in spring sports," he said. "I know some basketball players who would be fine trackmen and they would be keeping themselves in shape."

Quincy's top hopes in the 100-yard dash are Lane Watkins, Alan Vachon and Jon Golub.

In the 220 Paul Ramponi, Doran Ezickson and Tom McMahon lead the pack, while Harry Williams, Dennis McCarthy and Paul Lattes will be the best bets in the 440.

In the half-mile Hall has Ron Vecchione, Tim Kane and John Haapanen.

Steve Player, Bob Thorne and Don Jones will run the mile and Kevin O'Brien and Fran Yee, whose brothers run for North Quincy, and Dennis Kearney are the two-mile hopefuls.

Art DiLoreto should be one of the best high jumpers in the league and Sam Gravina and Leo Barron are other high jumpers. Ed Colletti, Preston Carroll and Bill Dempsey are excellent hurdlers.

Carroll, Dave McDonald and Watkins are the long jumpers, while Erickson, Colletti and Lattes will be the triple jumpers. Bill Popsie, Steve Coleman and Jim LaHive are the best bets in the discus, Charles Gaziano, Jim Johnson and Frank Curran are the best in the javelin, and Bob Varrasso and Jim Grimmett lead the shot putters.

The pole vault is among the new events this year and at present Ramponi and McMahon look like the best prospects.

Hall hasn't decided on his relay teams but feels he has the runners to make up strong combinations.

"We have a young team with only eight seniors," Hall said. "We have to depend on our juniors and sophomores and they are looking good."

DiLoreto was the shining light for the winter track team and Thorne was the outstanding cross country runner last fall. He finished third in the Quincy YMCA five-mile road race on Washington's Birthday.

Watkins, Thorne and DiLoreto are the tri-captains. "One thing which should help us and North Quincy is the fact we have a lot of home meets this year," Hall continued. "In the past we had to go to Medford for all our meets but this spring we have seven meets at the stadium and North has five."

Joe Wessling is back as Hall's assistant and Joe Catalone, who assisted Pete Gallagher in winter track, is also giving Hall a hand.

Girls Teams Open Next Week

The Quincy and North Quincy High girls sports teams get underway with a busy schedule next week.

Highlighting the opening week will be the debut of the North Quincy girls' track team, the first in school history. The Raiderettes, under Coach Roger Conboy, a former North Quincy and Northeastern University standout, will open Wednesday against Weymouth North at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Quincy girls, under new coach Bob Troup, open at the same time and place against Cambridge Latin. Although Quincy had a girls' team the past three years under Coach Pete Gallagher, the First Ladies were not officially recognized by the school administration.

The North girls will host Newton next Thursday and Quincy will face Brookline on Friday, the 18th, at Newton.

The softball teams will open Tuesday with North Quincy, under Coach Cheryl Manoli, hosting Newton at Atlantic Jr. High Field and Quincy, under Barbara Webster, playing at Cambridge Latin. Next Thursday North will be home to Cambridge Latin and Quincy will be at Brookline.

The Tennis teams also start Tuesday, with Newton at North Quincy, coached by Eileen Rowbotham, and Quincy, with a new coach in Wayne Hamilton, at Cambridge Latin. Next Thursday it will be Cambridge Latin at North Quincy.

Like the boys' teams, all girls' teams are now entered in the strong Suburban League.

Guards, Swim Instructors Sought

The Quincy Park-Recreation Board announces that applications are now being accepted for the position of life guard and swim instructors for recreation programs to be held at the Lincoln Hancock Pool.

Applicants should have a current Water Safety Instructor Certificate.

Applications are available at the Recreation Office located at the John F. Kennedy Health Center, 1120 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mite A's Romp To Title

The Mite A team finished unbeaten in the league and took the championship with a 10-1 romp over Scituate Braves.

Mark Chambers had the hat trick, Paul Marshall, Danny Hall two goals each and Chris Hurley, Scott Messina and Bobby McCabe one apiece. Keith Smith, Hurley, Steve White, Billy Hughes had two assists each and John DiPietro, Dennis Cronin, Brian Chase, Chambers and Marshall one apiece.

Vietnam Proves You Can't Trust Communists Says A.L. Commander

American Legion National Commander James M. Wagoner during a visit to Quincy, said recent developments in Vietnam underscore the legion's stance that Communists cannot be trusted to keep agreements.

Wagoner, here last Friday to sign the official contract for the 1975 Northeastern Regional Tournament of American Legion Baseball, said American troops withdrew from Vietnam at the proper time, after fulfilling the U.S. military objective:

"South Vietnam was about to crumble," said Wagoner, "and North Vietnam was about to overrun the country. The U.S. troops stopped the advance of the North Vietnamese and bought time for the South Vietnamese to train their armed forces and to take over their own defense. We accomplished our objective."

Wagoner, who lives in Lancaster, Ohio, continued, "But subsequent events have made us wonder whether our efforts were in vain... The Communists have violated the Paris Peace Treaty by invading South Vietnam. This shows you can never trust an agreement made with the Communists."

Winner of the Distinguished Flying Cross, the European Theatre Medal with three battle stars and the Air Medal with three clusters, Wagoner represents over 2,700,000 veterans in the largest legion organization in the world.

In ceremonies at City Hall Friday, Wagoner was made an honorary citizen of Quincy. Mayor Walter J. Hannon, presenting the commander with his citizenship plaque, quipped, "There are no taxes involved, Commander."

Accepting the citizenship honor, Wagoner said: "I understand I am in the city of Presidents. Does this mean, now that I have become an honorary citizen of Quincy, that I will become president of the U.S.? From the looks of what they've been doing there, I don't want it," he joked.

Present at the signing of the tournament contract were Mario Ghilardi, commander of the host Morrisette Post; Hugo Saluti, first vice-commander; Richard Walter, second vice-commander; Charles Ward, tournament chairman; Ray Cattaneo, coach and tournament co-chairman; Nick Malvesti, tournament co-chairman; Ambrose Powers, adjutant; Paul Hunt, judge advocate; William Corcoran, coach of the Morrisette Post team; Robert Eng, past state commander; Richard Koch, Quincy's commissioner of natural resources; George Powers, state commander; John Comer, state vice-commander; Roy Holt, state chairman; Leo Malloy, national executive committee.

Eight teams will participate in the tournament to be held Aug. 20-25. The six New England states plus New York and the Morrisette Post team, will compete for the Legion's northeastern baseball tournament title. This year will mark the first time that the tournament has been held in Eastern Mass. The event was hosted by Springfield in 1963.

'Are We On Criminal's Or Victim's Side?

Fr. McMahon Speaks Out For Capital Punishment

FR. JOHN McMAHON

A Quincy priest has spoken out strongly in favor of the death penalty in violent crimes.

Rev. John J. McMahon, pastor of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, noting that society is "reaching a state of crisis" declared in a letter to The Quincy Sun:

"Now it comes down to a simple question: are we on the side of the criminal or on the side of the victim?"

Fr. McMahon said those who oppose the death penalty "play upon the emotions of the public by picturing for us the horrors of such cruelty."

His reply to them:

"They should ride the ambulances with the police. They should take a long hard look at the body of a girl who has been raped and strangled or the remains of a man who was killed by a sawed-off shot gun.

"They should observe well the appearance of someone who has been shot in the face or who has died of multiple stab wounds. Then they should be reminded that these dead were innocent. They had committed no crime! Some of them had simply been in the way, and this is the punishment they received."

'An Agonizing Decision!'

Tobin Decides Not To Run For Mayor

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin has removed himself from this year's Quincy mayoralty race. Tobin's departure leaves incumbent Walter Hannon, City Councillor Joseph LaRaia and Mrs. Grace Saphir as the only candidates for mayor.

Asked if he would back one of the three, Tobin replied: "At this time I plan to remain neutral.

Will he seek re-election to the City Council?

"I will have a statement on that at a later time," he said.

Tobin, considered a formidable contender if he had decided to run, declared in his statement:

"After long, careful thought and much soul-searching, I wish to state that I have removed myself from consideration as a candidate for the 1975 mayoralty race.

"I wish to express my most sincere thanks and grateful appreciation to the many interested and concerned citizens who pledged their hard work and support if I decided to run.

"This support came from senior citizens, municipal employees, members of neighborhood civic organizations, union leaders and leaders of the business community and young voters and parents-interested residents from all walks of life.

"This encouragement has kept me busy these past several months in the most agonizing decision of what course of action I should take in the best interests of the city in which I was born, the people of this city who gave me my start in public office, and my family.

"I wish to take this opportunity to thank my most understanding wife, Shirley, and my seven children, personal friends, my colleagues in government and office staff for their understanding, affection and patience.

"But the ultimate decision was mine and I have decided that such pressing problems as the economy, unemployment and working to hold down the cost of government and taxes, that the best interests of my city

Racial Balancing 'Unsound, Unworkable'

Hannon Calls Forced Busing 'A Cruel Hoax'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

In a speech before the South Shore Citizens Against Forced Busing Tuesday night, Mayor Walter J. Hannon called the racial balancing of schools both "unsound and totally unworkable."

Equating a vote to restore racial balance with a vote to uphold forced busing, Hannon said racial balance could never be achieved "without the horrors of community strife and disruption."

Hannon told the audience at the Bryan VFW Post:

"We believe in the neighborhood school concept. To play with the lives of children in order to meet the requirements of a law is, to me, a cruel hoax perpetrated on the public under the banner of educational soundness."

During his speech Hannon commended the citizen group's "civilized and intelligent" exchange on forced busing with Senator Edward M. Kennedy, who later was jeered and jostled by a hostile anti-busing crowd during a recent visit to Quincy. Hannon said:

"I disagree with Senator Kennedy's position on this issue we are discussing here tonight as you do. Nevertheless, I respect

Each Residence In Flood Plain Zone Identified

Ward 4 Councilor James A. Sheets reports the Department of Planning and Community Development has identified each residence located in the recently established Flood Plain Zone.

Sheets, Chairman of the Sub-committee on Flood Plain Zoning, indicated that each dwelling in the zone has been identified by street and number. He said that much of the "tough work" of identifying locations was done by Richard Mead of the Planning Department.

Sheets indicated the entire list would soon be published in the local newspapers and that each resident should make certain whether they are included or excluded from the flood plain map.

At the City Council meeting Tuesday, April 22, Sheets will recommend that each of the Councilors hold open meetings in their wards and allow the people to either ask for inclusion or exclusion in the flood zone, if the situation warrants it.

Once these requests have been made the sub-committee on Flood Plain Zoning will forward them to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for study. The study will take from three to five months, and when completed HUD will make their recommendations officially to the City Council which will then hold a public hearing.

Once this has been done the City Council will act to amend the flood plain Zoning Ordinance in compliance with the recommendations of HUD and the recommendations of the people who attend the public hearing," Sheets said.

Sheets said the whole process should be completed by November of 1975.

She Defies Chain Letter Threatening Bad Luck

Chain letter correspondence used to be informative and fun. One could exchange anything from a favorite recipe to harmless postcard greetings to pen pal letters, with friends as well as strangers.

But last week, a West Quincy resident received a chain letter which threatened bad luck - even death - to anyone breaking the chain of reply.

Ironically, the letter began with a prayer, supposedly sent "for good luck". The letter continued:

"You are to receive good luck within four days of receiving this letter. This is no joke. You will receive it in the mail."

According to instructions, the recipient of the letter was to send 20 copies to people needing good luck.

The letter then describes the fate of those who disregard the chain letter. One example tells of a disbelieving man who threw away the letter and then died nine days later. The letter warns the receiver:

"For no reason whatsoever should this chain be broken. Make your 20 copies and send them. Within four days you will get a surprise."

The letter also tells of a man who received $775,000 but failed to circulate the prayer.

The letter says he died six days after receiving the chain letter.

Mrs. Teresa Dunn of Grove St., West Quincy received the chain letter last Thursday and informed the Quincy Post office which forwarded the letter to the Boston Division of the Postal Inspection Service.

Frank Nemic, assistant inspector at the Boston office, said chain letters which solicit money and promise an eventual return of money from other letter answerers, constitute a form of mail fraud. The originator of such a letter can be prosecuted, he said.

Yet this letter specifically instructs the receiver not to send money. Nemic said:

"This chain letter implies a threat or a bad omen. We'll look into it. But without a request for money in the letter, there is little we can do in the way of investigation for the ultimate goal of prosecuting the originator.

Nemic said a clue to the sender of the letter often lies in the list of names enclosed. The receiver of the letter is expected to sign his name to the list and cross off the first name. Mrs. Dunn said she did not know any of the people named on the list sent to her. She said she would not answer the letter.

Applications Being Accepted

WANTED: Manager For HN Improvement Project

Councillor Leo J. Kelly, Joseph Shea, executive secretary to Hannon; and Geoffrey A. Davidson, director of Planning and Community Development.

Formed to recruit the staff for the Houghs Neck Project, the Steering Committee will accept manager applications until Thursday, May 1. Resumes can be sent to the planning department.

The committee will begin candidate interviews within the next few weeks and will then make recommendations to the Mayor.

Stressing the importance of community involvement in the program, Davidson said the program's manager must not only possess "technical knowledge of rehabilitation and finance" but must also have "the ability and interest to work with area residents."

Options now being discussed with Houghs Neck residents include formation of a Neighborhood Policy Committee to assist in program development and a Loan Committee to administer the home improvement loans.

The committee hopes to recruit an entire staff and to begin the program by the first part of July. The staff will work out of a Houghs Neck office site yet to be determined.

Finance Committee Resumes Budget Pruning Saturday

The City Council's Finance Committee will try again Saturday to cut Mayor Walter Hannon's proposed $69,512,937 city budget.

The committee, headed by Councillor John J. Quinn, went through 18 of the smaller departments last Saturday and found only $5,000 to prune from the assessors budget.

"It has been tight up to this point," said Quinn. "But there is some fat in other areas. We'll still cut a few hundred thousand dollars before we are through with it.

Departments scheduled to begin a close look Saturday starting at 10 a.m. are planning, board of appeals, licensing board, police department, fire department, fire alarm, animal control and harbor master.

QUESTIONS WOMEN ASK Why are some girls tomboys?

By ELEANOR B. RODGERSON, M.D.
Copley News Service

Q. Do some girls have more male hormones than they should?

A. The amount of male-type (androgenic) and female-type (estrogenic) hormones in a given woman varies — from person to person, from day to night, throughout the month, under stressful situations. It is obvious that some females are better at sports than others and some develop more muscles and more aggressive attitudes than others. Hormone levels in all kinds of women have not been thoroughly tested.

We know that where there are irregularities in the menses and sometimes absence of menses, along with the male-type distribution of hair over the body, there is an increase in androgenic hormones. Obesity is also present. This picture may be seen when there is a tumor of the adrenal gland, near the kidney, and when there are enlarged ovaries with thick coverings that prevent ovulation.

The abnormal cases have been studied because women complain of irregular periods, or wonder why they are not able to get pregnant. The hormone levels of cases

Q. If a mother has a gonorrheal infection that she does not know about and it goes untreated, does she have to worry about the health of her baby?

A. If a mother has an undiagnosed gonorrheal infection, the bacteria causing it are probably located in the cervical glands. When the cervix dilates during labor to let the baby through, these glands may free the bacteria which then can infect the baby's eyes as the baby passes through the birth canal. For this reason the law requires application of silver nitrate, or antibiotic, to the baby's eyes to keep them free of infection.

Q. Is it all right to wash my hair during my menstrual period?

A. Of course. Nearly every woman notices changes during the menstrual period. Hair seems oilier and stringier. Keeping it clean boosts morale and is just as important as bathing the rest of the body.

Today's Women

Bride needs a timetable

The bride is always beautiful; everyone knows that. What isn't known is exactly how she manages it considering the drama, the trauma, the exhausting days she spends before her wedding day.

The solution is simplicity itself: a practical bride's guide that schedules her activities so she gets them done on time and enjoys herself all the while. After all happiness is her privilege those busy, pre-wedding days.

To keep every bride frown-free and carefree right up to the altar, here is a "calendar of events."

Three Months Before the Big Day:

1. Decide upon the type of wedding, whether formal or informal.
2. Consult with your clergyman to arrange necessary details.
3. Make up your guest list, consult with the bridegroom's family.
4. Make arrangements for reception, catering and music.

5. Choose your bridal party; order your bridal gown and plan what the bridesmaids will wear.
6. Select your silver pattern as well as your china and crystal, and register your choices with your jeweler.

7. Decide on decor and furnishings for your new home or apartment.

Two Months Until W-Day:

1. Order your invitations, announcements and personal stationery.
2. Buy now what you will need and use for your trousseau.
3. Set a date for wedding rehearsal and arrange for rehearsal supper.

One Month to Go:

1. Address and mail invitations.
2. Buy gifts for attendants and bridegroom, and make plans for luncheon for your attendants.
3. Try to have your friends give showers now, and then finish your shopping for lingerie, linens and household furnishings.
4. Check up on outfits for bridal party, and have fittings on your wedding gown. Arrange for photographer to be present at final fitting.

RADIANT BRIDES — For the 1975 bride who chooses to be wed in white there is a delightful array of traditional gowns in lace, organza and satin, accented in individual design and trim.

5. Buy your bridegroom's wedding ring and he should get yours. Go with him to apply for a marriage license, and have the necessary premarital medical examinations.

6. Remind bridegroom to order boutonnières and flowers for wedding party and for the two mothers.

7. Consult your caterer about reception menu and cake. Take up the matter of decoration with the florist.
8. Arrange for accommodations for out-of-town guests.

1. Send wedding announcement to the local paper, including the formal portrait that was taken at your final bridal gown fitting.

2. Check on the arrival of gowns, trousseau items.
3. Make a beauty shop appointment for wedding hairdo.

4. Have bridesmaids' luncheon.
5. Put your gifts on display. Be as prompt with your gift acknowledgements as you can.

6. Pack uncrushables when you have free time, and spend leisure time with your family.

The Day Before:

1. Tell someone your honeymoon itinerary, and arrange for someone to check your new home while you are gone.
2. Go to hairdresser's early, and then to wedding rehearsal and dinner.
3. Check your luggage and go to bed early.

Who stands in the line

First in the receiving line at the reception is the mother of the bride. Next to her stands the mother of the bridegroom. Her son is next to her with his new bride at his right. Next to the bride is the maid or matron of honor, followed by the bridesmaids. Fathers of the bride and bridegroom may or may not stand in the receiving line. They have a choice. The best man and ushers should not stand in the line to welcome guests.

STRICTLY PERSONAL Girlfriend nags him on parents

By PAT and MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
My girlfriend has been hussling me about my parents. They are older and I help them financially. I generally see them twice a week. My mother was 45 and my father 50 when I was born. They raised me with much love and tenderness. I can't tell you how great they are.

My girlfriend wants me to devote all my time to her and has intimated that she may not date me again if I don't spend more evenings with her. She feels that I am devoting my life to my parents. She said that I would end up caring for them until they died and then I would be all alone. I am now 25. How can I answer her arguments? Mel

Dear Mel:
This little lady sounds possessive and domineering. Don't let her maneuver you. You can get a new girl, but you can't get new parents. By the way, you sound like a special person. You deserve more than this gal is capable of giving you.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
I don't know how to explain what happens to me when I get mad. I seem to lose all sense of reason. Perhaps an example will help you understand just how mad I can get. Last week my husband stayed out until 2 a.m. after bowling. It must have been the fortieth time. I know that he went to the local bar and drank. By the time he arrived home, I was so furious that the people in the next block must have heard me yelling. I finally threw half of my dishes at him.

I don't want to be like this. My husband is gone a lot and I am home alone so much that it seems to make me very nervous. Can you help? Please don't use my correct name. M.L.

Dear M.L.:
You realize that you have a problem and that is half the battle. Much of your anger seems to stem from the fact that you are alone so much of the time. I would suggest that both of you see a counselor. In the meantime, get out of the house. Nothing is worse than staring at four walls all of the time. Volunteer your services to the Red Cross, your local church or hospital, or join a self-improvement class. Good luck.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
We live in a small town and I made a terrible mistake. A friend told me that the mayor's daughter had gone to the next town to have an abortion. Another friend called that afternoon and I repeated the story. A few hours later another friend called and asked me for more details. My first friend had talked to everyone she knew! Do you think I should contact these people and tell them to keep silent? The story may not be true. What do you think? Town Fool

Dear Town Fool:
You've talked enough. Do not call these women. Keep the following quotation in mind: I regret often that I have spoken; never that I have been silent. — Syrus

Bike Riders Are Guilty

You hear of a motorist striking a child on a bike and what's your reaction? Usually a slight outrage against the motorist. The surprising truth is that in bike-car collisions, the driver is seldom at fault. Fully 80 percent of the bike riders killed by cars are clearly in the wrong. They are struck down because they violate a traffic rule. Parents of bike-riding children should take note of this fact. Teach them traffic regulations and insist they obey them. In most communities, bicycles are in the same class as automobiles and subject to the same rules of the road. Bike riders must obey all traffic signals and signs. There should be no sneaking through red lights. At busy intersections a child should get off his bike and walk it across. Cyclists must ride in single file on the far RIGHT of the road. Riding on the left, facing traffic, is definitely more dangerous according to all surveys.

Mayor Burgin Eyes Bid For Lt. Governor

Mayor Thomas Burgin was mentioned this week as a possible candidate for the post of Lieutenant Governor on the Republican ticket.

Burgin said that there was support for South Shore representation on the state ticket. It was noted that in the past the South Shore had furnished few candidates for top-of-the-ticket positions.

Burgin said he was not only thinking in terms of the lieutenant governorship, but was also taking the long view and was looking two years ahead to the governor's office.

If Burgin did decide to run for the Lieutenant Governorship, it was speculated that his running mate for Governor would most likely be ex-Lieutenant Governor Arthur Coolidge or former Dist. Atty. Clarence Barnes.

Tobin Decides Not To Run should be over and above personal interests.

 "I feel, rather than have four candidates possibly becoming involved in personalities which I abhor because this would sidetrack the real issues of the campaign I believe I can best serve my city at this time by working with my colleagues on the City Council to help achieve the goals for a better city. As

City Council President and vice-chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee I believe I can obtain the most favorable budgetary and financial help for Quincy.
 "It is with this sincere interest that I shall continue my total cooperation with the office of the mayor whomever he or she may be.
 "I have an excellent repore with the three leading candidates and by removing myself from any possible personality clashes, this will help me be a more effective voice both on the local and state level.

 "Perhaps at some time in the future if I can continue to merit the trust and confidence of the residents of Quincy I would be most proud to serve as their mayor."

Hannon Calls Forced Busing 'Cruel Hoax'

 him and his office. You demonstrated this same respect."

At the same time, Hannon decried the behavior of "another group who also disagreed with the Senator," calling the actions of this group "a shocking display of anarchy."

"I don't have to tell you what happened to our embarrassment," said Hannon. "A United States Senator was badly treated in Quincy."

Hannon said some citizens might applaud the treatment Senator Kennedy received. But Hannon warned:

"Ask yourself one simple question. Who will be the next victim? The answer is maybe it's me. Or, maybe it's you. Maybe next year an unruly mob will decide that you're on the receiving end."

Hannon told the audience the crux of the forced busing issue is "being free". He said our country guarantees each citizen the freedom to live, to work and to worship where he chooses and to send his child to the school of his choice.

But the Mayor warned that this freedom must be guarded and protected by each citizen. He asked the audience:

"Have we deliberately given up our freedom? Have we been kidded into thinking that our liberty can be protected for us? You and I must protect it ourselves."

While vowing to uphold the laws of the country and state, Hannon asked the audience:

"But are some of our laws breaking up our community, weakening our family ties, destroying our independence?"

Rhetorically suggesting that forced busing could be "only a beginning of a social change that could sweep across the land," Hannon asked the audience:

"Did the doughboy who was gassed in the trenches of France, did the kids from Southie on the beach at Normandy or the boys who fought in Korea or Vietnam ever think for one minute that their Southie would one day be an armed camp? That we would surrender a basic community right in order to forcibly bus kids across town?"

He said it was perhaps time to wrest our freedom from the "experts" and "social engineers" who "tell us what's best for us."

"The social engineers of today make a lot of noise," said Hannon. "They hurt a lot of good, decent people, waste a ton of money and walk away leaving behind them ruin, and worst of all, bitter hatred for our fellow man."

Hannon said societal faults and difficulties could be corrected "in a just and equitable way" if the people want to again manage their own affairs.

"There are many ways that laws can be overturned, repealed for the general welfare," said Hannon. "...The state constitution is clear on the process of change. It is long and sometimes endless, but it is orderly."

$35,000 For Atlantic Self-Help Program

A total of $35,000 of Quincy's $985,000 federal neighborhood improvement grant has been designated for a housing self-help program in Atlantic.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon met Wednesday morning with Councillor Dennis Harrington, Planning Director Geoffrey Davidson, CETA Director Paul Ricca and Joanne Condon, president of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association to discuss plans for the implementation of the program.

Adams School Pupils To Re-enact Lexington Alarm

Pupils in the Adams School will take a step back into history Friday as they re-enact the 200th anniversary of the Lexington-Concord alarm at the birthplaces of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams.

Some 350 Adams pupils will assemble at the birthplaces at 9 a.m. Friday. At 9:15 Rick Haslett of 31 Berkeley St., will arrive on horse and bring orders bearing the call for the militia to report to Boston.

The event re-enacts the original ride on April 19, 1775 of Post rider Israel Bissel who left Watertown with the news of the minutemans' encounter with the British at Lexington.

 As Bissel rode through central Massachusetts he spread the alarm to the local militia to report to Boston.
 Bissel continued his ride through Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Philadelphia. Other riders rode north toward the New Hampshire border and others rode south toward Plymouth and Bristol counties.

When Haslett arrives at the presidents' birthplaces he will turn the orders over to Mayor Walter J. Hannon and Sen. Arthur H. Tobin who will have them read to the assembly by an Adams' School pupil.

The students will then break into song, led by music teacher Christine DeLuca, and sing "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and "Free America".

H. Hobart Holly, president of the Quincy Historical Society will explain to the assembly the significance of the event.

The children will sing a final song of "God Bless America" after which a fire and drum unit from the Quincy High School band will lead them on the march to Boston, although they will actually return to school.
 Quincy's part in the re-enactment is planned by Quincy Heritage and Dr. Henry Patterson, principal of the Adams School.

Ruth Gordon Steals 350th Anniversary Show

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Ruth Gordon stole the show at Quincy's 350th birthday dinner dance at the Chateau de Ville, Randolph, the other night.

One of the all-time stage greats, she still has the enthusiasm and bounce of a teenager. And that's quite a bounce considering she graduated from Quincy High School 61 years ago making her 78.

She got a standing ovation when she was introduced. And got the best laugh of the night when she recalled in her senior year she decided to become an actress disappointing her principal, Ernest Collins, who wanted her to go on to college.

"An actress?" someone asked her in disbelief. "Why, that's like being a harlot."

"Well," replied Ruth, "don't knock it unless you've tried it."

PAUL COMI who graduated from North Quincy High School in 1949 and who was also one of the invited guests, may return to Quincy later to do a little drama teaching in the Quincy school system. You can catch Paul in a number of TV shows. One of his most recent was a Barnaby Jones episode. He has also appeared in a number of movies.

ANOTHER NATIVE SON, Massachusetts Supreme Court Justice Paul Reardon sounded a battle cry: "It's time to get the Army out of Merrymount Park!" [The city wants the land returned for recreational purposes. We'll second the motion.]

HOW DO YOU like this for a cherished heirloom? Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of the Raytheon board chairman, wore a beautiful diamond ring to Quincy's anniversary ball. She was chatting with City Council President-Senator Arthur Tobin sitting beside her on the dais and he admired the ring.

She confided that it was the ring that John Adams gave to Abigail Smith when they were married. And Abigail was wearing that ring the day she held young John Quincy Adams on Penn's Hill, South Quincy, as they watched the smoke rising from the battle of Bunker Hill. Mrs. Adams said she only wears the ring on special occasions.

PAUL HAROLD will definitely be a City Council candidate this fall—this time at-large. He's expected to make it official early next month.

He's been around town the past few weeks rounding up support and apparently got it. Two years ago he was edged by Leo Kelly for the Ward 1 seat in one of the best battles on the ballot.

SABINA STENBERG, the beauty salon and beauty academy owner and former model, has councillor at-large auto bumper stickers around town although she hasn't officially announced yet. Unique stickers, too. They bear her first name only: Sabina. But then she's as well known in Quincy as Zsa Zsa is in Hollywood.

THERE MAY STILL be another woman candidate in the council at-large race. Mrs. Joyce Baker, president of the Women's Republican Club, is considering a bid.

WARD 3 Councillor John Lydon frankly admits that if there were two open at-large seats this year he would make a run for one of them. [But it doesn't look like there will be two open seats.]

Youth Speaks Out

- If you paid any taxes this year, you'll be getting a rebate - That leaves out the oil companies.
- Blacks are rapidly getting equal rights, like inflation, unemployment, etc.
- ROAR stands for Return Our Alienated Rights. What about the rights of Senator Kennedy - To Free Speech and the Right Not To Be Assaulted?
- Quincy High School Seniors petitioned to be released from school on May 16, as the other schools in the area are. The petitions worked and evidently so does the "System".
- You don't suppose the warm weather heard what happened to Senator Kennedy and decided not to come to Quincy.
- Overheard in the corridors: Where do you stand on forced busing? At the Bus Stop.

Quincy Priest Speaks Out For Death Penalty

It is threatening the lives of all of us as it strikes down with impunity even those whose task it is to protect us. Sociologists blame the factors in the backgrounds of men and women who turn to robbery and murder to avenge themselves upon the society that they maintain has wronged them.

We have listened to accusations against ordinary citizens who make up the bulk of our populace for perpetuating the social conditions that foster law breaking. At last in our legislature, the voices of these law abiding citizens are being heard through their representatives. They are demanding that another cause of the wave of violence and murder be properly explored—the law forbidding capital punishment.

The argument which in the first place led to the repeal of capital punishment was that the death penalty is not a deterrent to manslaughter and murder. Its advocates never offer the types of evidence usually advanced to support a point of view. Not the argument is merely stated over and over again. It is mouthed mindlessly by the idealistic young who have not had the years of living to tell them from personal experience how to distinguish truth from opinion.

If we break down experience into two parts, we have first of all the record for violent crime in the city and state before the death penalty ceased to be imposed and since. These are official figures and can be readily obtained by anyone who wishes to take the trouble to see the difference between the before and after picture. The enemies of capital punishment do not use these statistics. They avoid them because the contrast between the 150 murders anticipated this year in the city of Boston and the very few 20 years ago, strengthens our case, not theirs.

Yet we do not have to do that type of research. Many among us have distinct memories of a time when the streets were safe at all hours of the day and night. Young girls could travel on the public transportation system or walk home from work or an evening's entertainment without fear. They did not need to be equipped with personal belongings that could double as weapons or the kind of training in karate that numberless newspaper and magazine articles urge them to acquire.

Old men and women were not prisoners in their own homes, not only after dark but in broad daylight. The weak and helpless are now special targets. Their weakness and helplessness at one time offered them some degree of protection, for only a particularly brutal criminal would molest them. If one of them ever did become a victim, the public outcry was so great that it discouraged future attacks.

Now there are so many of these victims that very few of their stories reach the newspapers. Not all of them die and swell the incredible number of homicides. Many of them are maimed, tucked away in nursing homes, and eke out their days with the wounds that never healed, wounds of the spirit as well as the flesh.

A recent current series in one of the Boston newspapers reveals the tragedies of these broken lives. We have come from a time when a murder in the city would have the largest headlines and would leave the populace sick with horror to a day when three killings receive just that many lines on page 20 in the lower corner. The completely numbed citizenry pass over it all as a commonplace. Those of you who are too young to remember that we used to have a different climate at least know people who remember. Believe me, they are not making it up.

The other part of personal experience as it relates to the death penalty as a deterrent to crime really takes the form of a question. I ask it of each one of you. How much would you try to get away with if you thought something was going to happen to you as a result?

Would you actually leave your car in a tow area if you knew that it would be towed away at your expense? Would you take that sick leave day for personal business or pleasure if you knew that the company would find out and deduct a day's pay from the next check? We could multiply these questions.

The youngest child is aware that there are some things that will not be tolerated in his house; he has tried and he knows. He has not yet learned the word deterrent, but he understands that the last time he rode his bike out on the forbidden street he was not allowed to use it for five days afterwards. On the whole he decides that it is more fun to have the bike all the time on the safer streets that are within bounds.

This may be a far cry from the death penalty but the psychological principle is the same. If you are certain that you are going to be hurt as a direct result of the wrong you are tempted to do, you don't do it!

Implied in the theory that if the death penalty does not deter then it must be abolished is a deplorable philosophical attitude. It is that there should never be such a thing as punishment. Oh, yes, the opposition offers life imprisonment, but you and I know how long that lasts even without furloughs.

It is said that some lifers serve as little as eight years. Make no mistake, that opposition is moving against the idea of punishment at all. Are we willing to accept this? I say no for two reasons.

The first and most obvious is that to deny the validity of punishment is to turn the world over to those who are utterly without scruples. Without the sanction of punishment the law would be worthless. There are people who are governed by their conscience. When they transgress, they are plagued by such feelings of guilt that they really punish themselves, and they make a firm purpose of amendment. Law and punishment exist for those who have neither conscience nor remorse. If we do away with these twin safeguards, we are completely at the mercy of such people.

Furthermore as a Christian, I deplore the denial of the need for punishment. It lulls the glibble into the perilous belief that God's law can be broken as brazenly as man's law. They are led to equate God's wonderful mercy with the permissiveness that lies at the root of this modern approach to sin.

God is merciful—and, may He help us—we all need His mercy. But He is just also. Scripture abounds with evidence of His justice as it does with evidence of His mercy. We can ignore neither. If we are led into the grave error of denying His justice and presuming on His mercy, we are in a far greater danger than any physical one. The danger of losing our souls. When we permit criminals to take the lives of others and expect no commensurate punishment, are we not doing them an injustice on another level? Are we not pretending that they will not eventually face a higher tribunal where the stakes will not be life or death but salvation or damnation?

We as Catholics cannot be indifferent to this consideration. Those who do not share our faith may recognize it in another form. It is not unusual for a young adult whose life has been ruined by the overindulgence of parents to reproach them with the demand: "Why didn't you make me do the right thing?"

Should we not therefore bring our state laws into keeping with the traditional belief in the function of punishment? Those who oppose capital punishment are appalled at the thought of the electric chair. They play upon the emotions of the public by picturing for us the horrors of such cruelty. They should ride the ambulances with the police. They should take a long hard look at the body of a girl who has been raped and strangled or the remains of a man who was killed by a sawed off shot gun.

They should observe well the appearance of someone who has been shot in the face or who has had of multiple stab wounds. Then they should be reminded that these dead were innocent. They had committed no crime! Some of them had simply been in the way, and this is the punishment they received.

A man who finds capital punishment repulsive may be a kindly man and well-intentioned, but he must ask himself whether his stand has contributed to the pain of victims and the anguish of widows, orphans, and bereaved families.

We are reaching a state of crisis, and each one of us has the obligation to form a right conscience on the issue. Now it comes down to a simple question: are we on the side of the criminal or on the side of the victim?

As Christians can we allow the untold sufferings of hundreds, even thousands of people, especially the poor, the weak, and the old, to go unnoticed? Can we say to them, "We can do nothing for you. We are too busy caring for those who brought about your misfortune?"

THE WORLD OF MUSIC Benny Goodman's 1930's Hits On 2-Record Album

Benny Goodman was swinging with a big band years before Glenn Miller, Harry James, Woody Herman, Artie Shaw and the others came along. Goodman put his first band together in 1931 and, by 1935, he was recording for Bluebird-Victor at the start of the swing era.

A superb clarinetist who in the 1970s still can play with the best of them, Goodman had some great sidemen in his band, including the legendary Bunny Berigan who was drunk most of the time but could still play a trumpet better than anyone else around. Others who played with Benny included pianist Teddy Wilson, drummer Gene Krupa, Jack Teagarden on trombone, Toots Mondello on alto sax, vocalist Helen Ward, Pee Wee Erwin on trumpet, and jazz pianist Jess Stacy.

They recorded songs like Irving Berlin's "Blue Skies," Johnny Green's "Body and Soul," Creamer-Layton's

"After You've Gone," Jimmy McHugh's "Hooray for Love," Berlin's "Always," and Jelly Roll Morton's "King Porter Stomp." These and many other 1930s hits are included in a two-record set that is part of the Bluebird series that RCA now is releasing. The recording quality is excellent, which is quite a tribute to the sound techniques of that era.

★ Sounds like Lani Hall has arrived as an artist in her "Hello It's Me" album for A&M Records. Lani was the lead singer with Brasil '66 when she still was a teen-ager and stayed with the group for six years before cutting out on her own. In her A&M album she demonstrates that she has achieved artistic control of the great voice she was born with. As Lani herself says: "I've opened up now." The LP was produced and arranged by her husband, Herb Alpert. A smooth combination.

Happy Birthday, Quincy, 350 Proud

A COUPLE OF Ward 5 representatives get acquainted at Quincy's 350th anniversary dinner. Famed actress Ruth Gordon who grew up in Wollaston chats with Ward 5 Councillor Warren Powers.

"IN THE MOOD" was the name of the song and these dancers were just that at Quincy's 350th anniversary dinner and ball.

Speech Team Shines At U-Mass

By SUSAN BARRY

On March 29 four N Q students, Tony Poole, Susan Barry, Dana Cetlin, Cathy Devine and one teacher, Miss Elizabeth Cullinan attended the State Speech Contest at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

Over 200 students from all over Massachusetts qualified for this contest. Each student had to have a certain amount of points to qualify.

Students competed in three rounds, with the exception of Boy's and Girl's Extemp, Original Oratory and Dramatic Interpretation which had a final fourth round.

Tony Poole, a junior, qualified for the final round in Dramatic Interpretation. He read the piece "Afraid of the Dark" by William E. Callahan. Tony came out first in the finals. He is now the Mass. representative in Dramatic Interpretation, eligible to enter the National Speech Contest in Indianapolis. Tony also won a Gold Medal for first place in the regular three rounds of competition.

Susan Barry, a sophomore, read the story "How the Grinch Stole Christmas" by Dr. Seuss, in the Children's Literature category. Susan placed third and received a Bronze Medal. She later exclaimed, "For the first time, I'm actually speechless!" Dana Cetlin, also a junior, did an excellent job in his reading of "Nixon Talks to God/I never danced at the Whitehouse" by Art Buchwald in the category of prose reading.

Cathy Devine, who usually participates in Prose Reading, did not compete in this contest, but came along to cheer on North Quincy's contestants.

The coach of the speech team, Miss Elizabeth Cullinan, gave support and guidance in preparing all speeches. We all thank you Miss Cullinan for making the N.Q. Speech Team what it is today. The outcome of this contest was an unexpected pleasure!

Concentration Of Wealth Gives Cause For Concern

By Philip J. Lawrence
President

Colonial Federal Savings
And Loan Association
of Quincy, Holbrook and Wareham
8-6 Weekdays 8-7:30 Thursdays

If you have a net worth of $60,000 or more, you belong to a highly exclusive group representing only about 4.4 per cent of America's total adult population.

This is one of many revelations uncovered by researchers of the Urban Institute from hitherto inaccessible data of the Internal Revenue Service.

The Urban Institute is a Washington based organization whose board of trustees includes such familiar names as Governor William Scranton, Katherine Graham [Washington Post], Dr. Edward Levi [University of Chicago], Stanley Marcus [Dallas' Neiman-Marcus], Robert S. McNamara, and John D. Rockefeller IV.

In 1969 the small group of persons worth in excess of $60,000 owned an estimated 35.6 per cent of the nation's wealth, according to the Urban Institute study.

The data were derived from Federal estate tax returns that are required on the death of persons with gross assets of $60,000 or more. Using actuarial tables showing probability of death at different ages, the researchers worked backward from the known ages of persons represented in the estate tax files to reconstruct a cross-section of the living population of what they call the "super rich". As the Institute report notes, this estate multiplier method is not new.

The figures emerging from this projection show that if the nation's total wealth in 1969 of $3.5 trillion had been divided evenly in America, every adult 21 or over would have possessed $25,000 in net worth. An estimated one-half of the population would have been worth no more than $3,000 if they sold all their assets and paid all their debts.

Those in the millionaire class, accounting for eight-hundredths of one per cent of the adult population, held 8.1 per cent of the wealth.

The study further pointed out that the 4.4 per cent "super rich" group held 27 per cent of all privately held real estate, 33 per cent of cash holdings, 63 per cent of privately held corporate stock, 78 per cent of state and local bonds, etc.

As the Urban Institute notes in its publication, SEARCH, from which these figures are drawn, "the studies so far provide new insights into the degree of wealth concentration within the United States. These insights, in turn, can be helpful in dealing with the mounting questions and concern about the distribution of well-being among the population, about the fair sharing of the nation's tax burdens, and about the concentrations of political power—because the extent of the concentration of wealth has a bearing on each of these issues."

This is a legitimate concern for every American, regardless of his economic rank, who sees in this picture a growing danger to the political system he has cherished.

Square Dancers Honor Arthur Nurse As 'King Of The Callers'

By JANE McDONALD

Arthur Nurse of 12 Randlett St., Wollaston, was recently honored by the "Square Saints", a square-dancing club located at Kramer's Hayloft, 455 Union St., South Weymouth.

The "Square Saints" were celebrating the club's 13th anniversary and surprised Nurse, their caller with a "This Is Your Life" night for him. He has been calling for them for 11 years. Many visitors and callers came from various clubs to take part in this special event.

Don Magnusson, president of the club, and Mrs. Barbara Leslie, dance committee chairwoman, surprised Nurse as he called tips for the dancers, announcing "This Is Your Life". Lou Pumphrey, master of ceremonies, led the group through Nurse's life story.

Art and his wife, Dorothy, have lived in Quincy since their marriage 28 years ago. They have two children, a daughter Carol and a son, Arthur, [Larry]. Their son and wife, Janice, have one child, Arthur L. Nurse III. Arthur has been in the lumber business for 30 years and is currently employed at Barney & Carey Lumber Co. as a buyer. His life as a square dancer began in 1959 when he and his wife took lessons from a friend, Wilbur Larson, who was on hand to take part in the ceremonies.

A year later, Art felt he would like to become a caller so he went to Square Acres where the late Edith Murphy taught him how to call. After many hours of practice Art was put on the staff of callers at Square Acres. Howard Hogue, caller and owner of the Square Acres Dance Hall, West Bridgewater, was also present at the surprise honors night.

In 1962 Art began teaching others how to call and passed on a special system which he had learned and mastered from the late Dick Tilly. Among the callers attending the dance, 12 had been personally taught by Arthur.

In 1964 the "Square Saints" secured Arthur as their club caller and he has remained there ever since.

Jack McLeod, a past president, presented both Art and Dorothy with a crown and Art was given the title "King Arthur" — the King of Callers. The club presented them with a certificate to the Sheraton-Tara restaurant. Dorothy was presented with a bouquet of flowers.

Peggy Dartin, an entertainer, sang.

The committees included Ken and Barbara Leslie, Lou and Barbara Pumphrey, Don and Doris Magnusson, William and Barbara Beck, Charles and Doris King, Ray and Ellie Palumbo, John and Betty O'Brien.

QJC Baseball Team Playing Independent Schedule

The Quincy Junior College baseball team, which won the Mass. Junior College Conference title each of the past three years, is playing an independent schedule this year but Coach Dave Burke hopes to qualify for the District 21 [New England] Jr. College playoffs.

QJC took a 2-2 record into yesterday's [Wednesday] game with powerful Bentley College which last week scored 33 runs in two successive game. Friday the Collejuns will play at Worcester Jr. College and Tuesday will host the same team. Next Thursday QJC will play at Graham Junior College.

The Collejuns evened their record Monday with an easy 12-4 win over Graham.

Jim Rogers pitched the first four innings and got his second win in three starts. Bruce Kantola pitched two and Jack Raymer the final inning. Mike Devine continued his consistent batting with two more hits, Ted Meyer had two, Raymer hit a tremendous triple and Charlie Genovese a double.

Last Friday errors proved fatal as Quincy dropped a 5-3 decision to Boston University despite a fine pitching effort by Kantola. Devine and Meyer had two hits each.

Earlier last week QJC, which had dropped a 2-0 decision to Massasoit Community College in its opener, rebounded to bomb Wentworth, 10-2.

Rogers, from Hyde Park, is the number one pitcher. He had an excellent 1974 season, pacing Quincy to a third place finish. The team then swept two straight games to win the playoffs. The two previous years QJC has finished second but won the playoffs.

Behind Rogers are Bruce Contola of Hingham and Quincy's Raymer, who plays third when not pitching.

At first base Genovese of Hingham is back, Ken Baumeister of Weymouth has returned to second base and John Murphy of Quincy is the shortstop.

Other infielders are Vernon Wilkens of Weymouth and George Fennell, who played at Boston English.

Also in the outfield are three Quincy players, Paul Wainwright, Paul Flynn and Rich Colletti.

"If our pitching holds up, we should do all right," Burke said.

Quincy Rugby Team Rolls, 13-0

The Quincy Rugby Club remains undefeated and takes a 2-0-1 record into Saturday's game in Boston against the Boston University Rugby Club. Quincy rolled over St.

Anselm's College 13-0, last Saturday as Paul Ranelli scored twice by carrying excellent passes from Billy Carroll into the end zone. Colin Riley added a conversion and a penalty kick to round out the scoring.

Quincy Netmen In Tough Suburban League

Bill Mitchell is beginning his 17th year as Quincy's tennis coach and he expects plenty of trouble as the Presidents enter the tough Suburban League.

Quincy has been in a variety of leagues during Mitchell's tenure and last spring finished second in the Independent League.

"We are in a real tough league this year with Brockton and Newton in particular always in the running for state and New England titles," said the veteran coach.

Mitchell is building around eight veterans, Dennis McCarthy, Kevin Sullivan, John Pagnano, John and Joe Rice, Dave Kerman, Michael Menconi and Steve Feldman.

Other hopefuls are Steve Aristide, Michael Lee, Paul Tappen, Andy Duncan, Jon Wilbur, Pat Foley, Peter DiBona and Peter DiSalvio.

Quincy, which hosts Brookline today [Thursday] and plays at North Quincy next Tuesday, has depth and ability and averages about four years experience.

"This group is very similar to our 1965 team which won state honors," Mitchell said. "This group has more ability and talent than any other team in recent years. It is a dedicated group and some of our top eight have played indoors off and on all winter, especially McCarthy, who is our definite number one singles player. Our seniors have been together for three years."

Meanwhile, Bill Willoughby's North netmen got off to a good start in its NW league by blanking Rindge Tech, 5-0, last week. The Raiders have several veterans in the lineup.

In singles Dan Lewis, Paul O'Malley and Mike Lewis won their matches and sweeping the doubles were John Powell and Dan Finn, Ron Colon and Ed Courts.

North plays at Cambridge Latin today and is home to Quincy Tuesday.

"We have some fine hitters and should score our share of runs. Genovese, Raymer, Baumeister, Devine and Meyer in particular look good at bat."

QJC plays all its home games at O'Rourke Field.

Bob Johnson of Quincy is the team manager.

"In fact, it would be to my advantage to have them running track. There are a lot of reasons why the basketball players are not on the track team. Some are working, others are working toward getting their drivers' licenses and there are other factors.

"And, certainly I would never try to talk a boy out of taking part in track or any other spring sport if their parents approved of them competing. I'd have to answer to these parents."

Raised By Quincy Residents

$1,603 Donated To St. Coletta's In Memory Of James Coriary

St. Coletta's Day School in Braintree has received $1,603.27 in funds raised by Quincy residents to honor the memory of the late James Coriary.

Coriary, former owner of a variety store at the corner of Washington and River Sts., Quincy Point, died of lung cancer in October at the age of 60. One month later, a memorial fund was established in his honor.

Trustees of the fund were Carl Soderstrom of 7 Germaine

Ave., Quincy Point, Rev. Joseph Downey, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Quincy Point and Rev. Ronald Cebik, of Quincy Point Congregational Church.

A total of $803.27 was donated to the fund established in South Shore National Bank. Coriary's sister Mabel then donated $800 to the fund, bringing the grand total to $1,603.27. It was decided to donate the funds to a charity or agency.

Soderstrom, who began the fund, said he wanted the memory of James Coriary to live on. He said Coriary was the kind of man who welcomed all types of people into his store and who gave advice to many young people frequenting the store.

Ken Jackson of 64 River St. was one of those young people who developed a strong friendship with Coriary. Jackson, along with Rev. Downey and Soderstrom, made the check presentation to Sister M. Johnice, supt. of St. Coletta's Day School.

Addresses Kiwanis Club

Tight Budget Will Mean Minimal Tax Hike Says Hannon

Mayor Walter J. Hannon told a gathering of Quincy Kiwanians Monday the city "could not afford the luxury of allowing fat in the budget" this year.

Hannon, the second mayoral candidate to address the Quincy Kiwanis Club in its "Meet The Candidate" series, said: "This is the tightest budget the City Council has ever received. There's nothing for them to cut."

Hannon said tradition has it that a budget goes to the City Council and is trimmed down there, with the pruning credit going to the Council. But Hannon said:

"We couldn't afford the luxury of allowing fat in the budget this year."

The mayor said this tight budget, coupled with what he termed "tough decisions", should result in "a minimal tax increase" for the next fiscal year.

"And what is minimal?" asked the Mayor, anticipating the logical question.

"We'd like to see it as a zero tax rate increase but we'll have to wait for the state revenue—the so-called cherry sheets. But it's not going to be some gigantic increase like the ones we've been hearing about around the state," he said.

Hannon said one "tough decision" which will help to stay the tax rate was the combined collection of garbage and trash begun in July 1974. The mayor said that decision, unpopular as it was, saved the city $560,000 and some $2.50 on the tax rate.

A second savings resulted, Hannon said, when he refused to grant retroactive pay increases to the Quincy City Hospital nurses, despite threats of resignation. A total of $300,000 representing $1.50 on the tax rate was saved, said the mayor.

Unlike other downtown shopping districts, Hannon said downtown Quincy "is not in trouble."

"Business is good," said Hannon. "Quincy is not dying."

But he said the absence of needed ramps, the South Quincy MBTA station and the Upland Rd extension could jeopardize the future of downtown Quincy. "No one looks downstream," said Hannon. "They look at what's going to happen in the next election. I represent the entire city of Quincy... It's a case of can we survive."

Hannon labeled a recent chorus of "Return to the People's Government" as a "cop-out on responsibility." Citing the recent multi-family housing conference attended by some 400 Quincy residents, Hannon said:

"People have input into their government," said Hannon. "But the decisions must be made by the executive and legislative branches."

Speaking of the city's fight to lower its current unemployment rate, Hannon said Quincy has held several successful job fairs. He said the encouragement of "intelligent and planned development" could also help ease the unemployment situation now and in the future.

"We've managed our affairs well," said Hannon. "We've made tough decisions. People are looking for leadership and not rhetoric... I feel I'd like to be Mayor of Quincy again," said Hannon.

In fielding audience questions, Hannon said the City Council's decision to renovate and build an addition at North Quincy High School was "an unsound decision for the city's educational plan."

"We are still faced with the problem of Central," said Hannon. "The walls are being pushed out because the roof is falling down."

Last month Hannon called Central Junior High School a fire-trap, dramatizing what could happen if the children were entrapped there with no exit in a school with wooden floors.

Hannon also said the city faces the prospect of double sessions for the first time in its history because a new North Quincy High School will not be built.

House Kills Brownell's Environmental Bill

BY RON IACOBUCCI

STATE HOUSE — The House last week defeated 122-81 Rep. Thomas Brownell's environmental bill. The Quincy Democrat's measure, H 1549, called for the imposition of civil forfeitures for violations of environmental laws. The bill was reported "ought not to pass" by the Committee on Natural Resources and Agriculture. On Monday, the committee report was accepted by the House, in effect killing the bill for the session.

However, the following day Rep. Brownell organized an effort for reconsideration. The attempt failed with Reps. Joseph Brett, Robert Cerasoli and William Delahunt voting in favor of reconsideration.

On another matter, the House gave initial approval for legislation to prohibit the sale of certain firearms and restricting the use of certain handguns known as "Saturday Night Specials". On the 150-72 roll call vote the Quincy delegation split 3-1 with Brownell, Cerasoli and Delahunt voting in favor of restricting handguns while Brett voted against the restriction.

Improving Your Basic Investment Makes Basic Banking Sense
 (With a No Strings Home Improvement Loan)

Let's face it; the economy has been somewhat unpredictable lately. About the only investment you can count on in addition to your savings account is the basic one you made when you bought your home. It's already increased in value, and it'll go on increasing as long as you take care of it. The more you put in, the more you'll get out. That's basic banking sense. And that's what a Home Improvement Loan from Quincy Bank is all about.

It's easy to apply for, and you pay only simple interest, which means interest is figured only on your outstanding balance. You can make your payments at any time during the month—and prepay your loan by any amount whenever you want. It's designed to make it easier and money saving for you. We keep our paperwork pretty basic, too. Instead of a coupon book, you get a simple, clear statement of your loan status every month.

School Committee Vote April 30

Day Care Early Release Program Appears Doomed

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Indications are a day care center's early-release cultural enrichment program will not receive School Committee approval but proponents plan to continue lobbying efforts for passage.

Despite strong School Committee objections to the program, Steven Zaidman, afternoon program director at South Shore Day Care Center, said "all hope is not yet lost."

The School Committee is expected to vote on the Center's early-release request at the April 30 meeting.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon said he planned to meet Wednesday afternoon with representatives of the South Shore Day Care Center to discuss the proposed program. He declined to comment on the program until he had learned all the facts about it.

The program, which triggered talk of 'forced busing' when discussed at the April 9 School Committee meeting, would involve the voluntary transportation of 87 Quincy Public School children to downtown Boston, Cambridge, Hospital Well Managed?

Hannon 'Welcomes' LaRaia Investigation Of Hospital

Mayor Walter J. Hannon, calling Quincy City Hospital "well-managed", said he "welcomes any investigation" City Councillor Joseph LaRaia would like to make.

LaRaia, chairman of the City Council's Hospital Committee and an announced candidate for mayor, said he will schedule a series of hearings "to determine the extent of problems at Quincy City Hospital."

Referring to a chief surgeon's recent complaint of inadequate instrument supplies at the Hospital, LaRaia said:

"The situation at the hospital is indeed grave when members of its professional staff feel compelled to speak out so strongly about the problems there."

Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, chief of surgery at Quincy City Hospital, said a list of needed operating instruments submitted last November has just been put out to bid. He said lack of surgical instruments has caused needless delays in the operating room while instruments used in one operation must be reprocessed for another operation.

LaRaia said he also wants to investigate the board of managers' request to transfer some $200,000 from its capital outlay account [used to purchase equipment] to its expense account to cover operating expenses.

The councillor, said he invited any member of the hospital staff to contact him or other Hospital Committee members to offer information for the planned hearings. He said, too, he plans to request the appearance of Hospital Director Harlan Paine, the board of directors and department heads at the hearings.

The Hospital Board of Managers indicated that increases in the costs of fuel, pacemakers and drugs have made the transfer of funds necessary.

The City Council had originally appropriated funds to the hospital to buy needed equipment and several Councillors object to the use of these equipment funds for operating expenses.

Hannon noted the transfer of monies from one fund to another "is not unprecedented in city government." Many departments transfer funds from "personnel services" to "capital outlay," he said. "This is the other way around," Hannon said.

Hannon said, however, he would scrutinize added transfer requests by the Hospital.

"Every lady in Quincy must live within a budget. So must the Quincy City Hospital," said Hannon. "The Hospital must use every single avenue within its own departments before I make a recommendation for a transfer of funds."

Public Hearing May 28 On S. Quincy MBTA Station

A joint public hearing will be held Wednesday, May 28 by the MBTA and the Mass. Department of Public Works on the Authority's application for a $21 million federal capital grant towards the construction of the proposed transit-highway project in South Quincy.

The project consists of a rapid transit station, parking garage, access ramps between Route 3 and the station, and a circulatory roadway for buses and kiss 'n' ride passengers.

The hearing will be held at Quincy Masonic Temple, 1170

Hancock St., Quincy Center. There will be two hearings - from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 7-11 p.m. - in order to give proponents and opponents ample time to express their views for the official record that will accompany the application to the Urban Mass. Transportation Administration, Department of Transportation, for the 80 per cent federal aid.

For the convenience of anyone planning to testify, a specific time can be arranged by calling the MBTA at 722-6595.

Finance Committee Tries Again To Cut Budget

The City Council's Finance Committee will hold its third pruning session Saturday in City Council Chambers in an effort to cut Mayor Walter J. Hannon's $69,512,937 proposed city budget.

Committee chairman John J. Quinn said major departments to be discussed at the 10 a.m. meeting include park and recreation, public works and health. The Committee will also complete its review of several departments scheduled for discussion last week.

So far, the Committee has found only $5,000 to prune from the assessor's budget but Quinn said "a few hundred thousand dollars" will be cut by the close of the sessions in mid-May.

A Little Good News

No Water Rate Hike

Mayor Walter Hannon announces there will be no increase in Quincy's water rate for 1975, despite information the MDC has increased its charges to the City by $40 per million gallons.

"This is a 100 percent increase in Quincy's water costs in two years," Hannon said. "In 1973 Quincy paid $120 per million gallons, with an approximate cost to us of $450,000. 1974 costs rose to $200 per million gallons, and the present cost in 1975 is $240 per million gallons, with an approximate cost to us of $900,000."

He said Quincy was forced to raise rates to consumers by 50 percent in 1974 to cover operating costs and payment to the MDC for water. However, he added, a computation of water department billings and projections for this year indicates departmental operation without a deficit or an increase.

"We are able to keep Quincy's rate at a low of 60 cents per 100 cubic feet [750 gallons] because of efficient operation and, more importantly, increased revenue produced by the installation of new water meters throughout the system."

"The new meters will insure that all pay their fair share for water consumed," he said. "Maintaining the present rate without an increase is doubly important in these times of high unemployment and current inflation."

Coloring Contest Winners To Be Announced May 1

Winners of the "Color The Boy For Whom Quincy Was Named" contest will be announced in next week's [May 1] issue of The Quincy Sun.

There are 30 prizes worth more than $200 in the coloring contest which was open to elementary school youngsters, from kindergarten to grade six. Prizes will be awarded at each grade level.

Five judges Wednesday began the task of selecting the winners from the 400 entries. The judges are:

Wilfred Nolan, Coordinator of Quincy Elementary School education; Carmen Ungar, art librarian Thomas Crane Public Library; Richard Purnel, Quincy Heritage graphics designer; David Leitch, president Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and Richard J. Koch, Quincy City Natural Resources Director

Purnel made the drawing which is the subject of the contest and which appeared in the April 10 issue of The Sun.

Purnel's drawing is based on, according to two sources, what is the only known portrait of Col. John Quincy for whom Quincy was named. It shows him as a boy.

The two sources are "Three Hundred Years of Quincy" published in connection with Quincy's Tercentenary celebration in 1925 and the book "Col. John Quincy, Master of Mount Wollaston" published in 1908.

The contest was a joint undertaking by The Sun, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and Quincy Heritage.

Quincy Junior College Keeps Tuition Fee From Rising

President Edward Pierce announces there would be no tuition increase for the 1975-76 school year.

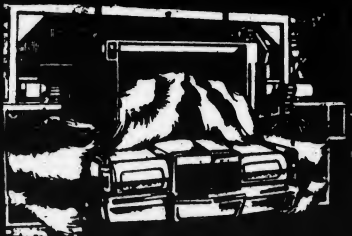

Pierce indicated that increasing enrollment has brought more revenue into the school while students, instructors, and administrators have pooled resources to conserve on energy use and unnecessary waste to prevent a tuition hike.

According to the College Scholarship Service, the cost of attending college will go up almost 12 per cent at most public institutions.

In the face of rising tuition costs throughout the state, Quincy Junior appears unique in its ability to maintain a high level of academic excellence with no increase in tuition.

Remodeling Since 1968

South Shore National Giving Downtown Property 'New Look'

The South Shore National Bank has become a leader among the business community in efforts to improve Quincy Center.

During the past seven years, the bank has remodeled much of its property. The last completed improvement was the Edson Shoe Store which re-opened March 1.

According to Carl Hanson, Vice President of Finance at the South Shore National Bank, "We have made it a goal to try to remodel each remaining storefront at the rate of one per year, until we complete the remodeling of the rest of our property."

Hanson said the South Shore National Bank has been working with Mayor Walter J. Hannon and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association to help in revitalizing the downtown area.

The bank began major remodeling of its property in 1968 when it converted what had been the Boston Gas Co. into its own office space. In 1971, the South Shore National completely refurbished the Winer Building which it bought. Master Charge, Installment loan and auditing departments were placed in this building as well as a new branch office of the bank for its customers, say Hanson.

In 1972-1973 the South Shore National remodeled Hart's Jewelry, the QCBPA office, Quinn Well Travel Agency and Bottom's Up.

"As our tenants' leases have expired, we have remodeled the space they occupied," said Hanson. "In each case, we completely razed the interior and remodeled the entire area. We put in new lighting fixtures, electrical systems, plumbing, heating systems, and air conditioning. New bronze aluminum fronts and rear entrances were built."

The bank, along with many businesspeople and Mayor Hannon has voiced concern over the "cluttered" appearance of signs on Hancock Street. Accordingly, the bank established the practice of placing storefront signs inside show windows in remodeled retail stores, Hanson said. In addition, the bank has removed all large and small billboards from the roofs of its property.

Charles E. Erban, President of Edson Shoe, the latest remodeled store, said he is "quite pleased with the improvements made."

"I think it has more customer appeal and attracts more shoppers," Erban said.

"The store has a whole new concept. We are oriented towards self-service now. I think the customers are quite pleased with it."

The bank consulted with the store over the layout of the interior and display areas.

South Shore National also consulted the Downtown Improvement Office and modified its plans for the exterior of the store to provide greater visual appeal.

In addition to the leadership provided by business community, Mayor Hannon and the City established an additional catalyst for revitalization with the federally funded Downtown Improvement Office. This office's intent is to provide services to smaller merchants who don't have the resources of the South Shore National according to Harvey Towvim, Director.

Some of the services are provided by an architectural firm, Kenneth Parry & Associates, hired by the Downtown Improvement Office to assist the Quincy Center property owners and merchants in their formulation of a set of guidelines for the physical improvement of Quincy Center. They assist business people by creating alternative remodeling and sign designs.

One of the architects worked with Mr. Erban over his new storefront sign and was quite helpful in developing sketches Erban said.

"Quincy Center is alive," said Erban. The improvements make shopping easier and attract more people."

Hospital Pathology Laboratory Awarded Accreditation

The Quincy City Hospital Pathology Laboratory, under the direction of Dr. Russell B. Street, Jr., has been awarded a certificate of accreditation by the College of American Pathologists.

The laboratory has successfully met the College's high standards of laboratory performance and the criteria of an intensive, on-site inspection by the examiner of the College.

A medical specialty organization of more than 6,000 pathologists, the College's accreditation program is recognized as one of the most outstanding medical peer evaluations in the world. Its goal is to promote the best possible laboratory performance through a program which examines and evaluates all phases of the lab's operation.

Commenting on Quincy City Hospital's acceptance into the program, Dr. Robert C. Horn Jr., president of the college, said: "This accreditation reflects credit to the institution and means assurance to patients and physicians of the accuracy and the precision of the laboratory's services."

Strong Friendships Develop

Central, Los Angeles Students In Coast-To-Coast Exchange Program

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Six California eighth graders said good-by Wednesday to six new-found Quincy friends, bringing to a close a coast-to-coast exchange program begun last month.

Designed as an exchange of customs, culture, environment and friendship, the program was planned by Central Junior High School Science Teacher William McWeeny and Frank Magusin, headmaster of the Harvard School for Boys in Los Angeles.

The two men met one year ago at Harvard University where both were enrolled in the School of Education, working toward master's degrees. The idea of an exchange sprouted and both began to outline plans for the event.

The first leg of the exchange began Tuesday, March 25 when Steve Fluhr, Peter Silverstein, Jim Martorano, Andy Orrock, Robert Welch and John Cunningham flew to Los Angeles accompanied by McWeeny. They were welcomed at Los Angeles International Airport by California hosts Peter Goldstein, William Holland, Jordan Bender, David Daniels, Mark Lundell and Eric Walter.

A whirlwind week on the West Coast began with a tour of the Huntington Museum where students examined artworks, botanical gardens and original manuscripts of Shakespeare, Chaucer and other authors.

The youngsters also visited the Southwest Museum to learn of the Indian culture in southwestern U.S.

An entire day was devoted to touring the famed San Diego Zoo and another day was spent at the Santa Barbara Mission where the Mission Fathers gave the boys insight into the Spanish heritage of western America.

Following church services that Sunday, the boys scoured the Pacific tide pools, examining the organisms and shells left at low tide.

The day before departure, the Quincy boys visited Harvard School and attended classes with their host student.

The second lap of the exchange began last Wednesday with the California students arriving at Logan Airport, renewing friendships with their Quincy hosts.

The next day, the students received an official welcome from Mayor Walter J. Hannon who spoke to the California students at Central Junior High School and made them honorary citizens of Quincy. Attending classes in the morning and visiting Quincy Vocational Technical School in the afternoon, the boys got together at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Silverstein, parents of Quincy host Peter Silverstein, a former Quincy Sun carrier, to see slides of their California trip.

Following a morning of classes Friday, the boys boarded a Boston-bound Red Line "T" train - a new experience for the California youngsters - then switched to the Green Line at Park Square, headed for the Museum of Fine Arts. There, the boys saw a new exhibit, "Paul Revere's Boston".

In the evening, they dined at famed Durgin Park on Boston's North Market St. then toured the Italian North End.

A tour of historic Quincy on Saturday brought them to United First Parish Church, The Adams birthplaces, Hancock Cemetery and Adams Academy.

Then it was back to Boston for lunch at McDonald's near Boston Common and a walk down Freedom Trail.

Later that afternoon, the boys visited Harvard University and toured the Fogg Art Museum.

At low tide Sunday morning, the boys investigated the New England tide pools, making a comparison between the East and West coast sea organisms.

Recalling the information gathered during their Pacific coast exploration, the boys discovered that fewer organisms grow in the New England waters due to the area's diverse climate. They learned that the more stable Pacific coast climate allows more varied and abundant growth with sea anemones measuring three to four inches wide. New England sea anemone, they learned, sometimes measures only one-half inch.

Monday was North Shore Day for the boys and the trip took them to Marblehead Harbor, the Salem Wharf House and to Rockport.

The day before departure, the youngsters traveled to Provincetown then backtracked along Cape Cod, stopping at National Seashore, the Sandwich Glass Museum and finally, Plimoth Plantation.

McWeeny said strong friendships had developed among the boys throughout the exchange and he wondered if some would continue.

"The kids were matched with the same kids here as they were in L.A.," said McWeeny. "Strong friendships developed and I wonder what will happen when 3,000 miles separates them."

California here I come? Or, Massachusetts here I come? Time will tell.

There's no need to rush

By PAT And MARILYN DAVIS

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
Why do my parents insist that I wait six months before I marry Craig? I've known him for two months and Mom feels that this isn't long enough. I am 19 and Craig is 21, so we are adults.

To make matters worse Dad sides with Mom. How can I make them see that things move faster than when they were young? How do you modernize two people who are almost 50 years old.

Dear Modern:
We may be modern with flip-top cans and push-button sprays but you can't rush knowing another. If you want a wear-ever marriage, listen to Mom and Dad.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
My mother is very unfair. Last night I went to a slumber party. The girl had five of us spend the night and we had a lot of fun. This morning when we folded our sleeping bags, I found some ink on the carpet. It came out of my new pen. It is not my fault that it leaked so I just came home.

The next day my friend called and her mother is mad because of the spilled ink. I told my mother that it was an accident but she says that I must go to my friend's house, apologize, and pay to have the spot removed. Please tell my mother that it was NOT my fault.

Dear Beth:
Sorry, but I agree with your mother. You were wrong to take off without mentioning the ink stain. Next time don't cop out.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
This letter is probably the 500th on the subject, but someone has to have an answer. I am a young mother, divorced and dating. Every man that I go out with seems to feel that I am fair game. The lines that a divorcee hears are not to be believed. It is ridiculous. Men seem to feel that if you have been divorced you are a loser and in desperate need of a bed partner. Why is this? Am I just running into a streak of bad luck? I have a friend who is also divorced and she has had the same problem. Can you give us an answer?

Nameless:
I think that, as you say, you have run into a streak of bad luck. All men do not wish to take advantage. Just because a woman has been married does not mean that she will be a willing bed partner. Your own attitude makes a great deal of difference. If a man sees that you are out to have a fun evening, not a motel visit, he'll generally accept it. Men who only want to hop in and out of bed aren't much of a bargain.

One suggestion is to join a political group, a church organization, or go back to school. In this way, you are apt to meet people with similar interests.

COOKING CORNER

Chicken dish a favorite

By SUSAN DELIGHT
Copley News Service

Chicken is one of the most international of the world's meats.

Besides being versatile, chicken now has the added asset of being among the more economical meats.

DIJON CHICKEN

- 1/4 cup Dijon mustard
- 2 tablespoons minced shallots
- 1/4 teaspoon tarragon leaves, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon liquid hot pepper sauce
- 5 tablespoons melted margarine
- 1 (2 1/2-pound) frying chicken, cut up
- 3/4 cup fine dry bread crumbs

In small bowl, blend together mustard, shallots, tarragon, hot pepper sauce and 1 tablespoon melted margarine. Spread mixture over chicken pieces. Coat with bread crumbs. Arrange chicken pieces in baking dish. Drizzle remaining four tablespoons melted margarine over chicken.

Bake at 375 degrees F. about one hour, or until done. Makes four servings.

NEW TASTE - Savory Dijon Chicken, an Americanized version of a French classic, lends a new taste to the economy meat.

STITCHING WITCHERY

New life for old sweater

How does your long-sleeve cardigan from the 60's look today? Not too terrific, right?

Give it new life and add a pretty put-over to your wardrobe. Trim the neckline of the sweater to the style you like — v-neck, scoop, or round. Finish cut edges by turning 1/4 inch to OUTside and basting.

Over this edge attach a row of pretty trim (braid, embroidery or ruffle). Cut off the sleeves to an attractive short length. Finish edges with same trim.

Leave bottom of sweater as is or shorten then add a stretch trim that co-ordinates with the neck and sleeve trim.

Slip this pretty new creation over a long-sleeve shirt. For added personality, scatter small appliques or motifs over the entire sweater.

What do you do with an old mini half-slip that doesn't come to where it should? Reincarnate it with lace trim. By adding a wide, lingerie lace to the bottom of the slip, it will meet today's demands for longer fashions.

Asparagus first used as medicine

Nobody is sure of the origins of asparagus but it is known that it was cultivated in the eastern Mediterranean area for over 2,000 years.

The Romans and Greeks prized the vegetable for what they believed were its medicinal qualities — they thought it would prevent bee stings and cure toothaches — long before they used it for food. — CNS

OUR CHILDREN

Mom feels guilty about working

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM

Q. If we are to make ends meet, I have to work to help support our family. We have three children, and I've always said I wanted to be at home until the youngest is of school age. He is now only 4.

I've been offered a very good job, but I feel guilty about accepting it. Can you give me any advice?

A. If there is a well-operated nursery school available to you, your feeling of guilt really should go away. But check out the preschool very carefully — its programs, personnel and facilities.

There is some research indicating that the children of working mothers are actually better adjusted than those of nonworking mothers. Of course, that wouldn't be true in every family. However, it could be so in yours if you need the job, enjoy it, plan to spend time with your youngster anyway, and he's well cared for during the day.

Q. Is it really important to read to young children? I get so tired of reading the same old stories. I'll have to admit that our 2-year-old loves them. He even knows some of them almost by heart, but they're so dull and tiresome for me.

A. Yes, it is of value to read to young children, but not to the point where it's a burden on the parent. One approach is to have the parents take turns. Unless there's some adult interest and enthusiasm brought to the reading, it can become a bore for both grownup and young child.

Another way to relieve the burden a bit is to make a deal with your little boy. "I'll read this one you love if I then read this other beautiful (exciting, wonderful) one." Then, after a time or two the latter selection may also become a favorite.

Experts in this field feel that reading to young children is an important step in their learning to enjoy reading themselves, so please try not to give it up.

Carol Lee Griffin, Director of Pupil Personnel Services for Quincy, along with representatives from the Office for Children and South Shore Mental Health will be present at tonight's topic, 766. The full list of topics and dates follows:

Stay Alive!

Heed Small Craft Warnings

According to the Coast Guard, knowingly taking a small craft out despite the fact that bad weather threatens is unforgivable.

One teenager was so eager to show off his new boat that he took two friends out in it, despite choppy water and the fact that the small craft warnings were displayed. That meant winds of at least 38 mph and that all small boats should remain docked. While the trio was out, gale warnings went up, but it was too late for the youngsters to heed them. The next day their wrecked boat was found on a beach with all three occupants dead inside.

A small pleasure craft is not built to withstand high winds and heavy waves and even a summer shower can wreak havoc; for a few big waves taken broadside can capsize a cabin cruiser. If you insist on ignoring the advice to stay put during bad weather, at least stay close to shore if a storm threatens so you can beat a quick retreat.

Den 3, Pack 25 Visits New Sun Office

Cub Scouts of Den 3, Pack 25 this week visited The Quincy Sun's new offices to view firsthand the workings of a newspaper.

The scouts, all students at Merrymount School, were Timmy Barry, Mike Garity, Sean Loughman, Stephen McPherson and Billy Rochelle. Kevin Golden, also a member of Den 3, was absent from the tour.

Mrs. Rosalie Barry, den leader, and Mrs. Dinae Rochelle Jr., assistant leader, accompanied the scouts on the tour.

Also taking the tour were Linda Richelle, Douglas Rochelle and Sean Barry, den mascots as yet too young to enter scouting.

The boys first visited the editorial and advertising departments on the street-floor of the office. They then toured the lower level of the office where they saw news headlines being set by a Compugraphic 7200 photo typesetting machine.

They also saw a news story telling of their visit to The Quincy Sun being set by our IBM computer system. The finished story was then transferred to the production department where paste-up artists fixed the story into proper position on paste-up boards.

The scouts are all working towards various achievements

'Mortgage Money Plentiful'

Beckwith Sees 1975 'A Great Year For Real Estate Sales'

STEDMAN BECKWITH

Stedman Beckwith, president of the Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors predicts that 1975 "should be a great year for real estate sales."

He said that the many prospective buyers who had postponed buying because of the pessimistic publicity about the economy were tired of waiting and would be out buying in 1975.

The Quincy realtor said mortgage money is plentiful with as little as 10 per cent down payment, and that conventional mortgage rates are running from 8 1/2% to 9 3/4% depending on the amount of down payment and the type of property.

He said that there is "an excellent selection of homes on the market in our area, and spring buyers are out in force."

Beckwith said that listings were streaming into the Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors Multiple Listing Service, and that the service is publishing a weekly M.L.S. book with a complete description and a picture of each property. He said the book is organized by price, and type of property.

He urged anyone considering purchasing a home to buy now as real estate values in the Quincy South Shore area will increase sharply this year.

Free Health & Well Fair Today Through Saturday

The Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors in cooperation with the Health Planning Council for Greater Boston, Inc. and its Emergency Medical Services Project is sponsoring a Free Health & Well Fair, today [Thursday] through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., at South Shore Plaza, Braintree.

The Health and Well Fair offers health information, education and services. Many community health resources will be there. Information will include nutrition, diabetes, venereal disease, alcoholism, heart disease, cancer, how to stop smoking, and many more.

The Health and Well Fair will gather many of the health resources of the South Shore community into a single location at one time, offering help to those who seek it. An important part of this care is health screening. On site clinics staffed by medical, nursing, and dental health professionals will offer free testing for glaucoma, hearing, oral disease, lung functions, and other ailments.

The Fair represents a combined effort by business, civic, and health organizations to bring health education and services directly to the community. In addition to the South Shore Plaza Merchants Association, other key groups are supporting the Fair. These include the Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, Blue Cross of Massachusetts and local government and health officials.

A Realtor Is More Than A Person Who Sells Real Estate

What is a REALTOR? If your answer is, "A person engaged in the real estate business," you're only partly right.

Some background information about the term, and a brief look at more than 65 years of history that has gone into its development, should help in understanding its significance to America's property owners.

A REALTOR is a professional in real estate who subscribes to a strict Code of Ethics as a member of the South Shore Board of Massachusetts

Association of Realtors and the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS.

The term REALTOR, like an established brand name, is a registered trademark. Both homebuyer and seller can have confidence in those who use the term, because only a person who has qualified for membership may do so. So "REALTOR" protects the public as well as other members of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS.

"REALTORS" designates a person in the real estate business who is affiliated with well organized real estate activities. They have available to them the accumulated knowledge of more than 65 years of education, experience, and research in real estate business methods.

And, most important, REALTORS have pledged to adhere to a code governing their business conduct, their relations with each other, and their relations with the public.

However, all of this didn't just happen. It is the result of years of development and struggle.

Founded in Chicago in 1908, the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS is the nation's largest trade and professional group, serving nearly half a million members in more than 1,650 local boards and 50 state associations.

The first legal step toward professional status for the real estate business was taken in 1917, when California adopted the first real estate license law. Since then, all states and the District of Columbia have enacted license laws.

In 1923, the Association published one of the first textbooks on real estate, which has been followed by a continuous stream of books written in the field.

The Association's library, the largest of its kind in the world, owns more than 12,000 separate book titles, over 200 regularly received periodicals and a miscellaneous file of some 70,000 items. The library is located in the Association's Chicago headquarters.

The promotion of college level courses in real estate has been a significant contribution of the National Association. Unheard of a few decades ago, such courses now are offered at more than 500 colleges and universities, some of which offer graduate degrees in the discipline.

Since 1923, the Association has made periodic studies of the real estate and mortgage markets. The Department of Economics and Research of the National Association undertakes comprehensive studies. The Department is located in the National Association's Washington, D.C., offices.

Also located in Washington is the Association's Department of Government Affairs, which maintains continuing contact with all branches of the federal government, and consults with officials on matters relating to real estate.

It is perhaps in this capacity that the National Association best serves the public: by speaking for the property owners of America in advocating or opposing certain legislation for the public good.

The National Association has been historically active in the development of government programs to make home ownership possible for increasing numbers of families, and in easing the impact of recurring shortages of mortgage money. Its leadership was instrumental in developing the Home Owner's Loan Corporation, the Home Loan Bank System, the mortgage insurance program of the FHA, and the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Over the years, the Association has kept pace with the growing trend toward specialization in the real estate field by establishing nine affiliated institutes, societies and councils.

These organizations are the American Chapter of the International Real Estate Federation; the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers; the American Society of Real Estate Counselors; the Institute of the Estate Management; the National Institute of Farm and Land Brokers; the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers, an educational arm of the National Association; the Real Estate Securities and Syndication Institute; the Society of Industrial REALTORS; and the Women's Council of REALTORS.

The philosophy of the National Association is to serve the real estate needs of all Americans through its REALTOR and REALTOR-ASSOCIATE members, state associations and member boards. This philosophy is two-fold in concept:

The NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS provides leadership and direction to its member REALTORS and REALTOR-ASSOCIATES in the fields of real estate education, legislative affairs, civic affairs, public relations, advertising, and professional standards.

In its service to the general public, the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS strives, through its members, to improve communities by providing leadership and encouraging respect for the ownership of real estate.

The Association cooperates with other associations in working toward the growth and stability of the national economy, its resources, and the American social structure. And—perhaps most importantly—the National Association guards the proficiency and ethical standards of its members, so that the public can continue to have confidence in the term REALTOR.

Upturn Parallels RELO Survey

Now Is The Time To Buy Or Sell In The Quincy-Milton Area

Milton and Quincy residents who want either to sell or buy a home may well find the next few months, through June, will be the best time in 1975 to do so.

So thinks Ruth McDermott, owner of the Ruth E. McDermott Real Estate Agency, 558 Adams St., Milton.

"Conditions here are much like what the nation's leading residential Realtors describe in answering a national survey by RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service," says Mrs. McDermott. Her firm is the Exclusive Representative of RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service, the nation's largest real estate referral service.

"Right now, mortgage money is more available than in recent months, and interest rates are lower than we've seen them for sometime," she said. "The steep decline in new home building last year adds to the desirability of existing homes. Pent up demand is bringing residential buyers back into the market. At the same time, homeowners, who felt the prospects of selling were too poor to consider a short time ago, are now listing attractive properties."

"The almost certain income tax refund ahead will give many families confidence to use their present savings for down payments on the homes they need. Other families with homes to sell are also eager to buy places more suited to their present needs."

"What gives the next few months their special significance for both homeowners and buyers is shown by the RELO survey. Numerous experts in residential real estate report they believe the latter part of this year could repeat conditions in the second half of 1974.

"At that time, federal government borrowing, at increasingly higher interest rates, may again crowd would-be homeowners out of the money market. Higher federal costs for tax rebates, and ballooning social services will have to be financed by federal borrowing at maximum rates they feel," Mrs. McDermott says.

"However, 73% of the respondents in the RELO survey of its major metropolitan area members predict that continued appreciation in the value of good residential property will keep home ownership an ideal family investment, and a sound hedge against any further inflation.

"We are particularly encouraged by the fact that transferee homeowner activity, or the purchase of homes by families moving between cities, remains high. Nationally, our 730 RELO members referred 36 per cent more such relocating families to fellow members for home finding help this past January than a year ago. And in the first two months of RELO's current fiscal year, 8% more transferees have purchased homes from our members this year than last.

"Anyone contemplating buying or selling a home in the near future should take advantage of the present market conditions," Mrs. McDermott concludes.

Jack Conway Opens New Wollaston Office

Mayor Walter Hannon recently cut the ribbon officially opening the 15th sales office of Jack Conway and Company, Realtors, at 253 Beale St., just west of the Wollaston MBTA Station.

Conway Company, one of New England's largest brokerage firms, will continue to keep their Quincy commercial office in the Chamber of Commerce Building in Quincy Square.

"I am confident that this office location will not only serve a need for Conway Country services but will add to the $50,000,000 plus annual sales volume of the company," said Jack Conway.

"The new office is situated in the center of an area inhabited by approximately 100,000 people and it's a most unusual area in that the homes range in value from a modest $25,000 to estates worth well over $100,000.

"In addition there is a mixture of commercial, industrial and multi-dwellings which makes the Quincy-Milton area desired by people with all types of real estate need," said

Dick Cahill, new office manager and a resident of Quincy.

Conway noted: "One of the things that attracted us most to the area was the proximity to the new MBTA station, because environmental ruling and questions about energy will make rapid transit transportation a much more important part of the America of tomorrow."

Staff of the new Wollaston Conway Office includes: Barbara DeLang of Canton, Ann Drinkwater of Milton, Jane Eastman, Jack Hanratty and Arthur Melia of Quincy, Maureen McCaffrey and Carole Molignano of Weymouth and Grace Watson of Hyde Park, all will be under the direction of Dick Cahill.

Rita Sweeney of Hingham will continue to manage the Conway Commercial Office located in the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Building. Working with Rita will be Dick Green of Scituate.

PROPERTY TAXES

The property tax raised $51 billion in 1974, according to Tax Foundation estimates, which is $3.8 billion more than in 1973 and three times the $16.4 billion total in 1960. —

'Make America Even Greater'

Stedman Beckwith, president of the Quincy & South Shore Board of Realtors notes realtors throughout the country are celebrating Realtor Week April 20-26.

Beckwith is the 37th president of the board, and was selected Realtor of the Year in 1974.

Also serving the board are Gerald C. Melanson, vice president; Vito A. Barresi, secretary; A. Virginia Delaney, treasurer.

Members of the Board of Directors are John Abdelahad, Frank L. Becker, Virginia M. Crismond, Frank R. Damigella, J. Joseph Doran, Dorothy Edgerly, Edward P. Flavin, Marilyn A. Moran, F. Lester Morrill, Russell S. Stranberg, Harold D. Thomson, and Elouise A. Troup.

Associates Council members are Dorothy E. Campbell chairman, Frederick Harmon, Natalie A. Lee, George Raymond and Burton Greenlaw.

Beckwith said that the value of dealing with a Realtor was proven again last year when in the middle of a real estate recession sales through the Board's Multiple Listing Service actually increased $2 million over the previous year. He attributed this to the fact that Realtors as professionals were able to find mortgage money and also used many unique methods of financing to get sales through.

To celebrate Realtor Week, and to show the community they care the Quincy & South Shore Board of Realtors is co-sponsoring free health days at the South Shore Plaza April 24, 25, 26, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Realtors and Realtor Associates will be donating their time and money to this health fair under the direction of their Make America Better chairman, Frank L. Becker.

Youngsters Ceramics Display In Sun Window

The Quincy Sun display window is now housing a sampling of artwork created by some 200 school children who participated in the Quincy Recreation Department's Winter Ceramics Program.

The youngsters hail from the Quincy School and Sacred Heart School and range in age from seven to 12. Taught by a staff of four Recreation Department instructors, the children gathered at the Quincy School after release time for a two-hour session during the week and on Saturdays.

Instructors Beth Hanratty, Andrea Quinn, Susan Merrigan and Dale Edson showed the pupils the process involved in making ceramic objects, acquainting them with the proper terminology and techniques.

After the molds had been fired, the children chose their own color schemes and painstakingly painted their art objects. They created a range of pieces, including leaf ash trays, elephant and Santa Claus mugs, large floral wall plaques, heart-shaped jewelry boxes, gingerjars, spoon rests in the shape of ice cream cones and tiny Christmas tree decorations.

The following students have ceramic work on display in The Quincy Sun window:

Grade 2 - Souad Hanif and Tracy Coleman.

Grade 4 - Paul Picariello, Karen Amoroso, Ann Marie Trubiano, Lyn Doyle, Tim Grant, Tammy Massey, Scott Dyer, Danny Johnson, Greg DiBella and Karen Gaziano.

Grade 5 - Steven McClosky, Marie Congemi, Liz Lambert, Joe and Joanne Doyle and Patty Merrigan.

Grade 6 - Glen McDonald, Margie Marks, Lisa MacInnis, Jamie McAvoy, Kathy Butler, Lynne Nestor, Richie Doyle, Diane LaRosa, Tracy McDonald and Donna Peterson.

Children interested in learning the art of ceramics can participate in the Recreation Department's summer program by enrolling at playgrounds throughout the city.

Koch Club Launches Annual 'Christmas In Spring' Program

The Koch Club of Quincy is again conducting its "Christmas in Spring" program for those doing their spring cleaning in homes, cellars and attics.

The club seeks toys, games, books, puzzles or dolls in useable condition that may require minor repairs or painting. The members and friends of the organization will conduct a series of workshops to clean, paint and repair those items requiring work and then package them in storage for operation Christmas, when they will be delivered to children in need of assistance from Santa Claus in the Quincy, South Shore and Greater Boston area.

Dolls are being sought that may only require cleaning and clothing. Last Christmas, several hundred dolls were cleaned, dressed, hair combed and groomed. The work was accomplished by women and girl volunteers who participated in the dolls for Christmas program.

Mrs. Ginny Derringer of South Weymouth and her Camp Fire Girls have already prepared several dozen dolls for the program and need more dolls to make clothes and prepare for Christmas.

Last years effort totaled 5,000 items that were distributed to children through charitable and church organizations along with many delivered to children's hospital wards and individual shut-ins.

Last year, four, two-ton vans of toys were refurbished and delivered to needy children who received hours of enjoyment from items others had either saved or found they had no further use for.

People from Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth and other communities joined this effort last year and are invited to participate again this year.

Items may be left at the home of Richard J. Koch, 241 Newbury Ave., North Quincy.

'The Craft Cottage' Delightful Plaster Hobby Specialty Shop

Steve Blampied of 10 Sumac Rd., Squantum, recently opened "The Craft Cottage", at 33 Cottage Ave., Quincy Center, featuring the hobby of plaster craft.

Blampied, a graduate of North Quincy High School and Boston University, sells some 300 different plaster molds which are then painted by the customer. Molds range from wall plaques, lamps and figurines to children's items such as elephants and tigers.

Although the molds can be painted for the customer, Blampied said he likes to encourage individuals to paint the figures and plaques on their own. He noted that the molds do not require firing as in ceramics.

Blampied operates "Craft Cottage" with the help of his fiance, Emily Stein, and Mrs. Maureen Cuddy. "Craft Cottage" offers free instruction to customers wanting help in painting their plaster molds.

Blampied said stained glass lamp kits are also available at the shop. He said "Craft Cottage" can also custom-make a mahogany quarterboard inscribed with the customer's name or the name of his boat.

The shop, located at 33 Cottage Ave., Quincy, is open weekdays from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Saturdays.

Inside Mini-Mall

Colonial Village New Concept In Retailing

Colonial Village, a "mini-mall" consisting of 150 shops is being constructed by Universal Enterprises, Inc. at the former Raymonds' Department Store site.

All the retail stores are being built under one roof and designed to resemble an old fashioned village.

The mall, managed by Ken Litvack and Allen Garf in conjunction with the Grossman

Co., will contain a carefully selected array of retail stores and services, but will be open limited hours.

Thursday and Friday evenings from 6 to 10 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. are key retailing hours when 70 percent of all business is transacted. These hours will be adopted by the mall. Litvack and Garf feel the limited hours will enable stores to be owned and operated by people having regular jobs or by semi-retired people, or manufacturers or retail chains seeking outlets or branch stores.

Several malls of this type have been operating in other parts of the country with great success, and the local public has been very enthusiastic, with many of the stores already leased. Rentals in the mall will start at $150 per month, which will include electricity, heat, air conditioning, taxes, security, common area maintenance, rubbish removal, etc.

Three general career books for distribution to every junior and senior in the various high schools.

The opportunity to have a personalized job and career exploration and analysis made through a computerized "Career System".

The local Weymouth Savings Bank will underwrite one third to one half of the cost for anyone using the career system.

Also, 10 students will be selected to receive the Weymouth Savings Career Scholarship Award this June. This will entitle the selected students to explore their career opportunities at no cost.

Young Cattaneo was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident by Dr. Frederic Tudor, associate medical examiner. His brother Robert Cattaneo, 22, was in "fair" condition on the danger list at Quincy City Hospital.

Henry J. Bertolon, 22, of 136 Connell St., son of Quincy Assessor Henry Bertolon, driver of the car, was reported in "poor condition" and on the danger list at the hospital.

Charles G. Condos, 22, of 59 Merrymount Rd, third passenger in the car, was listed in "fair" condition and on the danger list. Condos is a well-known hockey player for Bowdoin College.

John Cattaneo was former captain of the Stonehill College hockey team, while Bertolon is a student at Salem State College.

Police said the utility pole was split in half by the impact of the 1:13 a.m. crash, as the car headed toward Furnace Brook Parkway. It took firefighters more than an hour to free Robert Cattaneo from the wreckage.

A large crowd, numbering near 100, stood silently as the firefighters struggled to cut through the mangled vehicle.

Cattaneo, also the son of the late Marie L. [Sepka] Cattaneo, was born in Quincy and was employed as a salesman for Radio Shack in Boston. He graduated from Stonehill last year.

In addition to his father, and brother, Robert, he is survived by three other brothers, James L., Thomas S., and Stephen V. and a sister, Anne-Marie Cattaneo, all of Quincy.

Funeral arrangements were by the Joseph Sweeney Funeral Home. Burial was in the Blue Hills Cemetery, Braintree.

Donations in Mr. Cattaneo's memory may be sent to the Jimmy Fund, Boston.

Fontbonne Girls

'Dribble Up' $675 For Dystrophy

Six members of the Girls' Athletic Association from Fontbonne Academy sponsored a "dribble for Muscular Dystrophy" recently and raised $675. The money was presented to Paula Maguire, director of the Southern Massachusetts Chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The girls participating in the dribble are all members of the Fontbonne basketball team.

Co-ordinator Kathy Dolbec of 117 Lansdowne St., Squantum, Mary Anderson of 58 Royal St., North Quincy, Christine Barce, Randolph, and Debbie Falconi, Mary Norton and Sue Scannel, all of Milton, dribbled basketballs in shifts of three, beginning at 8 a.m. Each shift lasted one hour so by the 6 p.m. stopping time, each girl had dribbled for five hours.

Because of the response by mail and telephone, pledges amounted to more than the girls' goal of $500. The money will be used by Muscular Dystrophy for patient services in clinics, physical occupational therapy, for wheel chairs, orthopedic appliances and recreational programs, including bowling and summer camps.

North Trackmen Find New League Tough

North Quincy's track team moved this year into the strong Suburban League and Lou Tozzi's Raiders have found rough sledding with losses to two of the league powers in their first two league meets.

Tuesday North will be at Weymouth South.

Last Friday North bowed to Newton, 81-64, but ace Bart Petracca, continuing his outstanding performances, set a school record in the mile with a fine 4:24.3 effort. Petracca also had the old record of 4:34.3, set last year.

North's other winners were Paul Doherty, 100; Brian Doherty, 220; Jerry MacKenzie, 440; Mark Canavan, 880; Art Barrett, two-mile; Jack Gallagher, javelin. North also won the mile relay.

In their first league meet the Raiders dropped a close 74-70 decision to Weymouth North, with a dropped baton in the 440 relay playing a big role in the setback.

North winners were Paul Doherty, 100; Brian Doherty, 220; Canavan, 880 and triple jump; Ken O'Brien, mile; Petracca, two-mile; Dave Lorman, high hurdles; and the mile relay team of Brian Doherty, John Mackey, Canavan and MacKenzie.

MacKenzie and Weymouth's Pete Davenport finished in the same time, 53.1, in the 440 but Davenport barely edged MacKenzie at the finish for a big five points.

In the league relays prior to the opening of the dual meet season, North had won well as it broke the sprint medley record with a time of 3:41.5 in the race which included a 440 lap, two laps of 220 and one of 880 yards. MacKenzie, Brian and Paul Doherty and Canavan made up the record-breaking quartet. The 440 relay team of Brian and Paul Doherty, Matty King and Matty Constantino was second as was the distance medley team of Tex Vorrosso, Mackey, O'Brien and Art Barrett.

The Raiders earlier had won their second straight non-league meet, 64-58, over Winthrop. North had to win the relay to take the meet. The winning team included Brian Doherty, Mackey, King and Paul Doherty.

Giachetti Debut As Tufts Coach Impressive

Rich Giachetti, former North Quincy High baseball and football standout, is off to a good start in his first year as Tufts University baseball coach.

Following an opening day loss, the Jumbos won four games in a row.

Giachetti, who set several pass receiving records for the Tufts football team, has the team in a whole new mode of training, having his players run as sprinters would and studying as football players would with their playbook. His workouts are vigorous but they appear to be paying off.

Furnace Brook Women Results

The Furnace Brook Women held a nine-hole partner's high and low tournament last week with Aileen Hoag and Pat Cugini shooting low gross and Rena Roche and Alice Pagnano low net.

Second gross went to Mary Morrissey and Isabel Morrison, second net to Mimi DeFederico and Helene McPeck and third net to Joyce Serafini and Marie Corayer.

Presidents Seek 5th

The Quincy baseball team was the victim of a no-hitter in its opening game of the year.

But the Presidents, following a weekend in Harwich where they got in two exhibition games with the home team, an intra-squad scrimmage and another two-hour workout, began hitting the ball and going into this week's games had won four games in a row for a 4-1 record [3-0 in its first Suburban League season].

Friday Quincy will play at Brookline at 2 p.m., Monday will face North Quincy at Adams Field and next Wednesday will host Brockton at Adams.

Last Friday Bud Mosher's Presidents made Cambridge Latin its fourth straight victim, 8-4, as they collected nine hits and Lou Fishman gave up five.

Quincy clinched the win with four runs in the sixth inning.

Earlier last week Quincy topped Weymouth South, 6-1, and opened its first Suburban League season with an 8-4 win over Weymouth North.

In their previous game the Presidents had evened the score with B.C. High, which had won the no-hitter, with an 8-4 win.

"I feel our annual weekend in Harwich did us a world of good," Mosher said. "The boys got an awful lot of baseball in and it is paying off with some fine hitting and some good pitching and defensive play. I think now we will do all right in the strong Suburban League."

North Hosts Cambridge Latin Friday

The North Quincy baseball team suffered its first loss last Friday after four wins in a row and the Raiders hoped to regain the win trail this week.

Friday North will host Cambridge Latin at 2 p.m. at Adams Field, Monday will face Quincy at Adams and next Wednesday will play at Rindge Tech.

The Raiders, following two league wins over Brockton and Weymouth North and non-league victories over Boston English and Boston Tech, was edged by Waltham, 6-5, last Friday.

Waltham exploded for five runs in the second inning off North ace Tim Clifford, who blanked the Hawks the rest of the way. The Raiders scored four times in the third and once in the fourth but couldn't push

Quincy Girls Perform Well In First Track Meet

Although the Quincy girls' track team, competing for the first time in the strong Suburban League and with a new coach in Bob Troup, lost its league opener, 60-49, last week to Cambridge Latin, several of the First Ladies performed well.

The Quincy girls will host Waltham next Tuesday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Operating officially for the first time after three unofficial seasons under Peter Gallagher, the First Ladies had a double winner in Jodi Yurkstas, who won the long jump and high jump. Delores Connors sparked a sweep of the javelin, with Kathy Keating second and Carol Hickey third. Denise LaPierre won the 880 and the 880-yard relay team of LaPierre, Ilacqua, Craig and Yurkstas, also won.

Other Quincy scorers were Jean DeAngelo, third in the low hurdles; Donna Caporale, third in the 100; Keating, second in the 220; Linda Derry second and Joanne St. Pierre third in the 440; Kelly Tobin second and Hickey third in the mile; Derry, second in the shot put; Keating second and Derry third in the discus.

A-N Seeks 3rd City Title In Row

Ron LaQuaglia is starting his third season as coach of the Atlantic-North junior high school baseball team and he hopes to lead the club to its third successive city championship.

A-N not only won the city title the past two years but was undefeated both seasons as LaQuaglia boast a perfect 16-0 record in his two years as coach.

When the team hosts Broad Meadows in its opening game on Tuesday, April 29, LaQuaglia will have six returnees in his lineup.

Co-Captains Kurt O'Sullivan and John Wilkinson will handle the pitching choice along with Mike McCormack, who started most games at first base a year ago.

Also returning are second baseman Bob McCabe, who has been on the team three years, and outfielders Greg Zoia and Josh Alberti.

"This year's team should also be bolstered by a fine crop of eighth grade players who have really impressed in workouts," LaQuaglia said.

Rounding out the squad are Dave Crimond, Jim Hanrahan, Bob Stevens, Harry Donaghue, Joe Deane, Leo Doyle, Chris Sullivan, Dave King, Jack Dunn, Kevin Cobban, Sean Donaghy, Pat Ennis, John McGuiggan and Dave Nagle. Bruce Wilson is the team's manager.

"The boys on last year's undefeated team got together and bought me a two-foot high trophy which they presented to me a couple of weeks ago," LaQuaglia said. "I can't tell you how great that made me feel."

"Most of that group will be playing a lot of ball for this year's high school junior varsity team. All in all, I'm eagerly looking forward to my third season as coach and possibly [or hopefully] my third championship in a row."

Cerasoli To Push Bill Banning S. Quincy MBTA Station

Rep. Robert Cerasoli says he will lobby to get a bill banning construction of a South Quincy MBTA station to the House floor for debate "within two weeks."

The bill, officially reported out favorably from the Joint Committee on Transportation has been referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

A total of nine committee members voted in favor of the bill, two voted against it and 10 reserved their rights.

Those reserving their rights avoid indicating support or opposition to the bill until it reaches the House floor.

Rep. Elizabeth Metayer of Braintree, the only local member of the Committee, voted in favor of the bill banning construction of the South Quincy station.

At a four-hour committee hearing April 9, attended by over 200, all five members of the Quincy delegation testified against the building of a South Quincy Station, citing adverse impacts on flooding, traffic and neighborhood.

Transportation Secretary Fred Salvucci and MBTA Chairman Forrest I. Neal Jr., support construction of the station.

Cerasoli called the legislature "the court of last resort", saying the Quincy delegation felt both the Quincy and state administrations have already committed themselves to the building of the station. Cerasoli told The Quincy Sun:

"The legislature is a place for redress of grievances. The legislature is the only place left to go when the executive branch has decided it is going to do something and is not going to change its mind. When the executive power gets that great, the legislature is the only avenue to seek a redress of grievances."

Calling the favorable reporting of the bill "an initial victory", for the people of South Quincy and North Braintree, Cerasoli said he is confident the bill will reach Gov. Michael Dukakis' desk. To override a possible veto by the governor would require 160 votes in the Senate and 27 votes in the House. Cerasoli said:

"We've been trying to pin the governor down on a public statement on whether a station in South Quincy will be built. We don't know how far he is going to push for the station. The question is, will he veto the bill?"

Tax Rate Aid 'Cherry Sheets' Due Soon

City Auditor Charles Shea said he hopes to receive the state's cherry sheets "within a matter of days."

The revenue Quincy receives from these state funds will determine the new tax rate for the coming fiscal year.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon said he could not estimate Quincy's tax rate but emphasized any tax increase "has to be a minimal one."

"We have cut the city budget to the bone," said Hannon. "The people of Quincy just can't afford a tax increase of a substantial nature."

City Seeks $15,000 Bicentennial Grant For Freedom Park

Mayor Walter Hannon announces that an application for a $15,000 grant has been filed by the City's Department of Planning and Community Development, for the development of Freedom Park.

If the $15,000 grant from the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission is approved, it will be matched by an additional $15,000 from the City as part of a bond issue recently passed. The $30,000 would be used to complete the first of three development stages. Work on the second and third stages will also be funded with part of the bond.

If funds are approved, the initial work on the 97,000 square foot Freedom Park, located between Adams and Dimmock Sts. will begin July 1. Completion date of the entire project is expected to be April 1, 1976.

"The creation of Freedom Park is especially appropriate in 1975 and 1976 as part of the celebration of Quincy's 350th birthday and the nation's bicentennial," said Mayor Hannon.

The Park, which will become part of the Historic Trail, will provide a link between the Adams Academy and the Adams National Historic site. The latter site was the home of President John Adams, Abigail Adams and President John Quincy Adams.

According to the National Park Service, the area which will become Freedom Park was once part of the Adams family farm.

The Park, which will be maintained under the direction of the City's Department of Natural Resources, has been endorsed by 13 of Quincy's civic groups, the City Council, the Quincy Historical Society, and the Department of Planning and Community Development.

Senator Arthur H. Tobin, president of the City Council has also actively spoken for and supported the proposed Park.

The first work phase of the project will involve clearing the site, installation of a walkway and the planting of 70 pine trees. Work on this phase is expected to be completed by the end of September.

During the last phases of the project, 130 additional pine trees, 80 cherry trees and 700 flowering shrubs will be planted. Benches, grass and lighting will also be added during these stages.

Loyalty Day Parade Sunday

George F. Bryan VFW Post will observe Loyalty Day, Sunday, May 4.

Services will begin at 1:30 p.m. at the First Parish Church, Quincy Sq., and will be followed by a parade including more than 2,000 marchers and 25 bands. The parade will proceed along Hancock St., to Elm St., and then to McGrath Highway.

"Loyalty Day is the special occasion for the youths and adults of our land to stand up and speak out clearly on how lucky we are to be Americans," notes Post Commander Frank Roberts.

YOUNG RESIDENTS combined their efforts to clean debris from the edges of Butler's Pond. The project, lasted the better part of the day and was eagerly attacked by neighborhood youths, with assistance from adults Tim Sullivan [Center] who organized the project and Steve Buccella, far left. Also at the scene of the clean-up were Brian Dunn, Liz Norton, Billy McMegan, John Norton, Bobby McCarthy, Joe Ilacqua, Brian Norton, Chrissy Sullivan. Workers in the boat were Dom Ilacqua, Trisha Ilacqua and Laurie Sullivan.

3,000 City Employees To Receive ID Cards

Some 3,000 city employees will receive official photo identification cards by the first week in July.

City employees in the hospital, school, fire and police departments - comprising some 3,500 workers - already have IDs bearing their picture and verifying their association with the city of Quincy.

Joseph Shea, executive secretary to Mayor Walter Hannon, said the City Council approved a $625 appropriation for the ID cards would provide "security and a good personnel function" at a minimal cost to the city.

Shea said the $625 was used to buy equipment for making the IDs. The ID-making machine will be transported from one city department to another until all cards are completed.

Shea also noted the ID would serve to update the city personnel files since two pictures of each city employee will be printed - one for the ID card, the other for the city's personnel files.

Hannon Proclaims 'Law Day'

Mayor Walter Hannon has proclaimed today [Thursday] as Law Day, to provide Quincy residents with a special day to reflect on the meaning and value of Law and Courts to our democratic society.

This year will mark the 18th annual nationwide observance of the day since it was proclaimed by the U.S. Congress and the President in 1957, for the American people to celebrate "in appreciation of their liberties."

OUR CHILDREN

How important are early years?

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM
Copley News Service

Q. We hear generalizations about how important the early years are, but the details always seem to be missing.

A. Are the first few years of life really so significant? Can children catch up? Aren't later years of childhood just as influential in indicating what kind of adult a child will become?

A. The literature of child development is full of research related to your questions. Let me lead you to three specific sources: (1) Benjamin Bloom, who stressed the significance of the preschool years; (2) Rick Heber whose research goes into the need for enriching the lives of young children; (3) Jerome Kagan who recently researched the idea that deprived young children can catch up later on.

They, in turn, can direct you to many others.

Q. Something bothers me about the phrase "behavior modification." Our boy's teacher told me she uses this practice, and she's able to get her students to do what she wants them to. It sounds to me a little like "Big Brother" is watching over us, and I don't like it.

How do you feel about it?

A. This is a very controversial subject, and there are strong feelings on both sides. The behavior of all of us is "modified" or "managed" by other people. A compliment, a present, a kiss, or a stern word all can affect what we do and how we feel.

The "behavior modification" people attempt to go at the changing of behavior more systematically. Some people feel it isn't very "humanistic." However, before you come to that conclusion visit a school where children couldn't walk, talk or feed or dress themselves until some skilled professional persons practiced these methods with them.

There are definitely two sides to this story. B. F. Skinner is a person who probably has explained the subject most clearly.

Q. I've been reading all the stuff about how artificial colors and flavors cause children to be hyperactive. I'd like to buy foods that are free from the artificial factor, but it seems impossible. Just try to find some package labels that leave it out!

It's tough being a parent these days, and such scare subjects make it even harder.

A. First of all, the research is still going on and not very complete. Some people feel it's very promising, however.

Secondly, one of its leading advocates is Dr. Ben Feingold and some of his writings include diets and menus that are free of artificial colors and flavors.

COOKING CORNER

Soups save women valuable time

By ELAINE SMYTH
Copley News Service

Soups are a friend to homemakers throughout the year.

For the working gal, they are an ideal choice to prepare on the weekend and serve sometime during the week when time is at a premium. By adding a salad and hot rolls or an herbed bread, she can put together a nutritious, flavorful supper without spending unnecessary and valuable time in the kitchen.

The same holds true for the woman at home who has a series of deadlines to meet — PTA meetings, Cub Scouts and the responsibility of getting Johnny to Little League or Sally to those ballet lessons.

Today's recipes provide variety: Beef 'N Cabbage Soup and Iced Fresh Tomato Soup.

APPETIZER — The wide range of soups that can be prepared by today's homemakers can include a spring or summer appetizer—Iced Fresh Tomato Soup.

BEEF 'N CABBAGE SOUP

- 1½ pounds lean beef, cubed
- Oil
- 4 cups light beef bouillon
- 4 cups coarsely shredded cabbage (in two parts)
- 1 cup chopped onion
- ¼ pound bacon, chopped
- 1 large garlic clove, minced
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- 3 cups water
- 2 large potatoes, peeled and cubed
- 2 large sweet potatoes, peeled and cubed
- 2 tablespoons ketchup

In large pot, brown beef in hot oil. Add bouillon, 2 cups cabbage, onion, bacon and seasonings. Bring to boil, reduce heat and simmer 1 hour. Skim foam.

Add water, potatoes, ketchup and remaining 2 cups of cabbage; continue to simmer another hour until potatoes are tender. Makes about five quarts.

ICED FRESH TOMATO SOUP

- 2 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 2 tablespoons catsup
- ¼ cup water
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 6 large ripe tomatoes, peeled, coarsely chopped or 3 cups prepared tomatoes
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 cup heavy cream, chilled

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Place small size (10" x 16") oven cooking bag in ovenproof deep saucepan.

Roll bag back to ease handling. Add flour, salt and pepper and mix inside bag. Blend in catsup and water. Add broth and mix. Add vegetables and gently turn bag to mix all contents. Close bag with twist tie, and make six half-inch slits in bag near twist tie. Cook until bubbling and vegetables are tender, 25-30 minutes.

Cool. Refrigerate until chilled. Add cream to bag and gently mix contents before dipping out to serve. Serve in small bowls set in crushed ice, garnished with thin tomato slice or unpeeled cucumber slice floating on top. Makes eight servings.

STRICTLY PERSONAL Mate treats her like a servant

By PAT and MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
On my last birthday I was 30. It was a painful milestone to hit. Between 18 and 28, my looks didn't change; but in the past two years, the wrinkles have begun to come. I have lines on my forehead, between my brows, and around the mouth. On top of this, my husband treats me as if I were a servant.

This morning was Sunday. I fixed breakfast and got the children ready for church. My husband didn't lift a finger. When I complained that he should help the 4-year-old, he announced that he wanted to read the paper. We left the house with five minutes to spare. As my husband waved goodbye to us, he told me that I should get up 15 minutes earlier so that we could leave on time. Tell me, how can I correct this insoluble problem?

Wrinkled Maid

Dear Maid:

By the time most of us are 30, age begins to show unless we are a Dorian Grey. In order to camouflage this, why not invest in a consultation at a beauty salon. Facials, exercises, makeup, and proper skin care can help. Hair styling is also important.

Tooth decay cut by new sugar

HELSINKI — Finnish scientists have developed a new natural sugar from berries, fruits and the birch tree that may reduce tooth decay by 80 per cent or more and could even prevent caries.

A sour note is that the new

Why not get up earlier and take the children out to breakfast and then to church? This just might jar hubby's sense of responsibility. In any case, you'll get to church on time.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

When I married Alfred (not his real name) he weighed 175 pounds. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall. Well, 15 years later he weighs 230. This extra flab is too much for him. His job requires no physical activity. I'm afraid that he'll be dead at 45.

I have pleaded with him to go on a sensible diet and exercise moderately. He tells me that he does not like to exercise and that he is not fat. How can he be so smart in business and so dumb about his health? What can I do to scare him into realizing the dangers of too much weight?

Skinny Wife

Dear Wife:

Many wives have the same problem. One of the first things you can do is to make an appointment with the family doctor. He can prescribe a sensible diet and exercise program for your husband. If he won't listen to the doctor, there is one other alternative. Fix meals that are attractive but contain few starches. Place the food on his plate and cut down on the portions. Keep those meals "weigh" down.

BLOWOUT TACTICS

Considering the great hazard of defective auto tires [a factor in about 15 thousand injuries and deaths last year] it's foolish to let your tires get in bad shape. However, if you experience a blowout at high speed it's too late to worry about prevention. It is then a matter of what to do to stay alive.

Make no mistake about it, a blowout is a terrifying experience. Take the case of a woman driver in Massachusetts whose right front tire blew on a superhighway. The car bolted to the right across three lanes. She hit a curb, overcorrected and swung back over the median strip into oncoming traffic. She was killed.

In case of a blowout, maintain a superstrong grip to keep the car in a straight line. Hang on like a dying man until the car comes to a slow, safe stop. Slamming the brakes on at high speed can send you into an out-of-control spin.

Women's Political Caucus Plans Awards Banquet

The annual awards banquet of the South Shore Women's Political Caucus will be held Thursday, May 29 at the Torre de Passeri Social Hall, Washington St., Quincy Point.

Awards will be given to women who have contributed to the welfare of the community in areas such as education, conservation, government, business and social services.

Banquet committee chairwoman is Kathy O'Donnell. Assisting on the committee are Jane Ford, Carol Leahman, Marilyn Hanabury, Kathryn Roberts, Rose DeVore and Donna Roberts.

The South Shore caucus grew out of the Woman's Day program held in Quincy in October of 1972, under the leadership of Geraldine Pleshaw. It is the first and only women's political caucus on the South Shore and is a chapter of the National Women's Political Caucus.

The purpose of the caucus says Chairwomen Kathy O'Donnell is to provide a meeting place for women to articulate their legitimate needs.

"The caucus encourages women to become involved politically, because women's issues are all things, education, taxes, employment, etc., and these issues are decided by groups that take place in the political arena," says Miss O'Donnell.

Miss O'Donnell notes that the caucus was influential in helping set up the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women. The caucus also assisted in the establishment of the Women's Center at Quincy Junior College.

This year, the caucus will again sponsor a questionnaire for candidates in the city's municipal election. And they will also support those candidates, men and women, who have been concerned and have been working for issues that concern women.

Tops In State

Quincy CETA Office Places 114 In On - Job Training

Quincy's CETA office serving 10 other South Shore communities has placed 114 on-the-job training candidates as of March 31, compiling the best record within the entire state.

CETA's sponsors - consisting of municipalities which exceed populations of 100,000 - did not top Quincy's placement record. Boston, for example, placed 109 in its one-the-job-training CETA program. Worcester, 65, Cambridge 80, Springfield and New Bedford 40, according to Timothy Reidy, Quincy's on-the-job-training manager.

Under the program, participating employers provide on-the-job-training and receive 50 per cent reimbursement for wages paid to the employees during their training period. All positions must be new additions to the pay roll and must not involve the displacement of already-employed workers.

Davis said the program not only provides training for unemployed residents but also fills job vacancies which might have stayed unfilled due to the lack of needed employee skills.

According to Harold Davis, executive director of the South Shore Council for Full Employment, some 36 South Shore companies are now participating in the on-the-job-training program. They include:

Arch Gear Works, Auto Body Clinic, Bike 'n Blade, The Body Smith Shop, Coletti Brothers, Inc., Brite Venetian Blind, John S. Cheever Co., E & H Donut Co., General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard, Mass Auto Leasing,

Hugo Saluti Elected Housing Chairman

Hugo F. Saluti, dean of administration at Quincy Junior College, was recently elected chairman of the Quincy Housing Authority.

He succeeds Lawrence Butler who will remain as a board member.

Also elected to one-year terms were Dr. Peter V. Corea, vice-chairman; Clement O'Brien, secretary; Carmen D'Olimpio, treasurer; and Rosemary Wahlberg, assistant treasurer.

The Quincy Sun, Rogers Jewelry, Mello Dental Lab, Mariners Insurance Agency, Sigma Instruments, South Shore Day Care, South Shore Rehab, Weymouth TV, Delano Camera Inc., Quincy Nursing Home, Inc., Dickerman Dental Lab, Happy Chef, Inc., KCR, Inc., Angelo's Supermarkets, Allied Resin, Reliable Fence, Inn for All Seasons, Scituate Lobster Trap Co., Colony Rug Co., Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., Taylor Auto Body, Nogler Bros., French Gems, Scavo Auto Body and Brockton Cutting, Die and Machine.

Quincy's CETA office serves the South Shore communities of Quincy, Braintree, Milton, Weymouth, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Randolph, Norwell, Holbrook and Hingham. This territory is designated a Balance of State Manpower Area since all of the municipalities have a population under 100,000.

Other balance of state areas also fell short of Quincy's placement record in the on-the-job training program. The Newton area, for example, filled 54 jobs, said Davis and the Brockton area filled four. Chelsea, Gardner, Lawrence, Lynn, Norwood and Salem have not placed any, he said.

Davis attributed the success of the Quincy area program to the enthusiasm generated for it. Davis said:

"Other cities have felt the economy was so hard, there was no sense in talking to companies, feeling they simply couldn't add anyone on at all."

Davis praised the planning and publicity of Quincy's on-the-job-training program, crediting both Reidy and Paul Ricca, director of the CETA program for their efforts in administering the Quincy area's program.

Davis added the cooperation of other groups such as the Mass Division of Employment Security, Norfolk County Labor Council and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce had also contributed to "the fantastic success" of the on-the-job-training program.

Jobless Army Marches On City Hall

By PAUL HAROLD

A jobless army of former city workers jammed the City Council meeting this week while the council was considering a loan for $10,000 for street paving.

The jobless army attempted to force the council to float this loan and others in order to provide work for city residents.

Acting Mayor Leo Mullin signed the council order the next day. It was estimated that the street work would provide work for 150-300 men for 10 weeks.

REAL ESTATE TAKEN AWAY

The Quincy Taxpayers' Association revealed that nearly 5,000 parcels of real estate had been taken away from Quincy owners for non-payment of taxes.

POLICE ELECT DORAN AND McINTYRE

Captain Daniel Doran was re-elected president of the Quincy Police Relief Association for his third consecutive term.

A feature of the election, however, was the defeat of Lt. James Whalen by Sgt. William McIntyre for the post of treasurer. The vote was 42 to 41.

Other officers elected were Sgt. Joseph Sweeney, vice president; Sgt. Henry Corbett, financial secretary; Patrolman Charles Hinchon, recording secretary and Lt. John Avery, trustee.

"SCALPING OF SQUANTUM"

The "Scalping of Squantum" was the main topic of discussion at a meeting of the Squantum Association.

Residents praised and criticized the ERA project, which cut down a number of trees and bushes that acted as breeding grounds for the gypsy moth. William Greeley called the project a butcher job. However, the association voted to request city engineer Wallace Carson to repeat the project each year.

The association also voted to send a letter to the city, asking that unaccepted streets in Squantum be oiled.

FOY HEAD OF NEW DEAL IN MASSACHUSETTS

Frank Foy was named this week to head the state's National Emergency Council. He would be in charge of the PWA, ERA, Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Federal Housing Act, NRA and other federal programs.

Foy, a local grocer, was also a former candidate for Congress and served as vice commander of the American Legion.

Foy had been circulating nomination papers for mayor in the fall's election, but his appointment took him out of that race.

Still running for mayor, to date were, Acting-Mayor Leo Mullin, Councillor William Edmonston, County Commissioner Russell Bates, former Councillor Thomas Burgin, Rep. John Flavin and School Committeeman John Taylor.

QUINCY WORST IN STATE FOR RABIES

Dr. Edmund FitzGerald, city health commissioner, noted that Quincy was the worst place in the state for rabies.

He called upon the City Council to have all dogs restrained for 90 days and the dog license fee be increased to 50 cents.

FitzGerald said he expected much opposition from the city's dog lovers. The last time dogs in the city were restrained was in 1931 and then, only after a bitter debate.

The contest was co-sponsored by The Quincy Sun, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and Quincy Heritage, in observance of Quincy's 350th anniversary.

Judges were:
Wilfred Nolan, coordinator of Quincy Elementary School education; Carmen Ungar, art librarian Thomas Crane Public Library, David Leitch, president Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, Richard Koch, Quincy City Natural Resources Director and Richard Purnell, graphics designer for Quincy Heritage.

Purnell made the drawing which was the subject of coloring contest.

His drawing is based on what according to two sources is the only known portrait of Col. John Quincy for whom Quincy is named. It shows him as a boy.

The two sources are "Three Hundred Years of Quincy" published in connection with Quincy's Tercentenary celebration in 1925 and the book "Col. John Quincy, Master of Mount Wollaston" published in 1908.

The first book was written by Daniel Munroe Wilson. The second was also written by him in collaboration with Charles Francis Adams. The portrait appears in both books as the only "extant" portrait of Col. John Quincy.

There is some dispute, however, that the portrait is not that of Col. John Quincy Adams as a boy but of a member of the Mason family.

One claim is that the figure is actually a girl—Alice Mason who was the aunt of Col. John Quincy's wife.

The figure is dressed like a girl but in those early days boys were dressed similarly.

Kathryn Sullivan: 'A Real Sweetheart'

By HENRY BOSWORTH

For almost a half-century judges, police prosecutors, and defense lawyers at Quincy District Court have agreed on one verdict: Kathryn Sullivan is a real sweetheart.

Down through the years she was always patient, considerate and kind to everyone who walked into the clerk's office.

She patiently answered questions or explained what sometimes were complicated worded complaint papers or other documents.

Young reporters assigned to the courthouse were given a pretty good law course by Kathryn.

Since June 1, 1925 when she reported to work at the old courthouse as the only woman in the clerk's office to last Saturday, when she retired as first assistant clerk [a job she held since 1946] she was everyone's sweetheart.

Saturday was a difficult day for her and her many friends. She tried to fight back the tears but lost.

"I'll miss it," she said as the 49 years flashed back. "I really loved it and the people."

She has no definite plans for the immediate future. She'll take it easy for awhile.

One of those young reporters who isn't so young any more told her the courthouse was sure to topple when she walked out for the last time. She laughed.

It didn't topple, of course. But it may have sagged a little. Regardless of whether it did or not, Quincy District Court will never be quite the same again without Kathryn looking up from her desk to a visitor, smiling and asking:

"May I help you?"

A real sweetheart. There are an awful lot of us who will always have a mad crush on her.

FROM AN ECONOMY standpoint things could be a lot better around here—and a lot worse. Take Columbus, Ohio, for example.

Warren Corbett, security manager for the South Shore National Bank and former Quincy police detective was in Columbus recently and saw in The Dispatch a story about 241 taxpayers paying their taxes with checks that bounced.

Franklin County Treasurer Herbert Pfeifer, however, is a compassionate man. He said if the taxpayers made good on the checks "I'll personally take the bad checks out of the file."

"I'm willing to do anything I can for the taxpayer who I think is being crucified," Pfeifer was quoted.

But he's not quite all heart. Pfeifer says he will add a 10 per cent late penalty to those whose checks bounced.

WILLIAM VILLONE, retiring this week as Quincy veterans services director, was honored at a party the other night at Morrisette Legion Post. He was presented a number of citations and awards. He apparently plans to get in a little fishing.

His office staff presented him with a fishing rod and announced that the boat and motor that go with it were waiting for him at his home.

PAUL HAROLD of Adams Shore was recently named to "Who's Who in American Politics" for the second year in a row. He was cited for his service as National Committeeman for the Massachusetts Young Democrats.

SUDDEN THOUGHT: Ever since Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin announced he was bowing out of this year's mayoralty race, the election scene seems to have really quieted down.

If he had decided to run, it would have triggered plenty of action in the council at-large race and possibly in one or two of the wards.

KEN RUNGE, local businessman and active in the North Quincy Knights of Columbus, is reportedly thinking of getting into the School Committee race. Runge, incidentally, was one of those who helped get Senator Edward Kennedy through that hostile crowd in North Quincy a few weeks ago by running interference for him.

INCIDENTALLY, nomination papers for this year's city election won't be available until after May 5. The City Council has not yet selected the date for the preliminary election but is expected to do so that night. Final election date, however, is Nov. 4.

HOLLYWOOD HOTLINE

Is world passing Gail Fisher by?

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Gail Fisher's contract to play Peggy on "Mannix" ends this season, and the situation finds her with mixed feelings.

"There are advantages and disadvantages to everything," pretty Gail said the other day over lunch at L'Ermitage, a high-toned French restaurant on Los Angeles' La Cienega restaurant row.

"There's security in a series, not only financially but in the fact that I can stay in town and work. But, because I've been in a series so long, people don't think of me in terms of other roles.

"I'm afraid the world has kind of passed Peggy by. For seven years, almost the only line I've had is, 'Joe, do you want some coffee?' Well, sometimes I have gotten to answer the phone and say, 'Mr. Mannix's office.'

"However, I don't worry about being trapped in the role of Peggy because I want to be a bigger star.

"I don't enjoy being a quote star unquote, because I'd much rather be just a working actress. I have a stage background, and I'd like to do it all, stage, motion pictures, television.

GAIL FISHER '...I'd like to do it all'

"I don't consider myself a Hollywood person, I don't go to the Hollywood parties, though if I did I'd probably have my own show by now."

Gail doesn't consider herself a business woman anymore than she considers herself a quote star unquote, so she has no ambition to produce. However, she would like to direct.

"But I don't think there's much chance of my directing a 'Mannix' segment," she concludes, "since they won't even let Mike (Connors) direct."

A divorcee with two children, 10 and 15 years old, Gail answers a question about her daughters' adjustment to the divorce with, "I didn't even adjust to my divorce very well. But the girls' father and I are still friends.

"I might like to marry again, but if I did, everything would have to be so right! I've already gone through being in love."

As to occasional false rumors which have suggested hanky-panky between Gail and Connors, she's ignored them.

"There's never been anything between Mike and me," Gail says positively, "so I don't pay attention to talk. I know what's inside, and the truth is what's important.

"You want me to tell you who I think is the sexiest man in Hollywood? Telly Savalas! But I don't get along with his agent."

Sheets To Seek Re-election To Ward 4 Council Seat

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets announces he will seek re-election noting, "much work remains to be done in Ward 4." He is the first incumbent to formally announce his candidacy in this year's election.

Citing his work as ward councillor over the past 15 months, Sheets said his "major concerns" have been in the areas of apartment building and rezoning, eliminating flood problems, launching a major community improvement program, increasing park and open space, maintaining the sanitary landfill operation within state regulations and responding to requests and needs of people in his ward.

Yet Sheets emphasized that "continued progress" must be made over the next two years, especially with flood control, the Quarry St. area and the recently-funded community improvement program for the ward.

The flood plain zoning ordinance sponsored by Sheets prohibits construction of apartments and condominiums in the flood plain area comprising 20 per cent of Ward 4.

Sheets said the ordinance represents "a strong first step" towards better flood control in Ward 4 by preventing construction of water-holding and absorption areas. He added:

"However, this is a preventive not a corrective measure and an effort must now be made to speed-up the planning and building of water control systems in both the Furnace Brook and Towne Brook areas."

Noting that physical hazards had been removed in the Quarry area from the Old Granite Railroad to the St. Moritz Pond, Sheets said other hazards remain and would be removed if and when the 80-acre MDC and City of Quincy Historical Park project begins.

Sheets said he hoped the $750,000 Community Improvement Program in Ward 4 would "extend into the indefinite future." He said "a continuity of leadership" is needed for the successful completion of the program.

During his term as councillor, Sheets said he received and acted upon some 650 individual requests from Ward 4 residents.

"I consider this one of the most essential, necessary and rewarding functions of a ward councillor," said Sheets.

The councillor, who introduced before the City Council a rezoning order to end apartment construction in Residence "B", said "a good start" had been made in providing long-range programs to promote "controlled growth and development in Ward 4."

Sheets said he and his family have been treated with "great kindness and support" and he said he looks forward to serving the people in his ward for another two years "if this is the will of the people."

Grace Saphir Calls City Hall 'A Cozy Club'

cynicism that seems to go with City Hall."

A former member of the Quincy Conservation Commission and the founder-president of Save Our Shores, Inc., Mrs. Saphir said development of any multi-family dwellings in Quincy should be conducted carefully "with due regard for proper use of our limited land areas."

She also urged the employment of Quincy people first - not outsiders - in the construction of buildings in the city. She asked:

"And how is it that we import building trades workers from Canada when our own masons, carpenters and ironworkers are walking the streets? Exactly that was done on the high rise apartment on Quincy Shore Drive."

Pledging to halt what she called "the helter-skelter approach" used in planning construction in Quincy, Mrs. Saphir said she would "use our planning board properly," calling upon professionals and blue collar workers for advice.

"Up to now, it's been a helter-skelter game of playing favorites," she said. "Of going for the fast dollar and the people be damned...We have only so much land...If we squander or misuse it, there is no going to the 'land shop' to buy more. God has stopped making land, so we would be well to respect what little we have to work with."

Lumping both the "political opportunists" and the "sincere well-meaning politicians" in the same category of ineffectivity, Mrs. Saphir said:

"We have given them their chance and what have they given us in return? Indifference to the wishes of the people, disgruntled city workers, fear of retaliation, the reputation of a city as an armed camp against criminals and an ever-rising tax rate."

Mrs. Saphir also criticized Mayor Walter J. Hannon's administration for granting administrative salary increases "as much as 35 per cent" when faced with "hard times" and "those long lines at the unemployment office in the Parkway."

In speaking further of unemployment in Quincy, she implied the present administration is not doing all it could to return the jobless to work. She said General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard could employ "thousands" of skilled jobless people to build ships under contract.

"Have our city officials sat down with General Dynamics," she asked, "and discussed a job retraining program in earnest. If our workers do not have the needed skills, why do we not do something to see that they acquire them?"

In responding to questions from Kiwanians, Mrs. Saphir said she opposed the building of a South Quincy MBTA Station at this point. She suggested a station be constructed in Braintree with the possibility of re-investigating a South Quincy station site if the need arose. She said, too, she was opposed to the construction of ramps feeding into Quincy from the Expressway.

If elected mayor, Mrs. Saphir said she would advocate the investigation of the specific plans of each developer and builder coming into Quincy, including whom he intended to employ to construct a particular project.

The life-long Quincy resident said she felt there is "plenty of space" for the small merchants and shopkeepers in Quincy which could co-exist with what she called "the big, big businesses."

Ranking "very high" on her list of priorities is the maintenance of school facilities, said Mrs. Saphir.

"Some of the buildings are an utter disgrace and a shambles. And that includes North Quincy High School."

Mrs. Saphir said the city does not need a new high school facility but said she advocates additions and renovations at the present site. She said she thought the site could be expanded without the taking of homes and decreed eminent domain home-taking except "in dire emergencies."

MONEY TALKS Babe Ruth Was Better Off With $80,000 A Year

By Philip J. Lawrence
President

Colonial Federal Savings

And Loan Association
of Quincy, Holbrook and Wareham
8-6 Weekdays 8-7:30 Thursdays

Henry Aaron's feat of breaking the all-time home run record brought back memories and feature articles about the athlete whose record he had excelled—Babe Ruth. Here indeed was a "nonpareil", as vocabulary-minded sports writers dubbed him—a pitcher whose phenomenal mound record was exceeded only by his prowess as a hitter.

"Too bad Babe Ruth lived out of his time," someone remarked. "Think what he'd make today, when ball players with less impressive ability can pick up $200,000 or more a year."

The comment prompted us to do a bit of research to find out whether the Babe was indeed worse off for having lived forty years too soon.

Oldtimers remember the awe that came with the announcement that the New York Yankees were paying Babe Ruth $80,000 a year. Why, that was more than the president of the United States was getting, wasn't it?

After income taxes, Ruth's take-home pay was $68,500. A ball player today with a salary of $200,000 gets into the 70 per cent tax bracket [if he's married; if he's not, a $100,000 salary puts him there]. He has $89,000 left after taxes, according to the 1974 tax rate schedules for married persons.

But what must today's baseball star earn to provide the purchasing power that Ruth enjoyed with his $68,500? Consider that the Consumer Price Index in the early 1930's was at or near 40. By the end of 1974 it was well over 150. This means that today's athlete would have to get $256,875 to be able to enjoy all the things the Babe was buying back in the '30's.

How much salary must a ball player be paid today in order to have $256,875 in take-home pay? If you are ready, the sum is astronomical — $856,250 a year!

Our purpose here is not to prove that professional athletes are underpaid. It is rather to show what inflation does to dollar values and to indicate how serious a matter it is for you and me.

A recent newspaper cartoon graphically stated the problem. Today's husband is commenting, "Just think! When I retire our Social Security will be $15,000 a year." The years pass and this time in retirement, the wife is saying, "Oh dear! I see that bread has gone up to $15 a loaf."

City Seeks Redesign Of 'Cracked Balconies' At Wollaston Seniors Complex

In a letter to MacDonald, City Councillor Warren Powers expressed concern for the future safety of senior citizens occupying the Clay St. building.

"There has been a fracturing of the concrete balcony sections of the apartments," said Powers, "creating a danger that they might collapse and cause a catastrophe if the apartments were ever occupied with defects of this type existing... I don't want to see any occupation permitted until we are sure the building is structurally sound."

MacDonald said he is confident the balconies will be redesigned to eliminate any problem and said he would not allow occupation of the apartments if the problem were not remedied.

The findings and recommendations of the engineering firm are expected within one week, according to MacDonald. Earthquake and high wind loads were recently applied to the building, he said. "I am convinced the study will be a very accurate and detailed one of the whole building," said MacDonald.

In his letter to the building inspector, Powers said the engineering study should include:

- Testing of the strength and stress capabilities of concrete sections already bolted to the building.

- Testing and review of elements used in the concrete mix.

- Review of the casting process itself to ensure production of sections capable of bearing proper amounts of stress.

Powers said, "It appears there has been a mistake somewhere in one or several areas. Therefore, the engineering design, the building materials and the methods of construction should be carefully scrutinized to insure that they conform to the highest state and local building and safety standards."

Powers said the fractures in the balconies — measuring 12 to 18 inches — resulted when pre-cast concrete railings were attached to the balcony sections, causing added stress.

"What happens," he asked, "when you put people, elevators, and furniture in it — when it is a fully-furnished living unit with the weight of such a building. Are we going to have more fractures anywhere?"

Developer of the complex is the Wollaston Manor Associates. Architect is Huygens and Tappe, Inc. and the building contractor is Dwight Building Co. of Hamden, Conn.

MacDonald said the building in question is at least half-way completed, if not better. Floors and roofs have been constructed and plumbing and wiring are now being installed.

Members of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association [QCBPA] have joined with Quincy's Channel 2 Auction "Go-Getters" in gathering merchandise for the 10th annual auction to benefit the station.

QCBPA businesses will donate items to be sold at the auction May 30-June 7. The auction to be telecast over WGBH-TV, Channel 2, is expected to draw an audience of 1.4 million viewers bidding for antiques and other articles auctioned on the air. The window of each participating QCBPA store will display the member's donated article.

Jack Kerrigan, executive director of the association, said QCBPA members have donated to the auction in the past but this year marks the first effort to draw all members together, giving them an opportunity to participate in the drive. Kerrigan said:

"We are asking all those who feel they can - during these hard economic times - to consider a donation to the Auction as among the many contributions they make throughout the year."

Channel 2, one of three stations operated by the WGBH Educational Foundation, relies solely on public funds to maintain its programming. Faced with rising costs, the Station depends more and more on Auction revenues for its daily running expenses.

Last year, auctioneers sold 9,500 items, earning a total of $600,000 for the Station. Over 4,000 volunteers or "go-getters" helped solicit auctionable items from citizens within the WGBH viewing area and this year 10 Quincy women are helping to gather merchandise for the 10th anniversary auction.

They are Kathleen Mitchell of 1344 Quincy Shore Drive, Quincy's Go-Getter Captain; Ann Pegg of 117 Utica St.; Kathy Hawley of 25 Algonquin St.; Mary Collins of 116 Lansdowne St.; Betty Swanton of 10 Samoset Ave.; Maureen Roche of 1356 Quincy Shore Drive; Jolene Hack of 94 Pontiac Rd.; Mary Denneen of 31 Moreland Rd; Martha Regan of 11 Dorchester St.; Ann McInness of 37 Shoreham St., and Ellen Harrington of 10 Hillcrest Rd.

Calling Channel 2 "a worthwhile, educational TV station benefiting everyone," Kerrigan said:

"We want to see Channel 2 survive. We really can't afford to see them not survive."

Kerrigan said the drive would stress the donation of "quality items" to raise substantial funds for Channel 2.

'Spotlight On Women' Career Day May 7 At N.Q. High School

More than 75 women boasting almost as many careers will participate in a career day Wednesday, May 7 at North Quincy High School gymnasium.

"Spotlight on Women", co-sponsored by the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women and the Quincy Public Schools, will provide young people with an opportunity to talk with women in the community who have been successful in a variety of occupations. The program is open to all high school students, both male and female in Quincy.

Mayor and Mrs. Walter Hannon and School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon will address the crowd briefly when the fair opens at 9 a.m. Then the spotlight will turn to women.

The legal field and related careers will be represented by a woman lawyer, probation officer, court officer [first one in the history of the Quincy Court] and by Quincy's first policewoman.

Women in education will include two women principals in Quincy, departments heads, a reading lab instructor and the director of pupil personnel services for the Quincy schools.

Rev. Alicia Corea of the Houghts Neck Congregational Church and Sisters Elaine and Denise of St. John's Religious Education Office will discuss careers for women in religion.

Two women doctors, the director of nursing at Quincy City Hospital, an R.N., and L.P.N. and a nursing assistant will give students an understanding of the role of women in providing health care.

Women reporters from The Patriot Ledger, The Quincy Sun and radio station WHDH will discuss the opportunities for women in the communications field.

The Coast Guard, the Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force will each be represented by woman recruiters.

Women in art, music and the theater will demonstrate the satisfaction which women of talent can achieve in pursuing artistic endeavors.

Women from local banks and companies such as New England Telephone and Telegraph, General Dynamics, Filene's, Computer Corporation of America, State Street Bank, John Corcoran Co., and Eastern Airlines will provide students with an insight into opportunities from women at all job levels. The presence of women in positions of authority in departments in the City of Quincy will be made manifest by women from the Offices of the Mayor, Public Works, Assessing, Auditor, Personnel and City Council.

Students can indulge an interest in the political process by talking to women who are presently active in politics and who are eager to encourage more women to become involved.

Architecture and urban design will be discussed by women planners from Arlington and Quincy.

The self-employed woman will be represented by women who own beauty parlors, bakeries, flower shops and restaurants. Athletically inclined students will have a chance to talk to women from the Boston Lobsters and the Boston Red Sox.

Andrea Dupree, a graduate of North Quincy High School and Wellesley College will represent the Center for Astrophysics in Cambridge.

Besides providing answers about career choices, the fair will attempt to provide some awareness of the changing roles of women with information about family living and women's legal, educational and consumer rights. Marilyn Panaro of the National Organization for Women, and Maureen O'Brien, social health coordinator for the Quincy School Department, will cover this important area.

The Women's Commission feels that Spotlight on Women will:

- Provide young women with exposure to the variety of careers available to them.
- Stimulate in young women an awareness of their evolving role in our society.
- Recognize the achievements of successful women in our community.

The Steering Committee planning "Spotlight on Women" includes Alicia Coletti, chairwoman of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women; Christina Hefner, guidance office of Quincy Public Schools; Patricia Toland, education task force chairwoman of the Mayor's Commission; Diane Walsh, distributive education in the Quincy Public Schools; and Patricia Whalen, Career Education, Quincy Public Schools.

North Girls Have High Hopes

Although Cheryl Manoli's North Quincy girls' softball team has a number of veterans, most are playing different positions this year but, despite close defeats in their first two games, the Raiderettes' coach entertains hopes for a winning season.

The North girls will host Brockton Friday at Atlantic Junior High Field, will be home to Weymouth North Monday and will play at Brookline next Wednesday.

"Although half our starting team played last year, we actually are rebuilding," Miss Manoli said. "All are playing new positions this season. Offensively, I feel we are stronger than last year. Our pitching prospects have improved with both a right hander and a left hander who have good speed. We look forward this year to well-contested games in our second Suburban League season."

North last week dropped a 9-8 squeaker to Barbara Webster's Quincy girls, who have scored a lot of runs but also had a lot scored against them. In their previous game the Raiderettes lost to Cambridge Latin, 4-2.

Miss Manoli is carrying 13 players on her varsity team. Cheryl Walsh and Nancy Laing are senior starters at shortstop and first base respectively. Returning junior Nancy Willard at third base and sophomore Linda Henry at second round out the infield. Terry Conroy, a returning junior, is the catcher.

The starting outfielders are Kyle Harrow, Marianne O'Sullivan and Sarah Cobban.

The two top pitchers are Sharon Cobban and Ellen Moynihan and rounding out the squad are Jackie Adams, Marie Duggan and Joyce Flynn.

North Trackmen Meet Brookline Friday

North Quincy's track team, which made an excellent showing in last Saturday's State Relays, will be at Brookline Friday in a Suburban League meet. The Raiders will host Waltham Tuesday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

sprint medley team of John Mackey, Brian and Paul Doherty and Mark Canavan won in Class B as did the distance medley team of Jerry MacKenzie, Paul Doherty, Art Barrett and Bart Petracca.

The Raiders also took second in the javelin, fourth in the high jump and fifth in the discus.

Earlier last week Lou Tozzi's Raiders romped over Rindge Tech, 91-55, for their first league win after losses to Weymouth North and Newton.

Petracca, who has made it a habit of setting records in spring track as well as winter track and cross country, broke the school record in winning the two-mile in 9:30. Kevin Henry had held the old mark of 9:42.3.

Tozzi expressed himself as pleased with the outcome and pointed to Pete Hemphill's winning toss of 161-9 in the javelin.

Other Raider winners were Brian Doherty in the 220 and long jump, MacKenzie in the 440, Canavan, half mile; Barrett, mile; Mark Reale, low hurdles; Jack Gallagher, discus, the relay team.

North swept a pair of non-league meets, romping over Milton Academy, 87-29, and defeating Thayer Academy, 76-64.

Against Milton Brian Doherty won the javelin and long jump, MacKenzie won the half mile, Bob Levenson the mile, Ken O'Brien the two-mile, Dave Lorman the high hurdles, Paul Doherty the shot put, Gallagher the discus, Rich Mahoney the high jump and Steve Doherty the pole vault.

In the Thayer meet Hemphill won the javelin, Paul Doherty the shot, Petracca the mile, MacKenzie the 440, Reale the low hurdles, Mike Morin the two-mile, Canavan the half mile and Mahoney the high jump. The relay team also won.

Raiders Edge Quincy Behind Clifford 3-Hitter

Tim Clifford, North Quincy's ace pitcher who has been struggling this year, returned to his outstanding form of last season Monday when he hurled the Raiders to a 3-1 win over Quincy, as North ended a four-game losing streak.

Friday Quincy plays at Waltham and North is home to Brookline at Adams Field. Monday it will be Quincy at Rindge Tech and Newton at North and next Wednesday Weymouth North at Quincy and North at Brockton.

Clifford, who had a brilliant 1974 season, pitched his best game of the year Monday as he held the Presidents to three hits, struck out seven and walked three. The lone Quincy run scored on a bad throw to second by the catcher on a stolen base.

Paul Vespezziani also hurled excellent ball for Quincy as he gave up four hits, struck out five and walked five.

The fourth inning was his undoing as Cooper Jordan singled and stole second, Rich Magnarelli walked, Fran Micelli forced Jordan at third and John Lawlor walked to fill the bases. Bill Driscoll cleared the bases with a long double to the fence in left field. Jack Rabel and Micelli had the other North hits. Singles by Dave Rafferty, Mike MacKenzie and Lou Fishman were the only Quincy hits.

The win gave North a 4-4 record [2-4 in the Suburban League] and Quincy fell to 5-4 overall [4-3 in the league].

Saturday North lost to Cambridge Latin, 7-3, for its fourth loss in a row as it suffered its worst day defensively.

Last Friday Quincy was defeated by Brookline, 4-2. The Presidents were held to five hits, three, a triple, double and single, by Rafferty. Steve Infascelli went the route, giving up six hits in a losing cause.

Earlier in the week the Presidents walloped Rindge Tech, 10-3, as Fishman pitched a two-hitter and Dan O'Leary, who bats ninth, went three for three and drove in four runs. MacKenzie and Dom Ignani had two hits each.

North dropped its third straight league decision, 7-4, to unbeaten Newton, as Clifford absorbed the loss. Steve McKinnon had two hits and Jordan drove in two runs.

In its previous game Quincy had suffered its first league loss, 12-0, to Newton. Quincy was held to three hits while the winners had 11 off four Quincy hurlers. Starter John Riley was the loser.

North was defeated by Weymouth South, 8-2, as it collected only two hits, while Weymouth pounded out 14 off loser Lawlor, Clifford and Mike Holleran.

● Basketball Point, Beechwood Win Basketball Titles

The Elementary and Junior High championship games in the Quincy Recreation Dept. all-city basketball tournament were played last week before a large crowd at Quincy Vo-Tech gym.

Point, coached by John Franchini, defeated Atlantic, coached by Don Smith, for the Elementary Division title.

Point had a balanced attack with Dean Coletti scoring 14 points, Gary DiNardo 11 and Patrick Fay 10. Other scorers were Steve Priscella and Ron Pettinelli. For Atlantic Adam Lambert scored 12, Paul Gill seven and Frank Gaziano three.

The Junior High crown went to Beechwood Knoll, coached by Brad Buckley, which defeated Montclair, coached by Ron West, 52-38.

Jim Holleran scored 18 points and Peter Marino 14 to spark Beechwood, which finished second last year. Other Beechwood scorers were Rich McCerra, Bob Gordon and Tom Nolan. For Montclair Bill Murphy had 12 points, Bob Cervale seven and Colin McEachern and Jack Masters six each. Also scoring were Bill Timmons, Larry Baker and Bill Amden.

Oscar-type trophies were presented to members of the winning teams by tournament director Barry Welch. They went to Beechwood Knoll's Holleran, Matty Breslin, Kevin O'Malley, Marino, Gordon, Nolan, Peter Mezzetti and McCerra.

Also to Point's DiNardo, Chuck Marshall, Fay, Coletti, Priscella, Bob Inello, Jim Paolucci and Pettinelli.

Earlier Sterling had nipped Squantum, 53-52, in overtime to win the Senior Division championship.

Preston Carroll, the tournament's top scorer, had 31 points to spark Sterling. At the end of regulation time the score was tied at 47.

Top players for Sterling were the high scoring Carroll, who scored the winning basket, Glen Post, Jim Forrester, Jeff Little, Eric Carrera and Mark Bocanain. Sterling was coached by Dave Simpson.

Paul Baker had 25 points to pace Coach George Alcott's Squantum team and was the leading rebounder in the game.

Squantum's other players were Will Cenga, Paul Courtney, Paul White, Bob Constantino, Brian Toomey, William Johnston, Pat Watkins, Chris Carr, Harold Hutchings and Ed Hanrahan.

Welch presented the championship trophy to Tony Cedroni, who was unable to play the championship game because of an injury.

Renegades Place 2nd In Lewiston

The Quincy Renegades Drum and Bugle Corps recently participated in a contest at the Lewiston Armory in Maine, called "Colorama's 75".

The contest marked the group's first time as a Class A2

[B] drum and bugle corps, and they finished second with a score of 73.75, losing by 6/10 of a point to the White Eagles of Methuen.

The Renegades next contest will be in Connecticut on April 20.

Quincy Trackmen Host Newton Friday

Quincy's track team, which last week suffered its first Suburban League defeat after two impressive wins, will host Newton Friday and Kinde Tech Tuesday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Tom Hall's Presidents could score only one point last Saturday in the State Relays as they took fifth place in the Class A javelin.

Quincy dropped a 92-53 decision last week to Weymouth South, which Hall considers the best team in the league. "They just had too much depth for us," Hall said.

Although it didn't count in the scoring, one of Quincy's top performances was by a freshman, John Saville, who ran a fine 4:48 mile.

Quincy's Art DeLoreto won the high hurdles in a fine 15.3 second effort and cleared 6-1 in finishing second in the high jump.

Bob Thorne won the two-mile, Preston Carroll the low hurdles and the relay team also was a winner.

Broad Meadows Opens Baseball Season

The Broad Meadows Junior High baseball team opened its season Tuesday against Atlantic-North's defending champions and today [Thursday] plays at Sterling.

Coach Jim Sullivan has some excellent seventh grade prospects to boost his hopes. There is about an equal number of boys from all three grade levels, seventh, eighth and ninth grades.

"We have four returnees from last year's team and the spirit is high," Sullivan said. "We are optimistic for a good season as most of the players have had experience in various leagues."

Sullivan's top pitchers are Mark Giordani, Ron Donovan and Dave Austin.

The veterans are Pete Cassidy, John Houten, Don Murray and Bill Rose.

Rounding out the squad are Austin, Giordani, Ron Donovan, Tom Brennan, Richard Brill, John Congdon, Fran Donovan, Tom Dormady, Mark Forrester, Mike Shea and Pete Sullivan.

BM plays its home games at LaBrecque Field in Houghs Neck.

Weymouth, in winning its third straight league meet, won 11 of the 16 events as it displayed great depth in most events.

Quincy's girls' team lost to Weymouth South, 76-33, but Coach Bob Troup had a double winner in Kathy Keating (shot put and discus). Jodi Yurkatas won the high jump and Quincy won the medley relay.

Christian Science Lecture Topic

The healing power of a spiritually enlightened concept of home will be explored in a public lecture in Quincy Saturday.

Miss Nancy E. Houston, C.S., a Christian Science lecturer from Urbana, Ill., will be the speaker.

"Whether we live on wheels, whether we live in the suburbs, whether we're in a nursing home, a college dorm, in the ghetto," she will say, "in reality we take our concept of home with us wherever we go. So it's important for us to see just what our idea of home is. And the influence for good it can have upon our lives and the lives of others."

Miss Houston will speak under the auspices of First Church of Christ Scientist in the

- [A] Transit Capital Grant Application [B] Highway Location and Design

Pursuant to Section 3 [d] [1] of the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964, as amended, and/or the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1973, and the provisions of Chapter 106, Section 104 of the Massachusetts General Laws, as amended, the Public Works will hold a PUBLIC HEARING on May 28, 1975, at the Masonic Temple of Quincy, 1170 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts, from 11:00 AM to 4:00 PM, and reconvening at 7:00 PM, concerning plans to construct a South Quincy Rapid Transit Station, with related parking facilities, and other highway improvements in the South Quincy area.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Works plans to improve certain roadways throughout the area. Specifically, these improvements will involve the realignment of Route 3 through North Braintree, the construction of a collector distributor paralleling Route 3, and the upgrading of Capens Circle.

The South Quincy MBTA Station and Parking Facilities will be located approximately 1.5 miles from the Quincy Center Station along the existing South Shore Transit Right of Way, in close proximity to the Route 3/Route 128 interchange. The MBTA plans to submit to the U.S. Department of Transportation a federal aid application requesting a capital facilities grant to assist in the financing of engineering and construction of a rapid transit station, a parking facility accommodating approximately 1,800 to 2,000 cars, ramps to the parking structure, and circulation roadways for buses and kiss-and-ride patrons.

The MBTA's project is estimated to cost $26,268,804. An application for a capital grant of $21,015,043 will be filed with the Urban Mass Transportation Administration of the U.S. Department of Transportation, under the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964 as amended, and/or the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1973. The remaining $5,253,761 in capital funds will be provided as local share by the issuance of Authority bonds consistent with authorization granted by the Legislature.

Both the MBTA and the MDPW policies for land acquisition and relocation assistance will be discussed at the Hearing. Eight businesses housed in five structures will be displaced by the project and the freight trucks used by the Penn Central will be relocated. No families

Overlooks Personal Beliefs

Cerasoli Votes For Death

Penalty After Polling Constituents

Rep. Robert Cerasoli says he overlooked his own "personal, religious and philosophical beliefs" to vote for re-establishment of the death penalty.

He says he feels the same way about the drinking law and will vote to increase the minimum drinking age to 21.

Cerasoli, who had previously voted against the death penalty and in favor of the current 18-year-old drinking law, said he felt obligated to change his votes "because of the overwhelming feeling in favor of the death penalty and the 21-year-old drinking age."

In a random public opinion poll, Cerasoli said he asked 500 residents in his district: "Do you favor the death penalty?" and "Do you believe a person should be able to drink at 18 years of age or 21 years of age?"

Of the 500 people polled, 415 [approximately 83 per cent], said they favored the death penalty and 430 [approximately 86 per cent] said a person should be able to drink at age 21, he reported.

A total of 85 said they did not favor the death penalty because of personal or religious reasons. A total of 70 said a person should be able to drink at 18.

After reviewing the results of the poll, Cerasoli said he decided to change his previous votes on both issues:

"I will overlook my own personal, religious and philosophical beliefs and vote for the death penalty and for a 21-year-old drinking age on the basis of the random sample public opinion poll of my district," he said.

Cerasoli also asked a second question: "What do you feel the biggest and most serious problem facing the state is?"

The representative said he recorded the immediate response of the individual. A total of 333 people [66.6 per cent] said welfare, 135 [27 per cent] said unemployment, 21 [4.2 per cent] said crime and 21 [4.2 per cent] replied with miscellaneous answers including taxes, prison reform, police protection, inflation and the economy.

Cerasoli said he asked the second question because he was "curious about what the people were thinking." Half the poll was taken door-to-door, he said, and half by meeting people on the street.

Cite Equipment Lack, Money Delay

Nurses Protesting With Signs Touch Off Mixed Reaction

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Quincy officials.

A silent protest staged by some 20 sign-carrying Quincy City Hospital nurses to focus upon lack of equipment and delayed payment of recently-won pay raises has brought mixed reaction from Quincy officials. The night shift nurses gathered outside the Hospital cafeteria April 29, hoping to be invited inside, as the hospital Board of Managers met with hospital administrators, head physicians and the City Council to discuss additions and other long-range building plans at the hospital.

Chiding the men for dining on prime rib and cocktails, the nurses carried signs stating money spent on each dinner could have purchased needed hospital equipment.

Property Use Amendment

Tobin Leads 100% Valuation Fight

A constitutional amendment which would assess property according to its use rather than at 100 per cent valuation was scheduled for debate Wednesday at a joint session of the House and Senate in the state's Constitutional Convention.

The amendment, filed by Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin, was reported out favorably by the Committee on Taxation Monday.

Tobin said he and other members of the Quincy delegation planned to lead the debate on the amendment.

An alternative to 100 per cent valuation which, according to Tobin, would "hurt the little homeowner", the amendment would establish four categories specifying the use of property. Property would be designated either industrial, commercial, residential or open space and would then be assessed accordingly.

In December the state Supreme Court ruled that all municipalities in the Commonwealth must assess its property at 100 per cent valuation. To change this ruling, now a part of the state constitution, a constitutional amendment must pass in two consecutive joint sessions of the House and Senate at the Constitutional Convention.

The amendment must receive at least 141 votes, a number representing one more than half of the combined legislators eligible and voting [240 representatives, 40 senators].

If passed this year, the amendment will go to the people on the ballot. If passed by the people, the amendment will then face a second passage before the Constitutional Convention in 1977.

A resolve supporting Tobin's legislation was introduced before the City Council by Councillor Leo J. Kelly and received unanimous Council approval.

Tobin's amendment was scheduled as No. 8 on the Convention calendar.

they have renewed their license. This could mean that if they are stopped for a violation within or out of State, they would be subject to delays and embarrassment because there would be no record of a current license.

Private Investments Eyed

Businessmen Unite To Accelerate Downtown Renewal

A corporation of private businessmen has been organized to co-ordinate plans and raise private funds to help accelerate the revitalization of the Quincy Center Business District.

Formed after months of discussion with Mayor Walter J. Hannon, the City Council and other Quincy organizations, Progress Downtown Quincy, Inc. [PDQ] has dedicated itself to the economic, physical and recreational improvement of the city by working together on major development projects.

Mayor Hannon and John Vivian, president of the new corporation, and president of The Quincy Bank, jointly announced the formation of PDQ at a press conference Wednesday morning at City Hall.

PDQ hopes to encourage private bank investment in specific revitalization projects, thus augmenting any federal funds obtained by the city for improvement in the Quincy Center Business District.

The 13 incorporators of PDQ include individuals from banks, real estate, engineering, planning and development, and from regional and Quincy-based business organizations. Elected as officers of PDQ in addition to John Vivian, president of The Quincy Cooperative Bank, president; are:

Quinn Sees Possible Real Estate Tax Cut

City Council Finance Committee Chairman John Quinn sees a possible real estate tax reduction for Quincy property owners this year.

"There's a good chance of no increase in the rate or a possible reduction of about 50 cents," Quinn said.

He predicts the Finance Committee will cut between $100,000 and $200,000—probably $150,000—from Mayor Walter Hannon's proposed $69,512,937 municipal budget.

This would represent, he estimates, a savings of between 40 and 80 cents on this year's tax rate.

"The mayor sent us an extremely tight budget," Quinn noted. "There isn't too much for us to cut."

"The mayor implemented many of the techniques adopted by the Finance Committee in cutting last year's budget. By doing so, he has submitted a tight budget this year."

Quinn said the Finance Committee will finish up its pruning session Saturday with the School and Hospital departments. The Finance Committee will then announce its cuts.

He said the City Council will pass the budget at a special meeting next Wednesday [May 14] at 5:30 p.m.

Loyalty Day Keynote

'Loyalty, Liberty, Justice Will Prevail In America'

Though Loyalty Day dawned dreary in Quincy, city officials sounded a positive, hopeful note, telling citizens loyalty, liberty and justice will prevail in America.

Keynote speakers were Mayor Walter Hannon and Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin.

Mayor Hannon told the crowd in front of historic First Parish Church gathered in Quincy Sq. that they and this entire generation of Americans "shall be free, loyal, and liberty and justice will be for us all."

He said the people of the U.S. will be no different from the thousands who came before us. Hannon asked the crowd:

"Do we here, in this time of our country's life, have the same determination and courage as our forefathers? The answer is a resounding yes."

Tobin, noting that the memory of descendants is "our most hallowed possession," said:

"We dare not forget that they cared. They stood firm. They struggled and suffered. They died because of their loyalty. That message must never be lost to us or our children."

Faced with unemployment, the tragedy of the war in Vietnam, and other "trying times," citizens must meet the demands of loyalty, Tobin said.

"These are trying times for the strongest of us," he said. "And that's why now, more than ever, we need to remind ourselves of that one quality which created this country. Through the darkest of times, it has been that one virtue called Loyalty which has helped us to survive."

Tobin called upon citizens to make loyalty their creed and "let our deeds demonstrate our dedication."

Loyalty Day Parade is sponsored yearly by the George F. Bryan VFW Post "to stand up and speak out clearly on how lucky we are to be Americans."

Rabbi Jacob Mann offered an invocation from the steps of United First Parish Church, followed by the addresses of Hannon and Tobin.

A parade including more than 2,000 marchers and 25 bands began after the ceremonies with Hannon, Tobin, City Councilors Leo Kelly, John Quinn, John Lydon, James Sheets, School Committeeman Harold Davis and Commissioner of Natural Resources Richard Koch leading the ranks.

Davis Seeks Flashing Light At QSD - Samoset Ave.

Harold Davis, candidate for city councillor-at-large, suggests the installation of a flashing yellow light at the corner of Samoset Ave. and Quincy Shore Drive, Merrymount to slow down speeding drivers.

In a letter to MDC

Commissioner William J. Byrne Jr., Davis said the problem of speeding cars on the MDC highway has plagued area residents for years, resulting in crashes with houses, telephone poles and street lights along the road.

Davis said area residents had noticed "increased monitoring of traffic and apprehension of speeders" but said these may only be "interim measures."

He suggested the MDC conduct an entire traffic study of Quincy Shore Drive, in the Merrymount section.

Annual Junk Cleanup

'Operation Pride' Begins May 27

"Operation Pride", Quincy's annual spring collection program, will begin Tuesday, May 27, and continue through Thursday, July 3, announces Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti.

During the cleanup operation, from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. during those dates, personnel from the Quincy Highway Department will pick up articles of discarded furniture, appliances and other bulky items not generally handled by the rubbish contractor.

Articles not included under Operation Pride are trees, stumps and branches, and large items of lumber.

Residents are also reminded that the law requires the removal of all doors from refrigerators or other appliances.

Ricciuti said all material to be discarded must be placed on the sidewalk before 7 a.m. on the first day scheduled in each ward.

For the purpose of convenience to the department, he said, old ward lines will be used and residents should conform to the dates listed for pickup in their area:

- Ward 2 - May 27 to May 30.
- Ward 1 - June 2 to June 6.
- Ward 3 - June 9 to June 13.
- Ward 4 - June 16 to June 20.
- Ward 5 - June 23 to June 27.
- Ward 6 - June 30 to July 3.

Residents are urged to have their discarded materials on the sidewalk on the first day of the week, excluding holidays, or they will not be picked up. The highway department cannot, because of scheduling, return to an area previously collected.

Wedding poses relative problem

By RIV TOBIN
Copley News Service

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

I'm planning a June wedding. I have three sisters (18-27) and Bob has four sisters (6-28) and we both have close cousins and classmates. Everyone wants to get into the act. I'm being badgered to have three flower girls and eight bridesmaids! Do Bob's and my relatives HAVE to be in the wedding party? Should we elope? The whole thing is driving us up the wall. — Distraught

Dear Distraught:

Don't elope. Why not select your oldest sister to be your maid (or matron) of honor and Bob's oldest sister for your second attendant? Bob's 6-year-old sister could be the flower girl. Obviously some of the other relatives are going to be left out but you are having a wedding, not a coronation. Another way out of your dilemma is to choose only your former schoolmates. — Good luck

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

My dentist has recommended I have full dentures. I agree, but what I want to know is, would it be ethical to ask him how much he will charge? — Pensioner

Dear Pensioner:

Of course it would be ethical and sensible. If the cost is too steep for your pocketbook, arrangements can usually be made to pay on the installment plan. Discuss the entire matter with your dentist.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

I have a friend I know for a fact is 73. She tells everyone she was born in 1915. Actually, she is probably fooling most of her friends. Should I set them straight? — Contemporary

Dear Contemporary:

I think your friend is probably fooling herself most of all. Let her enjoy her white lie. Nature will eventually catch up with her.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

We were invited to a small informal dinner party. I had asked the hostess what the order of dress was and she said, "Oh, very informal!" I wore a pale green wool pant suit and my husband wore new jeans and a turtle neck shirt. The hostess greeted us wearing a flowing jeweled caftan and her husband had on silk trousers and an embroidered silk shirt. Who was wrong? — Shabby Sue

Dear Shabby Sue:

I don't believe anyone was "wrong." A jeweled caftan IS informal in many social circles and so is your wool pant suit. Silk slacks and an embroidered shirt certainly aren't formal attire and neither are jeans or turtle neck shirts. If you felt unduly self-conscious, study the style trends in your community. What did the other guests wear?

Sports Fashions Breakthrough For Women

The 70's have marked women's breakthrough in sports, and now comes a breakthrough in women's sportswear. A recent New York fashion showing called "Women in Sports" revealed the newest easy-care ideas and designs for today's active or sports-minded women.

Television's Julia Meade, commentator for the show, introduced this season's "hottest" fashion for the active women, the cold-water washable warm-up suit. She then spotlighted the latest looks for golf, tennis, skiing, skating, hiking, riding and swimming, all in easy-care outfits with a common advantage—they're all cold water washable in the machine.

Miss Meade, who assembled the new sportswear collection with the help of the fashion consultants for Cold Power, the original cold water laundry detergent, reported that while white has become the color for the golf course, colors are now pushing white off the tennis courts.

Also news in upcoming golf fashions is the comeback of Bermuda shorts and the use of terry.

For the courts, three new tennis outfits by Jennifer Story and featured by Christie Evert for Puritan include a navy cotton tank top with white polyester shorts and red-white-blue belt, a bright yellow bar-backed sundress in polyester with white accents, and a cotton-backed polyester dress trimmed with bright green and red Gucci stripes.

In showing the new tennis colors Miss Meade stressed that manufacturers do not recommend hot water laundering for today's synthetic fabrics. The fabrics wear longer and stay brighter, she said, when machine-washed in cold water.

She showed five different versions of the popular warm-up suit that women will be seeing everywhere. It's coming in so many variations that it can double for casual social gatherings, at-home entertaining and supermarket shopping in addition to exercising and before-and-after sports.

The "Women in Sports" collection demonstrated how ski fans will be making a colorful show on the slopes this year. One design by Head is bright yellow, accented with orange, teal and green. Another is deep forest green with an electric yellow trim. Both suits are 100% down-padded for lightweight warmth.

The new swimwear for the winter resort season leans toward the sleek tank suit in Lycra. Also new is a three-piece bikini—in pink-and-white striped nylon.

How To Make A Blue Jean Shoulder Bag

Hi, Betty!

Do you know how to make a blue jeans shoulder bag? My teenager daughter would love to make one. — Pat Doran, Kansas City, Mo.

From the ones I've seen, I would say you can make them any way you want to. The quickest method would be to cut off the jeans at the crotch.

Turn the top half wrong side out. Stitch the two cut edges together to form the bottom of the purse. Stitch a couple of additional rows next to the first for security. The waistband becomes the top of the purse. Close it with a big decorative zipper. Use the pant legs to cut shoulder straps.

If you want to take a little more time, you can make a very attractive blue jeans bag by using the instructions from the Patchwork Shoulder Bag leaflet (10 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope). By placing pockets from the jeans at strategic spots on the flap, you have built-in hideaways for sunglasses, hankies, etc.

LET'S TALK

How do you get rid of self-pity?

By REV. W. LEE TRUMAN

Self-pity is indulged in occasionally by everyone, but no one likes to admit it.

Basically self-pity is the emotion of covering up. It is the most often used defense for feelings of aggressions and of guilt. It is the common excuse for failing to face life objectively, and ready alibi for inaction, and the ointment for our pride when we fail.

While in the Belgian Congo, during the 1960 revolution, I had gasoline thrown at me and I was then set on fire. Being very badly burned and spending some time in a hospital with other casualties, I talked at length to the young man in the next bed.

His mother had convinced him that he was a total invalid because of his injuries. He would not try, and very politely but firmly resisted any attempt I made to encourage him in the belief that he could do something with the health he had.

While this is an extreme example of what self-pity can do to a personality, you can look around and see the same kinds of results in the lives of people around us — people who are unable to make any decisive effort because they feel their difficulties are the result of their circumstances. They can see no possible way in which their lives can be changed for the better; therefore, it cannot be done.

The way you get rid of self-pity and replace it with positive constructive action, is to find out why you feel sorry for yourself. Self-pity has all kinds of roots. One root is the self-love characteristic of a little child who feels he is the center of the universe. This kind of self-pity is a bid for attention. Such persons feel like they are not loved as much as they would like to be, and this leads to self-pity. This kind of self-love-pity can take some slight or uncomplimentary word and develop it into a paragraph.

Often this person cloaks his or her aggressiveness in a meek, quiet long-suffering facade but beneath the surface is boiling with aggression. They feel that life has imposed upon them, and they can explode very unexpectedly.

The second symptom of self-pity is the unconscious satisfaction received in having to endure home or work situations where abuse is received and the person is placed in the position of a martyr.

At home a husband sobers up but the wife is deeply resentful because now he wants to take again his proper responsibilities. The wife has fed her hunger for love by self-pity and met her needs for security by being the center of the family's world. The husband, sobering up, upsets all this, so the wife does those things which makes him drink again.

The healthy person is one who can say to himself at the end of the day that he may not be very far up the road, but this is the progress he has made this day. His life compared with the mess it was yesterday does show progress. As the days come and go, he knows he has exercised his basic ability to be decisive rather than permit himself to be defeated by the sweet but expensive luxury of self-pity.

ADVICE FOR SKIPPERS

That too few skippers (whether it be of a canoe or a yacht) know little more than how to wear their yachtman's cap is attested to by the grim statistics collected annually by the U.S. Coast Guard. You can almost depend on the 1,100 persons dying annually in boating accidents.

The number one error is overloading the boat. Take the case of four fishermen who piled into a 14-foot boat and put out into a northern lake. So crippling was the small boat's load that only five inches of the craft's sides rose above the water. A slight wind blew up, and the resultant waves quickly swamped and sank the boat. Two, unable to swim, drowned.

Overloading happens with cabin cruisers as well as row boats. The Coast Guard offers this simple advice: "If the boat looks or feels overloaded, it probably is, so don't take it out."

By PAUL HAROLD
Quincy Welcomes Home
 World War 1 Vets

Quincy gave its boys their first "official" welcome home at a gala held on the lawn of the Adams Academy.

More than 1,500 returning soldiers, sailors and marines and their families, gathered at the academy for a band concert, trombone solo and selections by the Fore River Glee Club. Long tables were set up in the two rooms of the academy for serving ice cream, cakes, coffee and doughnuts.

The sub-committee in charge of refreshments included, Eugene Atwood, from Ward 1, Harry Gallagher, Ward 2, Mrs. Robert Foy, Ward 3, Mrs. John Ash, Ward 4, Mrs. Clarence Safford, Ward 5 and Welcome Young, Ward 6.

Mayor Whiton extended the welcome of the city and led the group in "three cheers and a tiger for the boys in khaki and blue."

CHIEF OF POLICE TO ARREST OPERATORS OF UNLICENSED BUSES

In the aftermath of Mayor Whiton's veto of a city council ordinance regulating jitney buses in Quincy, Police Chief Daniel McKay announced that "operators of unlicensed buses would be subject to arrest."

In the past, the city had allowed unlicensed jitneys to operate while their license was pending, but no longer.

Mayor Whiton vetoed the City Council ordinance because it would have given the power of regulating jitney buses to the state.

In his veto, Whiton said, "Local transportation is a community necessity and its operation should be carried out under and governed by local needs and conditions. These local needs and conditions can best be determined by the licensing board of the city of Quincy."

TEACHERS MAY UNIONIZE

Quincy's teachers held a mass rally at the Coddington School to hear Charles Stillman of the National Organization of American Federation of Teachers.

Stillman spoke on the benefits of unionizing and impressed those attending. However, no action was taken at the meeting.

It had been reported that Quincy teachers were the lowest paid in the state.

QUINCY REACHES LIBERTY LOAN QUOTA ON LAST DAY

It had been feared all week that Quincy would not reach its quota in the Liberty Loan Campaign, but in the final hours it went over the top. All the banks in the city were open until 9 p.m. in the effort to gain last minute subscribers for the campaign.

As a result of reaching its quota, the city will receive the "Victory Honor" flag and the "Beginning to End" flag.

In each of the previous four campaigns Quincy had gone over the top.

One of the largest sales in this campaign was made by Boy Scout, Preston Ela who sold a $5,000. Victory Liberty Loan bond to Perley Barbour, president of the Quincy Trust Company. The Boy Scouts sold bonds from a tent set up outside of City Hall.

SENATOR McINTOSH PRESIDES OVER SENATE

Quincy's Senator David McIntosh acted as president of the state senate at this week's session.

McIntosh had served as Whip for the Republican majority and was selected to preside over the upper chamber in the president's absence.

QUINCY-ISMS

The Naomi Society held a May basket party at the Swedish Congregational Church... The U.S. destroyer USS Welles was launched at Fore River Shipyard. It was named for Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy under Abraham Lincoln... The School Committee approved plans to build a new school at Quincy Point... The YMCA censured Sen. McIntosh for his vote allowing 4 percent beer... A legal ad in a local newspaper announced the formation of the Quincy Hospital department and its board of managers... Quincy Co-operative Bank elected Frank Crane, president and George Field, vice president... Some 164 returning veterans were honored at a banquet at the Park and Downs Church... The Alhambra, Quincy's leading photoplay theater proudly announced that "the air in our theater is changed every 30 seconds."

READERS DEPARTMENT

Recently received was an Oct. 9, 1919 edition of the former Quincy Evening Telegram, from a friend of Assistant City Clerk Thomas Burke.

Included in it was a quarter page advertisement, announcing the grand opening of the Strand Theatre [formerly the Auditorium].

Free evening classes at the Quincy Industrial School on Phipps St. were announced, along with a review of Alice Joyce in the latest Vitagraph picture. Grossman advertised for 20 laborers at 50 cents an hour [9 hours a day].

But perhaps the one item that gives you the best idea of what a "small town" Quincy was back then was the folksie weather report: "The Moxie glass at Harry Lark's Brewer's Corner store stood at 62 degrees in the sun at 8:30 this morning. Wind south, sunshine, blue sky and warmer."

SIGN-CARRYING nurses at Quincy City Hospital form a silent line of protest outside hospital cafeteria, calling attention to equipment and supply shortages as well as a delay in pay raise payment. Inside, the Hospital Board of Managers met with the City Council, hospital administrators and head physicians. The faces of the nurses are blacked out to shield their identity.

Money For Equipment As Fast As You Do For Prime Rib Dinner Meetings. Coffee And Donuts Are Cheaper. "Each Roast Beef Dinner Would Have Bought One Surgical Instrument."

While Mayor Walter J. Hannon said he had "absolutely no comment" as to the justification of the nurses' concerns, Hospital Director Harlan Paine called the protest "completely unjustified," chastising the nurses for not following "the proper channels" for grievances.

"I don't think the nurses are suffering in any way," said Paine. "I think that what they did was completely unjustified, completely out of order and unprofessional. They were supposed to be working, not protesting. They have proper channels to go through for legitimate grievances. Having a mass demonstration is not one of them."

Calling the nurses' protest "definitely justified," Councillor Joseph LaRaia said this type of demonstration was the only avenue of communications now open to the nurses. He said:

"I seem to think this is the only dialogue that is open to the nurses now. If there were better lines of communication, it wouldn't get to these situations. When these demonstrations or acts of their feelings take place, it is apparently because there is no other line of communication."

LaRaia said he couldn't criticize the nurses for their silent protest, calling it "the calmest type" of demonstration. LaRaia, chairman of the City Council's Hospital Committee and a mayoralty candidate, has called for an investigation of problems at the hospital including that of equipment.

George Tull, chairman of the Hospital Board of Managers, said he was unaware of the silent demonstration until close to the end of the meeting. Told the nurses were carrying signs referring to a need for suction machines and paper towels, Tull said:

"If these gals were worried and if a condition of that sort were existing, wouldn't it have been simple to go to their department heads? To have nurses, professional people, come to the meeting in a surprise maneuver on a problem which we didn't even know existed, it makes me wonder whether that was really the problem. I don't believe anyone would think its professional."

A spokesman for the nurses said aggravation had piled upon aggravation and there was "no time to go through the proper channels."

She said some nurses had encountered "reserved parking" signs in their usual parking spaces, forcing them to search for other spaces and causing them to be late for work.

She said, too, the nurses were "pushed into a corner" of the cafeteria to make room for tables and a bar being set up for the roast beef and cocktails dinner for those attending the meeting called by the Hospital Board of Managers.

Refuting allegations of neglect of duty, the spokesman said the nurses were on a 20-minute coffee break during the silent demonstration.

"The nurses were certainly not neglecting their duties or patients," the spokesman emphasized. The nurses were on their coffee break which lasts 20 minutes. Otherwise they would not have been allowed to leave the floor. And the girls were each representing a larger number of other nurses."

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin said he neither saw nor talked to the nurses, being unaware of their silent protest. Yet he said he would have met with the nurses if he had been asked.

"I would have listened to them," he said. "If they had requested to be there and that request had been denied, I would be concerned. If there are problems at the hospital, I think we should know about them. I would have sat down with them."

Commenting on the nurses' statement that money spent on roast beef dinners could have paid for hospital instruments, Tobin said he did not know whether payment for the dinners came from the cafeteria or the hospital budget. He said:

"If it cost several hundred dollars for the meal and if it came out of the hospital budget and if the nurses were told there was no money for face cloths and if that money would have paid for instruments or face cloths, by all means. But I don't know if this is true. But I don't think the city councillors or anyone are looking for a roast beef dinner."

Councillor Dennis Harrington called the reference to roast beef dinners not only "totally inaccurate from a municipal accounting standpoint" [since only capital outlay can be spent on equipment] but he also called it "a low shot".

Paine said funds for the dinner came from the hospital's dietary department. He said each department within the hospital has its own budget and funds allocated for food "could not have been used for the purchase of sutures or whatever."

Confronting the group of nurses outside the hospital cafeteria, Paine told them they would receive their raises retroactive to Jan. 1, 1975 in their next pay check. A spokesman for the nurses said:

"That was the first inkling we had of when we were going to get the raise."

She added each nurse had received a letter from Mayor Hannon early in April notifying them of payment of pay raises "approximately 20 days" from March 31, the day the City Council passed the necessary appropriations to fund the nurses' pay increases.

Hannon said the delay in awarding the pay raises was "a question of bookkeeping."

"The nurses are going to be paid in full," he said.

Cards carried by the nurses and referring to the delay in their pay raises read: "Prime Rib Indeed. Where Is Our Retroactive?" "Honorable Mayor Where Is Our Raise and Retroactive Money? Did You Just Eat It?"

In addition to discussing long-range expansion plans at the hospital, administrators and City Councillors also discussed the recent transfer of funds from capital outlay to expenses. Many councillors blamed the delay in purchasing needed surgical equipment on "a lack of communication" within the hospital and between the Hospital and the City Council. Councillor James Sheets, who said he did not view the lack of equipment as "an on-going one," said the problem was a matter of "organization and communication." He said:

"It's a question of getting recommendations from all surgeons and hospital staff in the operating rooms and getting those recommendations percolated up through the hospital structure and getting them to the Council. We're taking a step towards eliminating the problem... It will have to be worked on."

Paine said the surgical equipment will be ordered "just as soon as the surgical staff decides what they want."

A Sure Vote For Hannon--In Brooklyn

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Mayor Walter Hannon's decision to arm Quincy police with machineguns got mixed reactions here but he apparently made a hit in Brooklyn.

The story which goes back to December apparently took awhile to get to New York as it was the subject of a Brooklyn reader's letter in the New York Daily News only last week.

The head on the letter was "Tough Mayor" and the letter read: "Cheers for Mayor Walter J. Hannon of Quincy, Mass. who ordered two machineguns for his 230-man force. He also said that 'we are serving notice on anyone who decides to commit a crime, whether it's running a red light or armed robbery, that they will be dealt with severely.'

"If criminals know the police have superior firepower they'll give up more easily. Mayor Hannon is the kind of man we need in New York City."

The letter was signed "A.A.P." but The News has his full name.

QUINCY'S RUTH GORDON was quite impressed with the city's 350th anniversary party at the Chateau de Ville. And also with The Quincy Sun's pictorial coverage of the event.

Miss Gordon, a head table guest, writes to say that her friend, Kay LaBeau of Presidents Lane sent her a copy of The Sun.

"Thank you for the great space," she says. "I would love the picture on Page 1 and the centerfold with the two of us Ward 5-ites. It would mean a lot to me."

The photo on Page 1 showed Mayor Walter Hannon and School Supt. Lawrence Creedon roaring with laughter as Miss Gordon recalled, as a high school graduate, being told that becoming an actress was like being a harlot. "Don't knock it unless you've tried it," Miss Gordon retorted.

The other photo shows her chatting warmly about "their" Wollaston with Ward 5 Councillor Warren Powers.

Miss Gordon who kept her remarks brief that night to help speed up the program says:

"What a terrific event it was. I'm going to come back and say my whole speech."

The two photos she requested are on their way to her. They were taken by The Sun's Steve Liss who has many fans who admire his work.

WELL, Baron may not be too sure of his ancestry, but he can really put on the dog now if he wants to. He's now wearing Quincy dog license No. "1776" which in canine circles must be the grooviest vanity plate, man.

Baron's owner, Mrs. Mafalda Lucy of 184 Newbury Ave., North Quincy, just happened to walk into City Hall at the right moment when No. 1776 was the next license to be issued in the clerk's office.

As for Baron, it couldn't have happened to a nicer dog. He's just a plain average guy who gets along with everyone in the neighborhood. He's a three-year-old mongrel.

"A beagle and everything else," says Mrs. Lucy. "He's the best natured thing God ever put on earth. He's a big, loveable sissy. Everyone loves him."

DID YOU KNOW that Peter Henderson, custodian at the Merymount School, was one of the standouts at the April 19th ceremonies at Concord? He served as the official piper for President Ford at North Bridge. He also plays the bagpipes and marched with the chief marshal of the parade and then sat in the reviewing stand with President Ford.

and credibility in our budgeting process," he said. "We cannot tell our teachers and department heads to tighten their belts while we appropriate money for ourselves."

"The people of this city simply cannot afford this luxury tax. In my opinion it is not only excessive but totally unnecessary. I invite all interested parties to contact members of the School Committee and voice your opinion."

Businessmen Organize To Accelerate Downtown Revitalization

PDQ are Charles A. Pearce, president Quincy Savings Bank; Robert Blair, chairman of the board of South Shore National Bank; William E. Kelley, president Hancock Bank; Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman Quincy Planning Board and president of Quincy Point Congregational Homes, Inc.; Atty. Harold H. Slate, businessman and property owner; Robert M. Faxon, businessman and property owner; Frank E. Remick, owner of Remick's of Quincy; William Moore, civil engineer; and Harvey MacArthur, chairman of the board of Quincy Mutual Life Insurance.

Vivian noted the institutions represented by members of PDQ have already made a $5 million capital investment in Quincy Center over the past 10 years. He said:

"The new Quincy Savings Bank building, the renovations at the Quincy Cooperative Bank, the storefront renovations of the South Shore National Bank as well as the continuing contribution of Remick's, a focal point for the retail area for years, are among the examples of this investment."

Vivian said the new corporation will carry on "the tradition of business and government cooperation in downtown revitalization" begun in 1970 when the business community sponsored a Harvard Business School study of "new directions" for Quincy Center. The business community then financed the $45,000 Hilgenhurst study which formulated the planning directions being discussed and implemented in Quincy today.

The goals of the new corporation also include the investigation of problems which might be hindering development in Quincy, such as traffic and parking.

PDQ will cooperate with other organizations such as the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, the Quincy Business Council of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, various neighborhood organizations such as the Presidents Hill Association, the Quincy Historical Society, realtors and service clubs as well as city departments, to involve the entire community in the development of its city.

PDQ's first meeting as a corporation will take place today [Thursday]. Budget and goals will be discussed.

Vivian said the goals of PDQ are especially significant during the city's anniversary years.

"It is appropriate that all organizations work together during the 350th anniversary of the first settlement of Quincy to recognize what is worth preserving in our traditions and to work to build a better community."

Mixed Reaction On Nurses' Sign Protest

saying he had "no direct communication" with the nurses, said any lack of instruments in the hospital should be brought to the attention of department heads within the hospital "through the proper channels and to the proper parties." Speaking of any lack of equipment, Quinn said: "There is no mountain here and it's not necessary to blow it up into a mountain."

Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, chief of surgery at the Hospital who recently complained of inadequate surgical instrument supplies at the hospital, said he felt confident, as a result of last Tuesday's meeting, the hospital would in the near future receive "100 per cent" of the surgical equipment needed. He said he was not aware of a lack of face towels forcing nurses to clean patients' faces with paper towels.

Councillor John Lydon said he was unaware the nurses were protesting a lack of equipment at the hospital. He said he had seen only one sign saying the Hospital "used to be a nice place to work." Lydon said:

"It was not the right time and place to have that type of a picket line. And I would criticize the nurses strongly because it is my understanding they left their floors and came off their charges. It shows some lack of professionalism. To leave their duty stations was wrong."

Quoting figure cited by Dr. Fitzgerald, Councillor Dennis Harrington said there is "definitely a lack of instruments" when one-third of the instruments are either being repaired or on order. He blamed the hospital for any lack of instruments, saying $200,000 in capital outlay funds appropriated by the Council had not been spent.

Yet Harrington was critical of the nurses' behavior. He said:

"Pickets, protests and petitions are usually performed in public when someone has exhausted all other remedies and avenues. These nurses were in error if for no other reason than they failed to petition. Only if they could say their petitions fell on deaf ears could they justify leaving their duties and patients they were supposed to attend to take part in an active protest."

But Councillor Warren Powers defended the nurses' concern over patient care at the hospital. He said:

"I like to see their concern in the operation of the hospital, their concern that the hospital facilities are adequate to provide proper patient care...Anyone concerned about health care should be able to express his opinions and bring them to the attention of the Board of Managers and the City Council." Powers added any benefits derived from the use of dinner funds to buy hospital equipment would be "minuscule from a practical viewpoint." He said:

"The complaint about a meal is ironical when we were in there trying to grind things out."

Noting the nurses had not appeared before the City Council to voice their concerns, Councillor Leo Kelly said the nurses "were progressing way down the line" before letting anyone respond to their concerns. He said:

"Any concern is justified if done properly. But I don't know if this was proper...If the nurses had come to the Council and their requests had not been honored, then certainly steps like that would have been the ones to take."

Rev. Roger Kvam New Pastor First United Presbyterian Church

Rev. Roger A. Kvam of Decorah, Iowa has accepted the pastorship at First United Presbyterian Church, 270 Franklin St., South Quincy.

He succeeds Rev. Dr. Richard Lovelace who served one year as interim pastor.

A graduate of Wheaton College, Wheaton, Ill., where he majored in history and political science, Rev. Kvam entered Princeton Theological Seminary in 1954.

Upon graduation three years later, he accepted a call to be minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Cranbury, N.J., a congregation of 700 which celebrated its 225th anniversary during his pastorate.

In 1959, Rev. Kvam exchanged pulpits with a minister of the Church of Scotland in Edinburgh and had the opportunity to tour the Soviet Union, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and East Germany.

Resigning his pulpit two years later to study towards his doctoral degree, Rev. Kvam entered Harvard University serving as a teaching fellow in government, a research assistant in the science and public policy program, and a member of the staff of Government I.

Earning his master's degree in 1964, Rev. Kvam accepted a position in the department of Political Science at the University of Akron. At this time he also returned to preaching, serving as pastor of two Ohio churches for a total of seven years.

In 1971, Rev. Kvam became the first president of Mackinac College, a newly opened Christian college in northern Michigan. Recruiting a faculty of 26 and a student body of 150, he guided the school to an accreditation recommendation from the North Central Accrediting Association. But before the school year's end, the sponsors of the college suffered financial collapse, forcing the college to close in June 1973.

Rev. Kvam then returned to Harvard where he is now completing his doctoral dissertation. He and his wife, the former Deborah Jean Frierson of Akron, Ohio, have three children - Bernie, 17, Roger, Jr., 16 and Eugene, 9.

Sabina's Hanover Beauty Academy Offers Day, Evening Courses

Sabina Stenberg, owner of Sabina's International Beauty Salon in Wollaston, recently acquired Hanover Beauty Academy, 24 Cottage Ave., Quincy Center.

Now called Sabina's Hanover Beauty Academy, the school offers a six-month course in hairdressing, cosmetology, hair coloring, manicuring and facials to both men and women.

Students must be 16 years of age to enroll in the school. They have the option to study during the day or evening. The school is open year round, Monday through Friday.

Mrs. Olga Carroll, manager of the academy, is assisted by four instructors. Each student herself styles men's hair.

A graduate of Wilfred Academy in Boston, Sabina first worked for Elizabeth Arden Hairdressing Salon in Boston. She then served as a hair-color technician for the Roux Haircoloring Co.

A former hairdresser at the Corrinne Lee Beauty Salon in Brookline, Sabina owned the Sidney Hill Beauty Salon in Chestnut Hill before coming to Quincy.

Sabina has also worked as a fashion model for Boston stores and has modeled for Bond's of Israel eight years.

Sabina also offers a two-month charm and modeling course during the spring and fall, receives a total of 1,000 hours of instruction.

Sabina said interested students can enroll in the academy on the first Monday of the month.

Sabina opened Sabina's International Beauty Salon at 652 Hancock St., Wollaston nine years ago. After two years, the salon changed location, moving to 660 Hancock St. Five years later, Sabina moved her headquarters across the street to

Custom Brass & Antiques Making 'Constitution' Bookends

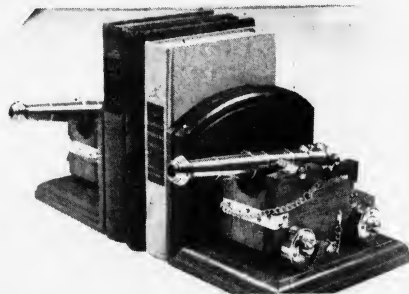

Ron Bethoney of Custom Brass & Antiques, 61 Franklin St., South Quincy, is in the business of repairing and polishing brass and copper.

But he has recently begun manufacturing interesting collectors items in this historic bicentennial year—"Constitution" bookends and paperweights.

These items are replicas of the "Long-Gun" fired from the gun deck of the frigate USS Constitution. This cannon could be fired and reloaded in five minutes by a well trained crew of six to 14 men. Of the crew, two were young boys, whose job it was to load the cannon with the 16 pounds of powder required to deliver a shot 1,200 yards.

Its capability in battle was to deal the enemy a crippling blow before coming to close quarters. This 18th century naval war cannon was designed by John Muller.

The "Constitution" bookends, manufactured in Quincy, are 3/4 in scale and

How Quincy Voted On Death Penalty, Metco, Fiscal Autonomy

By RON IACOBUCCI

STATE HOUSE -- The Massachusetts House overturned the Governor's veto 156-68 on the death penalty bill last week.

The Quincy delegation voted 2-1 in favor of overturning the Governor's veto with Reps. Thomas Brownell and Robert Cerasoli voting in favor of the death penalty, Rep. William Delahunt voting against, Rep. Joseph Brett did not vote. A total of 15 legislators did not vote on this measure.

The following day, the Senate upheld the Governor's veto 26-14 with Senator Arthur Tobin voting in favor of the death penalty. A motion for reconsideration was made. As of this writing it has not been considered.

The House defeated, 131-94, a bill to allow white children from the city of Boston to participate in the METCO Program. The Quincy legislative delegation voted 2-1 in favor of the measure with Reps. Cerasoli and Delahunt voting yes, Brownell voting no and Rep. Brett not voting. A total of 14 legislators did not vote.

In a related matter, the House voted 190-34 to defeat the Daley-Sullivan Busing Bill. The bill would require certain schools to open empty seats to inner city children insofar as these seats are available. Reps. Brownell, Cerasoli and Delahunt voted against busing with Rep. Brett not voting.

The House voted 151-79 to defeat a bill that would eliminate fiscal autonomy for school budgets. The bill would authorize cities and towns to delete or reduce increases in school budgets. Reps. Brett, Brownell and Delahunt voted in favor of preserving fiscal autonomy with Rep. Cerasoli voting against.

In another school related issue, the House voted 183-43 to defeat a bill that would increase the number of years required from three to five for tenure of teachers and superintendents in public schools. The Quincy legislative delegation voted 3-1 against the increase with Reps. Brett, Brownell and Delahunt voting to defeat the proposed increase and Rep. Cerasoli voting for the increase.

The House gave initial approval 163-63 to a bill that would prohibit or restrict smoking in certain places. The bill would prohibit smoking in a public elevator, supermarket, or in mass transit vehicle. It would restrict smoking to specifically designated areas in museums, libraries, hospitals, nursing homes, trains, and airplanes. Reps. Brownell, Cerasoli and Delahunt voted in favor of the measure with Rep. Brett voting against.

Wollaston Man Winning Friends, Influencing People With His Health Plan

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

An industrious, health-conscious Wollaston man is fastly forming a troupe of followers dedicated to sound and sensible tenets of diet and exercise.

Following his retirement, three years ago, Edgar Spargo of 17 Sherman St. began compiling a personal health program principally based on articles by Harvard nutritionist Dr. Jean Mayer.

Originally designed to lower his own cholesterol count and to stabilize his wife's high blood pressure, Spargo's list of dietary and exercise hints captured the interest of several friends. Spargo - former managing editor of the old Quincy News, an 11-year employee of The Patriot Ledger, and a 24-year veteran of the Boston Globe's composing department - then decided to xero several hundred copies of his plan and send them to friends, relatives and acquaintances.

Though ticketed as "a suggested health regimen for folks over 40," - a label making some age-conscious, over-forties cringe - the program includes sensible suggestions adaptable to any age and lifestyle.

In fact, Spargo's first six suggestions transcend any barrier of age. His plan unfolds as follows:

- Adequate sleep, rest and fresh air.
- Exercise daily: long, brisk walks, any form of calisthenics.
- Sensible liquor consumption.
- Positively NO SMOKING...or at least strive to cut down gradually.
- A complete annual physical check-up.
- An annual flu shot, barring allergy.

Following the advice of Dr. Mayer, Spargo recommends to those over 40 the use of a sugar substitute, minimal consumption of eggs, a drastic reduction in salt intake, and the use of corn oil margarine instead of butter.

Noting that one egg contains some 240 milligrams of cholesterol, Spargo said he hasn't eaten six eggs in three years. Instead, Spargo said he uses a new egg substitute now on the market, and spices up his virtually cholesterol-free scrambled eggs with sauted onions, peppers, mushrooms or potatoes.

And he added, "We haven't had butter on the table for years."

Faithful to a regimen of daily exercise, Spargo says he walks at least three to four miles every day, accompanied by a canine escort.

In addition, Spargo devotes part of his day to stationary jogging in his cellar. His wife Kae, however, does not join him in these exercises, says Spargo. "She is naturally slim," he announced proudly.

Spargo's interest in developing more sensible and healthful diet habits first sprouted when he read "a six column, streamer headline in the Globe" reading, "If You'd Like To Keep Healthy, Cut Down On Salt."

Quoting Dr. Mayer, author of the article, Spargo tells his followers:

"High blood pressure is a most predisposing cause of heart disease and makes blood vessels much more susceptible to 'hardening' due to the accumulation of calcium and cholesterol. Cutting down on salt intake may correct and prevent many difficulties such as heart disease, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries and kidney trouble. Most foods can be almost majestically transformed by a pinch of salt. But remember, just a pinch."

Many of Spargo's other "over 40" suggestions can be aptly and wisely followed by any one merely wishing to shed unwanted, unflattering extra pounds. Spargo advises:

- Eat fish, poultry and veal more frequently than beef, pork and ham.
- Plan to have fish and chicken [or turkey] at least twice a week [foods low not only in cholesterol but in calories].
- Broil or bake your foods instead of frying.
- If you must fry, use corn oil margarine, liquid vegetable oils and polyunsaturated shortenings.
- Substitute whole wheat or dark bread for white bread occasionally and choose whole-grain cereals over the refined kind.

Spargo noted that whole-grain cereal, like fruits and vegetables, provides fiber or "roughage" needed in a healthy diet. According to the latest medical research, Spargo said a lack of this "roughage" can cause cancer, constipation, diverticulosis, appendicitis and heart disease.

Spargo has mailed over 300 copies of his suggested health program to prominent nutritionists, medical doctors, city and state officials and friends. Among them:

Dr. Mayer, Dr. Alexander Leaf, chief of medical services at Harvard Medical School, Dr. Fredrick Stare, professor of nutrition at Harvard University's School of Public Health, Dr. Timothy Johnson, medical editor of WCVB-TV and director of "House Call" aired on that station, Herbert Black, medical editor of The Boston Globe, Dr. Joseph Wassersug of Quincy and Dr. John Spargo, medical director of the School for Crippled Children in Boston.

All have praised and okayed Spargo's health plan as sensible, contemporary and in accord with modern medical thinking, he said.

S. James Coppersmith, general manager of WNAC-TV, replied to Spargo's program saying he planned to make copies to distribute to department heads. He told Spargo:

"I am of the belief that healthier bodies promote more productive minds."

The first lady of the nation and the first lady of the state both thanked Spargo for sending copies of his health plan. Mrs. Betty Ford wrote:

"I appreciate the concern for my family's welfare which inspired you to write and include your plan. I admire the altruism in caring for others which your program represents."

Mrs. Kitty Dukakis told Spargo she read his health plan with interest and said she planned to pass it along to her husband.

And Rep. Joseph Brett, responding to Spargo's suggestions, said he found he was conforming "almost 100 per cent" to the program. He wrote:

"I have neither smoked cigarettes nor drunk alcoholic beverages since 1953. I do some moderate exercise daily and like to take long walks. I avoid fatty foods, no cream [except ice cream once in a while], no sugar, no eggs, eat fruits, salads, dark bread, green vegetables...and remain hopeful of living a good long life."

Brett added, "I still like to think I am only 39."

North Quincy Man Rides Elevator To 'Hairdresser To The Stars'

By JANE MacDONALD

Little did North Quincy's John Quaglia realize when he became an elevator operator that it would take him up to "hairdresser to the stars".

But that was the break that made him hairdresser to Zsa Zsa and Eva Gabor, Jane Powell and Theresa Brewer.

He left town last Saturday with the touring Broadway play "Irene" as Jane Powell's hairdresser.

Quaglia is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Quaglia who have lived at 84 Edwin Rd, North Quincy, for 24 years. He is also the nephew of Carmine D'Olimpio, business agent for the Local 52 Bricklayers Union as well as the newly elected treasurer of the Quincy Housing Authority.

Quaglia was born in Somerville but moved to the Quincy area at a young age, attending the Parker Elementary School and later, North Quincy High School where he graduated with the class of 1959. He still considers 84 Edwin Rd. his official address but has occupied an apartment in New York for several years.

His mother recalls: "John never specifically planned a hairdressing career for himself as a child, but he was always attracted to the show business life." As a teenager, he participated in the Boston Children's Theatre on Commonwealth Ave., Boston.

After graduating from North Quincy High School, he entered the IBM training school in Boston, but left after a short time to pursue a dancing career. A bout with hepatitis forced Quaglia to turn to a less strenuous profession, so, as he put it, "I just seemed to drift into hairdressing."

He enrolled in the Wilford Academy Hairdressing School in New York and completed the course there. But things did not just "happen"—that one big break was needed. In the meantime, he took a job as an elevator operator at the Alvin Theatre in New York. One night he was at work and reading a book on hairdressing, when a passenger who was a hairdresser for the Broadway shows, told him of a job opening. This opportunity opened many doors and led to valuable contacts, especially with Ernie Adler, one of New York's top hairdressers.

Quaglia's career has soared from those elevator-operating days. Since then, he has traveled extensively with such stars as Zsa Zsa and Eva Gabor, and served as Zsa Zsa's personal hairdresser for seven months. Quaglia was also associated with singer Theresa Brewer, during several of her nightclub stints in Las Vegas.

His relationship with these top-name stars is not all glamour, as Quaglia is quick to admit.

"One of the most important factors when working with one of my clients is tact," he says. "It is very important to maintain a good personal relationship, especially since we are usually traveling together during a show."

Travel is a fact of life with Quaglia. He has been on the road with "Irene" since September, and plans to spend the next six weeks vacationing before rejoining Jane Powell for another 11 week tour.

Wollaston School PTA Family Festival

A bicycle parade will be the first event at the Wollaston School PTA Family Festival Saturday on the school grounds.

The festival, to be held from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., will also feature antique fire engine, and pony rides.

There will be games with prizes, a craft table, a plant table, a white elephant table, and a school spirit table. Hot dogs, popcorn, cotton candy and balloons will be available.

At the close of the festival a drawing will take place for door prizes.

CAR CARE GUIDE

When it comes to personal transportation

Car thriftest way to travel

Unless you are one of the lucky ones who live within walking distance of a wooded campground, there is no other way to reach a site like this than by car. The special tang of a meal cooked outdoors is only one of the pleasures made possible by car ownership. And a well-maintained car can make any summer vacation trip truly carefree and can actually save money through improved gas mileage.

Belts help reduce car fatalities

Hospitals in Australia are reporting a drop of 24% in bed occupancy since the introduction of mandatory seat belt wearing legislation.

In Victoria the belt wearing law has been in two years, and they have experienced a 20.8% reduction in road deaths. In the rest of Australia the seat belt law is just one year old, and there has already been a 17.2% reduction in automobile deaths throughout the country. Serious injuries, they stated, have been reduced by about 50%.

Best way for owners to save is to spend on good maintenance

The term "getaway car" brings to mind Grade B gangster movies. The jittery driver, invariably portrayed by actors like Ed Brophy or Elisha Cook, Jr., fidgeted waiting for Jack LaRue to finish the heist.

While this kind of movie may have gone the way of free dish night and dime popcorn, the getaway car is still with us.

Now it is the family automobile that serves as a Cinderella's coach. It gets us away from the worry and humdrum of workaday life and takes us to adventurous places away from home.

85 per cent vacation by car

Some 85 per cent of us do our vacation and leisure-time travel strictly by car. Whether the trip is a coast-to-coast wander or a picnic at a nearby campground, the automobile provides the way to get there.

Certainly today there are problems we want to get away from. Thanks to our national treasure of getaway cars, most of us can escape from cares for a few days or a few hours.

Especially in times when every dollar should be spent wisely, it is true that the automobile is still our most economical way to travel. Higher gasoline prices notwithstanding, there is no cheaper way (save walking) than the car to take the family on a holiday trip.

For many car owners the aim this year will be making the trip as economical as possible.

As inconsistent as it may sound, the best way to save money on your forthcoming trip is to spend it now. Invest in some basic car maintenance and the savings may be substantial.

With gasoline prices at heights unimaginable only two years ago, an engine that wastes fuel due to lack of tune-up is a luxury no one can afford.

Due to high gasoline prices it is accurate to say that the tune-up could pay for itself several times over.

Or consider items like shock absorbers, wheel alignment and other components that affect tire life.

An expensive set of tires can wear out an estimated 25 per cent before its time due to misalignment, worn shocks or just plain inattention to recommended tire pressure.

Simple things save money

Something as simple as adhering to scheduled oil and filter changes, lubrication can save money in costly engine or chassis wear.

Even if one disregards the safety and riding pleasure a cared for car provides, the economies of the proverbial ounce of prevention-pound of cure formula still exist.

So make that "getaway from cares" car trip truly carefree. Don't add expensive bills or potential car troubles to your list of woes.

Visit a competent service outlet before you leave and be sure your vehicle is cared for and not another unwelcome care.

PUT ON REAR
When radial tires are used with bias or belter tires, place the radials on the rear axle.

AVOID HIGH SPEED
Save gas by avoiding high speeds. Observing the recommended 50-55 mile limit on the open road makes for fuel economy.

CAR CARE GUIDE

Tune-up could save up to $110 a year

How would you like to save yourself nearly $110?

If your car is one of those described by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and other sources as wasting as much as 25 per cent of its gasoline supply, then such savings are possible.

Simple mathematics tell the story.

Say your car travels 15,000 miles a year and is capable of getting 15 miles per gallon.

If you are paying 60 cents a gallon for fuel, your annual expenditure would be $600.

Should you be losing 25 per cent in gas wasted, then you are out $150.

According to that same EPA report, keeping an automobile tuned up can improve fuel economy. And a recent Champion Spark Plug Company survey shows the average cost of a tune-up today is around $42.

So a tune-up every 10,000 miles plus necessary minor adjustments along the way can save you a nice hunk of change.

Even if your car saves the U.S. and Canadian average of 8.2 per cent after a needed tune-up, you'll still save more in fuel costs than the price of the work. Gas savings under the circumstances described above would be just below $50 per year.

According to David L. Walker, Champion's director of automotive technical services, gasoline savings are only part of the value of a good engine tune-up.

Mr. Walker said, "In every test we've ever conducted, we've found a tuned car has better foul-weather starting success than a car in need of a tune-up. In fact, untuned cars have twice as many 'won't starts' than tuned cars."

A road service call for a start in a remote location where a tow is needed may cost about half the price of a tune-up, he noted.

Tune-up benefits that may not result in cash savings still make driving safer and more pleasurable.

In tests conducted by Champion, emission levels were sharply reduced after tune-up. Average carbon monoxide (CO) emissions were reduced 50 per cent (at idle) and hydrocarbon (HC) emissions were 47 per cent lower (also at idle) after tune-up.

Performance is also improved after tune-up, Mr. Walker noted. In moobile dynamometer tests conducted by Champion, there was an 8.6 per cent increase in power and an 8.0 per cent decrease in passing distance after tune-up.

Filters stand guard against engine wear

Popular tourist attractions in places like London, Ottawa or Washington are the famous changing of the Guard ceremonies. While not nearly as colorful as the rituals at Buckingham Palace, Parliament Hill or the Tomb of the Unknowns, there is a guard changing ceremony that's important to a motor vehicle.

The automotive guards are the filters that protect a car's engine from potentially serious harm. The air, oil and gasoline filters help screen out foreign materials from vital engine parts.

The air filter prevents dirt from entering the carburetor where the air and fuel is mixed. When clogged, the filter can cease functioning, resulting in poor engine performance and, often, a drastic loss of fuel economy. Most cars today use disposable filters which should be replaced at 10,000 miles as part of an engine tune-up.

The oil filter catches foreign objects in the oil, keeping them from damaging engine parts. A clogged filter cannot perform this function efficiently. Especially in these times of the recommended lengthened time of oil change, a new oil filter should be installed with every change of lubricants.

CAR CARE GUIDE

Gasoline safety saves valuable fuel, lives

Here's a way to save gasoline, and possibly your life, too.

Gasoline vapor is a deadly killer, but few people recognize its danger when they use it for cleaning purposes.

"Never use gasoline as a cleaning fluid," advises the American Petroleum Institute's Safety and Fire Protection Committee. "Use only an approved, high flash point cleaning solvent."

Gasoline vaporizes rapidly when exposed and the vapor settles invisibly near the floor because the fumes are heavier than air. Gasoline vapors have been known to travel many feet to an ignition source resulting in a "flash back" to the liquid. An explosion can be caused by the slightest source of ignition, such as a pilot light, an arc from an electric motor or power tool, the flick of a wall switch, or a lighted match.

A high flash point solvent such as kerosene can be used for cleaning automobile parts or tools. For oil and grease spills, a cleaning compound or sawdust can be used to remove the bulk of the substance and, if necessary, a steam cleaner or detergent may be used for additional cleaning. A waterless hand cleaner may be used to clean hands and arms.

ADVICE TO WOMEN who DRIVE... and MEN, Too...

from DeDe BENSON... a woman who does

Dear DeDe:

As I write this letter, I am heart sick. I just returned from visiting a neighbor's son in the hospital where he has been for two months. He's 19 years old, a talented athlete and now the doctors say it will be a miracle if he ever walks again. It seems Bob was involved in an accident. After seeing the car he was driving, it's no wonder. The wheels wobbled. One headlight was completely missing. The front end sagged like an old horse. Can't something be done about getting death traps like that off the highway? It may be too late to help Bob but what about other kids?

Mrs. LMB
Silver Springs, Md.

Dear Mrs. LMB:

Unfortunately for Bob, you live in a state that has no Periodic Motor Vehicle Inspection. Maryland is one of 19 states that have no compulsory check on the safety of their cars. Therefore, except for spot checks by the state police, you have no protection against "accidents waiting to happen" like your luckless neighbor's car. If you feel strongly that a FMVI law is needed, then write your state representative in Annapolis. Residents of other states should write their legislators, too, in Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Tennessee, Washington, Wisconsin.

Dear DeDe:

My car hasn't been running right lately and when I took my car in for service, the mechanic told me hot spark plugs would solve the problem. I know he doesn't mean stolen spark plugs but what is he talking about. Was he kidding?

DUBIOUS IN DUBUQUE

Dear Dubious:

I don't think so. Spark plugs are designed in various heat ranges to accommodate the kind of driving the owner does. In your case, you probably do a lot of short-distance, low-speed driving. Your engine may not get properly "warmed" and carbon may be accumulating on your plugs, hampering their efficiency. So a plug with a "hotter" heat range to burn off carbon sounds like a proper prescription. I'll bet that's what your mechanic really meant. Ask him.

Dear DeDe:

How come you, a woman, know so much about cars?

GT
Kingston, Ont.

Dear GT:

My first car was seven years old when I bought it. If something can go wrong with a car, it went wrong with that one. I guess I'm just the type to make lemonade when I'm handed a lemon.

CAR CARE GUIDE

The three types of tires prevalent today

Here's help for motorist in choosing right tires for his driving needs

If choosing the right tires for your car gives you as much anguish as the kid with a nickel in a candy store, then here are some basics to help you. With the profusion of design types and materials, confusion is understandable.

According to the Rubber Manufacturers Association (RMA) there are three different tire constructions prevalent today.

BIAS TIRES may have two, four or more body plies of rayon, nylon polyester or other materials. Basic fibers cross at an angle of about 35 degrees with the center line of the tire strengthening both sidewall and tread. Alternate plies extend in opposite directions.

In normal, light duty driving, bias tires should be sufficient.

BELTED BIAS TIRES (Heavy Duty Tires) have a body similar to that of bias tires, plus two more belts under the tread. This construction strengthens the sidewall and gives greater stability to the tread. Tread life is lengthened since the belts reduce tread motion on the road. Glass belting is often used in belted bias tires helping resist flex and running cooler.

RADIAL TIRES have body cords extending from bead to bead. Cords run at an angle of about 90 degrees "radial" to the tire circumferential center line. Two or more layers of relatively rigid belts are found under the tread.

This construction gives greater strength to the tread area and flexibility of the sidewall. The belts restrict tread motion during contact with the road. Tread life, traction and gasoline mileage are improved with radial tires, particularly the steel belted variety.

If you are putting two new tires on your car, mount them on the rear wheels. This will provide better traction, handling and blowout protection. If you're putting a single new tire on, pair it with the best remaining one on the rear axle.

Keep eye on tire inflation

You may want to invest in a pressure gauge to keep frequent tabs on your tires. Proper pressure for tires is generally given in a location inside the driver's compartment of the car — sometimes on a glove box door or inside the door post. Keeping tires properly inflated saves on tire wear, gas consumption and provides safer going.

Alert Houghs Neck Youth Reports Sailboat Afire

Fast action by Kurt Johnson, 17, of 137 Sea Ave., Houghs Neck, may have saved the life of at least one man Monday afternoon, when he sighted a burning 30-foot sailboat from his kitchen window and notified the Coast Guard patrol.

Kurt is an avid fisherman, who owns 100 lobster pots and spends much of his time by the ocean. At the time of the accident, he was looking out at the water while preparing dinner.

"We're always spotting accidents at my house since we spend half our time looking out the window with binoculars," says Mrs. Roy Johnson, Kurt's mother, who is employed by Burgin Plater Insurance Co., Quincy Sq.

Coast Guard records show that at 4:15 p.m. they received a call from an unidentified individual reporting a sailboat afire off the west end of Rainsford Island, which is northeast of Quincy between Hull and the Long Island bridge.

At the same time, the MDC patrol at Nantasket beach responded independently, as they had sighted the fiberglass and wood constructed craft themselves. When MDC patrols reached the scene, David Owens, 293 Commercial St., Brighton, the operator of a motorcraft which had been towing the sailboat, was attempting to rescue his companion Robert Murphy, 48 Edward St., Lynnfield, owner of Port of Call Marina and the sailboat, from the water where he had jumped to avoid the flames. Murphy was taken by MDC police, first to the Point Allerton Coast Guard station in Hull, and then to the South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, where he was treated for shock and immersion and later released.

In the meantime, two Coast Guard utility boats were battling the blaze which eventually burned the sailboat to the water line. The boat sank in 20 feet of water after an attempt to tow it to shallower water off Rainsford Island.

According to MDC officials, the sailboat was being towed from the Continental Marina, Dorchester, to the Port of Call Marina at Union Pier, Boston, when an updraft from the larger, motor-powered vehicle's carburetor caused it to suddenly explode into flames.

Fence To Be Erected To Stop Horses

A fence will be built along the left field foul line of an MDC baseball park in West Quincy to keep horses from wandering onto the field and possibly causing accidents.

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin said Reliable Fence of Quincy has been awarded a contract to build the fence at Curry Field to stop Blue Hills Riding Stable horses from wandering onto the field.

He said mothers of ball players and the St. Moritz Association had complained to both him and Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets about the possible danger of accidents triggered by these horses.

22 QJC History Students Going To Washington

Twenty-two Quincy Junior College history students will leave for Washington, D.C. to night [Thursday], participating in a field trip designed to complement a course on The American Presidency.

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets, chairman of the history and government department at the college and course instructor, said the three-day field trip will focus upon tours relating as directly as possible to American presidency. Also accompanying the students will be Professor Lawrence Rines of the history department.

Those traveling to Washington, D.C. are Mr. and Mrs. William Donnelly, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Renda, Ruby Whitehouse, Marie Emery, Mary Sibella, Lawrence Curtin Joanne Condon, Mr. and Mrs. William Clark, Ellen Pendoley, Sheila McNeely, Margaret Buckley, Gayle Mina, Steven Goulart, David Mignosa, Betty Condon, Norma Pinkham, Alberta Gentile, John Lang and William Mason.

Sheets said the class is scheduled to have breakfast with Congressman James A. Burke Friday morning. They will have a special tour of The White House later that morning.

More than half the class is participating in the field trip including three married couples, Sheets said.

Other tours will include a visit to the FBI Building, the John Kennedy Performing Arts Center, Capitol Hill the Smithsonian Institute and several administrative departments.

Sheets said the students are eager to see and to experience firsthand many of the places and events described through the course lectures.

The group is scheduled to land at Logan Airport late Sunday afternoon.

8-Story Height Limit Proposed In 5 Areas

Eight-story height limit proposals introduced before the City Council Monday would restrict building heights in five major areas, amending the city's zoning laws.

A proposal jointly sponsored by Councillor John Quinn and Senator-City Council President Arthur Tobin would impose the eight-story height limit in the Quincy Square and Wollaston business districts, on undeveloped property at the State Street South complex in North Quincy and in industrial zones currently unrestricted.

A second proposal introduced by Councillor Dennis Harrington would impose the same eight-story limit on property at the old Squantum Naval Air Station.

Construction higher than eight stories would be allowed in the first proposal by special city council permit.

A joint hearing between the council and the planning board will be called in the near future.

New Roofs For Adams Birth Places

The Adams birthplaces will receive new roofs through a grant to Quincy Heritage by the Certain-teed Products Corporation Building Restoration Program.

The birthplaces, located on Franklin St., South Quincy are jointly administered by the Quincy Historical Society and Quincy Heritage. Both homes are open to the public from April 19th to Nov. 1 and are listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

The Certain-teed Products

Corporation, a leading manufacturer of building products headquartered in Valley Forge, Pa. provides roofing materials to several restoration projects annually from hundreds of entries which are submitted from across the nation.

Quincy SPAIS To Process Mass. Police Institute Data

The Suburban Police Automated Information System (SPAIS) located in Quincy has been selected by the Massachusetts Police Institute to process their law enforcement statistical data.

The police institute provides management assistance to departments throughout Massachusetts in the evaluation of current policies and manpower allocation.

According to system director Robert K. Mitchell, the SPAIS computer will input and process police institute data using programs designed by the police computer specialists assigned to Spais.

"In addition to improving the quality of the analysis provided by the police institute to departments throughout Massachusetts, this process will allow Spais to offset a portion of its operating expenses during the next fiscal year," he said.

"We look forward to expanding our commitment to the police institute and also to directly assisting departments in the state with police incident analysis. We are additionally involved in discussions with departments in New Jersey and Florida which may lead to our installing similar systems there."

The Massachusetts Police Institute is directed by the Massachusetts Police Chiefs Association and provides its services to the large number of smaller departments within the state.

SPAIS was selected because of the high quality of the police programs which will allow the police institute to assist these small departments in selecting the optimum boundaries of police patrols and in evaluating the effects of changes made.

Frazier Dinner May 30 Also A Raider Reunion

When the dinner of appreciation is held for Ralph Frazier, who resigned in February as head football coach at North Quincy High, tables will be set up for different groups and members of the various graduating classes at North.

The dinner will be an opportunity to see old teammates and friends.

The dinner will be held May 30 at the Morrisette Post with a social hour at 6:30 and a roast beef dinner at 7:30.

Further information can be obtained by calling North Quincy High during the day, or by contacting William Bell of Squantum or Ken McPhee, 147 Newbury Ave., Quincy.

Frazier, who has ended a 23-year career as a football coach and player, stepped down in order to pursue an administrative career in education.

Ralph coached North for six years. Following a disappointing first season when his team was only 2-7, he piloted the Raiders to four fine seasons, 6-2-1, 6-3-0, 7-2-0 and 6-1-1. His final team last fall was 4-1 and appeared headed for another banner season but lost its last five to finish 4-6 and was upset by Quincy, 14-13.

Point Girls Track Team Optimistic

Quincy Point Junior High, the smallest junior high school in the city, usually has trouble in the city league in most sports because of its enrollment.

However, Coach Mary Clifford has hopes her girls' track team, the first in history, will hold its own in the league. The sport, as well as softball, was introduced this spring and Miss Clifford had a good turnout.

"This is our first year and the girls are enthusiastic," Miss Clifford said. "They have average ability. The turnout was

First Ladies Seek Second Win At Weymouth

The Quincy girls' track team, following three losses in a row, romped over Waltham, 74-35, last week for its first win in the Suburban League.

The First Ladies will be at Weymouth North today [Thursday] and will host Brockton Tuesday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Kathy Keating was a double winner against Waltham, taking good considering we are such a small school."

The events in girls' track are the 50 and 100-yard dash, 440, half mile, mile, long jump, high jump, shotput, 45-yard low hurdles for ninth grade only, and the relay.

The Point coach has a large number of good ninth grade prospects, Lisa Paquette, Rosemary Reiser, Diane Nichols, Cheryl McElman, Nancy Cyr, Elaine German, Randi DiPietro, Nancy Barron, Patti Martin and Karen McGhee.

There are only four eighth graders, Leslie Salvaggio, Teresa Spano, Sally Abraham and Laurel Peterson, but a good number of seventh graders, Stacy Rivers, Patty Hogan, Vivian Lewis, Linda Carroll, Anne Barron, Ann Marie Calvi, Susan Stewart, Roseann Eleuteri, Laura Thomson, Donna Boyd, Cheryl Cadman and Lisa Collins.

Point will face Atlantic-North next Wednesday at Cavanaugh Stadium in North Quincy.

In its first two games BW defeated Atlantic-North, 4-2, and followed up with a 6-1 win over Sterling.

The Broadmeadows girls will play at Central today [Thursday] and next Tuesday will host Point.

Although Sterling Junior High's first girls' softball team lost its first two games, Coach Dave Meehan feels if his team can rid itself of a "bad inning", it will win some games.

"We lost to Central, 10-9, and to Broad Meadows, 6-2."

"We have an enthusiastic group of girls and they played well in the first two games," Miss Jackman said. "Some of the girls show excellent potential and I think we should have a good season."

"In the two games played Joanne Bullis, Virginia Connolly, Lynne Powers and Patricia Maloney played good ball, hitting well and coming up with some fine defensive plays."

Raiders Have Tough Road Ahead

It still has a tough road ahead, but three wins in a row following four straight losses have enabled the North Quincy baseball team to retain a slim chance of qualifying for the state tournament.

Charlie Bunker's Raiders will host Weymouth South Friday at Adams Field, will play at Cambridge Latin Monday and host Rindge Tech next Wednesday.

Last Saturday in a game rained out Friday, North played its finest two-way game of the year to blast Brockton, 11-0, and keep its tourney hopes flickering. The win gave North a 7-4 overall record and 5-4 Suburban League mark.

John Lawlor and Tim Clifford combined to pitch a four-hitter, Lawlor pitching the first four innings for the win. Bunker used Clifford for three innings to get ready for last Tuesday's big game with league-leading Newton. This game was rained out Monday.

Bunker was happy with every department, the pitching, hitting and defense as North put it all together for the first time.

Lawlor drove in four runs with two doubles, Frank Micelli had two hits and every North player had at least one hit.

Earlier in the week North had defeated Rindge Tech, 8-4, with Mike Halloran starting on the mound and getting the win and Lawlor finishing up.

Bill Driscoll, who had driven in all three North runs with a bases loaded double in the previous game [3-1 win over Quincy], had a home run and single and drove in four runs. Steve McKinnon continued his solid batting with two singles and Micelli had a long triple.

Quincy, held to three hits by North's Clifford in its previous game, had only two as Brockton, scoring four times in the first inning, coasted to a 7-1 win.

The lone Quincy hits off Jay O'Donnell were a suicide squeeze bunt by Mike MacKenzie which scored Eric Carrera, and a single by Carrera.

"This is a real young team with only two seniors and we are getting ourselves ready for next year," Coach Bud Mosher said. "We are going to make a run for it then."

Friday the Presidents play at Newton, host Brookline Monday at Adams Field and go to Brockton Wednesday.

● Track

North 2nd In Catholic Memorial Meet

North Quincy's track team is enjoying another successful season under Coach Lou Tozzi and last Saturday made an excellent showing in the annual Catholic Memorial Invitational Meet.

Despite having only eight members of his team present, Tozzi saw North finish a close second to Haverhill in the meet, which attracted 31 teams. Haverhill's powerhouse won with 36 points and the Raiders scored 31. North's failure to have a 440 or two-mile relay team hurt its chances.

North, with a 6-3 overall record and 2-3 Suburban League mark, hosts Brockton today [Thursday] at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Saturday it will compete in the Brockton Relays and next Tuesday will be home to Cambridge Latin at the Stadium.

In the Catholic Memorial meet North scored in all running events and broke two meet records.

The Raiders' mile relay team of Brian Doherty, John Mackey, Jerry MacKenzie and Mark Canavan won in the record time of 3:30.2.

Canavan won the half mile and set a new meet record of 1:59.6.

North's other winner was standout Bart Petracca, who covered the mile in 4:27.1.

MacKenzie finished second in the 440, Artie Barrett second in the two-mile, Paul Doherty third in the 100 and Brian Doherty fourth in the 220.

Last Friday the Raiders won their second league meet, 94-51, over Brookline as Brian Doherty was a triple winner, taking the 100 and long jump and running on the winning 440 relay team. Also running on the team were Paul Doherty, Matty Constantino and Matty King.

Paul Doherty also won the 220 and the other winners were Canavan in the half mile, Ken O'Brien, two-mile; Mike Crevier, low hurdles; Rich Mahoney, high jump; Jack Gallagher, discus, and Mike Nee, javelin. Tozzi saved several of his top men, including Petracca, for the Catholic Memorial meet.

Earlier North had lost to Weymouth South, the class of the league, 82-63.

North ran away with the running events but were swept in the filed events, Brian Doherty won the 100, MacKenzie the 440, Canavan the half mile, Barrett the mile, Petracca the two-mile, Mark Reale the low hurdles, Dave Lorman the high hurdles and the mile relay team of Brian Doherty, Mackey, Canavan and MacKenzie also won.

Quincy Trackmen Host Weymouth N.

Quincy's track team is having a winning season [3-2] in the strong Suburban League and the Presidents don't believe in giving Tom Hall any uneasy moments as they win or lose their meets by sizeable scores.

Today [Thursday] Quincy is home to Weymouth North at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Next Tuesday the Presidents will be at Brockton.

Last Friday Quincy suffered its second league defeat, 97-48, to one of the league powers, Newton.

Quincy held its own in the field events but was killed by Newton in the running events.

The Presidents' Paul Ladas won the long jump, Art DiLoreto the high jump, Charlie Gaziano the javelin but in the running events only Harry Williams and Preston Carroll won in the 220 and low hurdles respectively.

Earlier in the week Quincy defeated Waltham, 83-61, for its third league victory.

Carroll won both the low hurdles and long jump, Williams took the 220, Tim Kane the half mile, DiLoreto the high jump, Dennis McCarthy the triple jump, Tom McMahon the pole vault, Gaziano the javelin and both relay teams won, the 440 team of Lane Watkins, Doran Ezickson, Carroll and DiLoreto, and the mile team of Williams, McCarthy, Ladas and Kane.

Bruins Defeat O'Brien Club For Y Title

History repeated itself in the second annual Quincy YMCA invitational basketball tournament when the Haynes/Crump Bruins of Boston for the second year in a row defeated the O'Brien Club of Quincy, 139-123, for the championship.

In one of the best shooting games ever seen in Quincy, the Bruins, with 13 players to only seven for the O'Briens, wore the Quincy team down in the second half. Also, the O'Briens played in the finals with only a half hour rest following their semifinal game.

Mark Raterink scored 35 points, Gary Bowen 30 and Mark Jellison 24 for the O'Brien Club. Ron Bradley, former North Quincy High and Eastern Nazarene College star who formerly played for the O'Briens, had 16 points and numerous assists for the Bruins.

In the semifinals the O'Brien Club topped the Connolly Nationals of Cambridge, 103-89, with Bowen and Raterink having 25 points each, Jellison 23 and Gene Walcott 20.

The Bruins eliminated the Christy Club of Boston, 114-101.

In the quarterfinals the young Quincy Nets nearly pulled the upset of the tourney as they were nipped by the O'Brien Club, 86-85.

He's Going Home

Selection Of Dave Burke
As Raiders Coach
Wins Wide Approval

By TOM SULLIVAN

In the opinion of many, the School Committee couldn't have made a better choice of a successor to Ralph Frazier, who resigned after six successful years at the Raiders' helm.

"This is certainly a big thrill for me," said the former standout back for the Raiders. "Having coached for more than 20 years, mostly as an assistant, I'm eagerly looking forward to returning to my alma mater."

Dave, a teacher at Quincy High, has been an assistant coach at Quincy for the past 11 years and before that was an aide at Brown & Nichols for 11 years.

At North, Burke was a three-sport captain [football, basketball and baseball] and was an all-scholastic back in football.

Dave, 45, starred for North in 1943, '44 and '45 and was a key performer in the Raiders' win over Quincy in 1944 and '45. In 1945 he raced downfield and fell on Leo Luchini's game-opening kickoff in the end zone for the only touchdown of the game. The Presidents apparently were shocked by Luchini's impressive kick in a heavy rain and stood around while Burke fell on the ball.

The previous year, with the game scoreless and five minutes to play, Dave threw a pass to Paul Clem, who took the ball to the five and on the next play Bob [Scotty] Whitelaw scored the game's only touchdown.

In 1943, as a sophomore, Burke scored North's touchdown in a 12-7 loss to the Presidents.

"I know I have some fine players coming up as North had an outstanding sophomore team last year," said Burke, who was a 1950 graduate of Bowdoin College, where he was quarterback and co-captain in his senior year. "I plan to call a meeting of the players soon to get acquainted and outline my plans."

Burke, who was sophomore coach [he had six undefeated teams] and scout for Quincy Coach Hank Conroy for nine years before moving up to offensive coach the past two years, won't know about his assistant coaches until he meets with them.

"North has some excellent coaches but I don't know if they will want to return or not," Dave said. Two of the Raider assistants applied for the job. "I'll have to wait until I talk with them before I know what the situation is."

Tom Fitzgerald, a North aide for the past six years, was a teammate of Burke at North in 1943. He was an all-scholastic center. It is not known if he plans to return as an assistant under Burke.

Dave also doesn't know if he will take the squad to Cape Cod as Frazier did the last two years for a week's football camp. "I'll wait until I talk with some of those involved in those camps before deciding what to do," he explained.

Dave, who is also in his seventh year as baseball coach at Quincy Junior College [his teams won the Mass. Junior College Conference title each of the past three years], had nothing but praise for Conroy, the Quincy assistant coaches and the players.

"I thoroughly enjoyed my tenure at Quincy High," he said. "I thought the caliber of ball players there was outstanding. I always felt I gave my best there and now I have a chance to give my best to North Quincy."

"I think it is an excellent choice," said Coordinator of Athletics Carl Leone. "We had some outstanding coaches apply and I think the screening committee did its job well. There were some excellent coaches from outside the school system but we interviewed only those within our system. I wrote to each of the outsiders telling them we would interview them if we couldn't come up with a coach from our system."

"There were some other excellent coaches from within the system who applied. Dave is a fine football man, has excellent rapport with the boys and I know he will do an outstanding job."

"This was a fine choice and I know Dave will do the job," said Frazier. "I wish him the best and will be rooting with all my heart from the sidelines for him and the team."

Burke also had the blessings of his "bos" for the past 11 years, Conroy, who, incidentally, was reappointed last week for his 12th season as the Presidents' skipper.

ST. JOSEPH'S girls' Midget basketball team. Front, left to right, Maria Scolaro, Pattie McBride, Sheila Mahoney, Margaret Joyce, Sandra Dunn and Lynda Whyte. Back, Asst. Coach Nora Dunn, Mary Thibodeau, Patricia Travers, Mary Travers, Michelle Dunn, Janice Glavin and Coach Anne Marie McBride.

Raiderettes Explode, 7-5

The North Quincy girls' softball team, following three close defeats, exploded for six runs in the sixth inning to overcome Weymouth North, 7-5.

North had been hurt by its inability to hit when it counted but the Raiderettes turned things around with five hits, including home runs by Maryanne O'Sullivan and Nancy Willard, in the six-run inning.

"I was beginning to worry that we wouldn't score the runs we needed," Coach Cheryl Manoli said. "It had been that way all season. But today the girls began to hit and score some runs."

Marie Duggan was the only Raiderette to collect two hits, but the big blows were those by O'Sullivan and Willard.

"Ellen Moynihan pitched her first complete game and did well, as there were a lot of errors behind her," Miss Manoli added. "This is her first year pitching and Catcher Linda Henry played a good game. This is her first year catching."

The North girls will play at Newton Friday, will play at Cambridge Latin Monday and will host Quincy next Wednesday at Atlantic Jr. High Field.

Sheets Seeks 2

Patrolmen For West Quincy

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets plans to meet with Mayor Walter Hannon and Police Chief Francis Finn this week to request two additional footpatrolmen in West Quincy.

Some 1,750 West Quincy residents signed petitions seeking broader police coverage in the area, said Sheets. Concern focused in the Brewer's Corner-Kincaide Park-Lincoln Hancock Community School area and in the St. Mary's Church-O'Rourke Ball field area. Sheets said residents feel there is "too little direct contact" between them and patrolmen in cruising cars. Although recognizing the need for a mobile-strike police force, residents have requested the addition of footpatrolmen in those two areas of the ward.

Sheets, agreeing with the residents, said vandalism in St. Mary's Cemetery over the past two months alone cost a total of $1,000. He said:

"I share the public's concern and I believe vandalism would be reduced in each of those areas if foot patrolmen were added."

This Is 'Be Kind To Animals Week'

Mayor Walter Hannon has proclaimed May 4 through May 10 as "Be Kind to Animals" Week, in conjunction with the national celebration.

The celebration is sponsored by Animal Protection & Welfare, Inc. who recommend that everyone fully participate in events in the community.

In his proclamation, Mayor Hannon said that the people of Quincy are deeply indebted to the animal anti-cruelty control and welfare agencies for the contributions they make each year in educating children in humane principles and in promoting kindness and consideration for animals.

11 Communities Benefit

Funds Expected To Give 375 Youths Summer Jobs

At least 375 young people will be employed through the Summer Youth Program, expected to be funded by the U.S. Department of Labor, Mayor Walter J. Hannon announces.

The program, which is a continuation of the Neighborhood Youth Corp, will serve 11 communities in the South Shore. Some 125 to 150 Quincy jobs are estimated to be involved.

William Trifone, Director of the Youth Work Experience Program under the Quincy Public Schools, will administer the program when funding from the U.S. Department of Labor is received by the State's Office of Manpower Affairs.

The goals of the Summer Youth Program are to ensure that beneficial work experience is provided to economically disadvantaged youth. The program will focus on enhancing employability, and giving direction in occupational goals, according to the Office of Manpower Affairs who established guidelines for the program.

The program begins June 30 and ends Aug. 31. Young people will be paid $2.10 per hour for a minimum of 20 to a maximum of 35 hours per week, for eight to nine weeks.

Announcement will be made by the Neighborhood Youth Corps within the next two weeks as to where and when applications will be available.

"I feel this is one of the most worthwhile programs that receive funding," Trifone said. "It has proven itself worthy over the past years by the visible accomplishments made by the young people who participate."

"This program represents a worthwhile investment in the 375 young people who will benefit from the work experience," said Hannon.

"We expect that many of these young women and men will be encouraged by the program to seek challenging jobs or continue their education," said Mayor Hannon.

To be eligible, young people from 14 to 21 years of age must fall within poverty guidelines established by the Department of Community Services. Generally, youth from low income families, one parent households, minorities, the handicapped, juvenile offenders and welfare recipients are eligible.

"All our placements will be in public service jobs for municipal or other non-profit organizations," said Trifone.

"Work related to the Bicentennial, renovations for parks and recreational facilities, and positions with the South Shore Day Care Center, Summer School, Cerebral Palsy and other organizations are examples of the types of jobs we place young people in," he added.

3 Memorials To Be Unveiled At Lincoln - Hancock Dedication

Robert E. Pruitt, former superintendent of Quincy Public Schools, will be the main speaker at June 1 ceremonies formally dedicating the Lincoln-Hancock Community School.

Pruitt, a senior research associate specialist for community colleges and technical institutes in Washington, D.C., served as Quincy schools superintendent from 1963-1968.

Highlights of the dedication ceremony - to begin at 2 p.m. - will include the unveiling of three memorials.

The Lincoln-Hancock Community School Center will be dedicated in memory of the late Dr. Charles Djerf and a framed picture of him will be hung in the Center. Charles T. Sweeney, chairman of the Quincy School Committee, will speak on behalf of the Djerf family.

A stone memorial to the late Private John W. Jackson will also be unveiled. Jackson, a World War II Marine killed in Iwo Jima, lived on the present site of the Community School. City Clerk John Gillis, member of the William Caddy Marine Corps League, will make the dedication.

A memorial to the Grossman family will also be announced in recognition of land donated for the present school site. Joseph Grossman will speak on behalf of the family.

Sixth graders from Lincoln-Hancock will be stationed in different parts of the school, between 1 p.m. and 5 p.m., to answer visitor questions.

The Quincy High School Band will perform on the pool patio from 1-2 p.m. under the direction of Band Director Michael Cahill.

Dedication ceremonies will begin at 2 p.m. with Rev. James Kimmell, pastor of Faith Lutheran Church, offering the invocation.

Raymond Hits Proposal

Strong Opposition To School Board Expense Accounts

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

A suggestion to grant school committeemen an expense account appears doomed in the face of strong school committee opposition.

The matter was scheduled for discussion on Wednesday's School Committee agenda at the request of School Committeeman Daniel Raymondi who is opposed to an expense account.

Raymondi, who will vacate his school committee seat to run for Ward 2 Councillor, said he planned to "air once and for all" Wednesday a suggestion to grant expense accounts to school committee members.

Raymondi said he tabled, at last week's school committee meeting - a motion made by School Committeeman John Sullivan - which would have granted expense accounts to school committeemen. Sullivan, however, denies making any motion or formal proposal, saying the matter of expense accounts was "limited to discussion" during executive session.

Raymondi explaining why he tabled the motion he said was made by Sullivan, told The Quincy Sun:

Boston Busing Hurts

City Must Tap E&D Fund To Aid Tax Rate

Mayor Walter J. Hannon says the city will be forced to tap the Emergency and Deficiency Fund [E & D] in order to keep the tax rate as low as possible.

The E & D Fund, commonly known as the City's rainy day account, now contains $370,312.76 according to City Auditor Charles Shea.

Last week the city was faced with a net loss of $2.2 million in cherry sheet revenue - a fact which could add nine dollars to the present tax rate of $159.90.

Over the past several months, Hannon has stressed he has been working to keep the tax rate increase "minimal".

But faced with a $1.2 million decrease in receipts for the city, coupled with $1 million increase in services bill from the state on the cherry sheet, Hannon said the city "cannot have its cake and eat it, too."

"We thought we could come up with a pretty good tax rate and have some money in the bank," said Hannon. "...But it is obvious now we can't have an E & D fund. We can't have our cake and eat it too. We can't have both a low tax rate and an E & D Fund."

Hannon blamed the unexpected loss in cherry sheet revenue on forced busing in Boston.

"We are paying for busing," said Hannon. "Boston needs the money to bus the kids. If busing weren't there - no Phase 2 or Phase 3 to finance - I don't think we would have lost any money on the cherry sheets."

Hannon noted Boston's cherry sheet figure exceeded by $2.8 million the revenue allocated to any other city in the state.

He said, too, the decision to combine collection of garbage and trash in Quincy saved the city $56,000 or two dollars on the tax rate.

Cherry sheet reimbursements from the state center in the area of school aid. The added $1 million in services the city must pay comes primarily from MBTA, water and sewerage services as well as county taxes, said Hannon.

The Mayor said the tax rate would be set in late June or early July.

Sophisticated Heart Monitor

Installed At Hospital

Installation of a sophisticated heart monitoring console in the Intensive Care Unit [I.C.U.] at Quincy City Hospital is now complete.

The new console, manufactured by the Hewlett-Packard Company, electronically monitors the heartbeat of all 12 patients admitted in to the Unit.

Centrally located in the Unit, the machine is used for patients with heart and respiratory diseases. It enables nurses to accurately determine a patient's progress after a heart attack.

By having the machine centrally located in a single console, one nurse can view the cardiac rate and rhythm of all 12 patients in the Special Care Unit. An alarm system within the console immediately alerts the nurse to any change in the patient's condition.

The machine also has the capacity to measure the blood pressure of all 12 patients from the central location. Ongoing educational training programs are also now in effect to train more personnel in the operation of the machine.

Hearing May 28 On Wastewater Management

A public hearing will take place Thursday, May 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the Community Room of Lincoln-Hancock Community School to discuss future wastewater management in the Eastern Mass. Metropolitan Area.

The Technical Subcommittee of the Boston Harbor-Eastern Mass. Metropolitan Area Wastewater Management Study has already recommended decentralized treatment systems for future wastewater flows in the Metropolitan Sewerage District. They have endorsed expanding the primary treatment plants at Deer and Nut Islands to secondary treatment, building advanced treatment plants along the Neponset River in the Canton area and along the Charles River in the Wellesley area, and providing a flow augmentation facility for the Aberjona River in the Woburn area.

The Subcommittee is now seeking citizen input in three areas:

- Construction priority of the new facilities.
- Financing of the Facilities.
- Management, operation and building of the facilities.

The study team will present a number of feasible options and ask for citizen comment to guide this phase of the planning process. The Technical Subcommittee will make recommendations on these issues soon after completion of the series of scheduled public meetings.

Serving on the Technical Subcommittee with the MDC are the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the Metropolitan Area Planning Council and the state's Division of Water Pollution Control, Department of Public Health and the Office of State Planning. A citizens' committee serves as advisor to the study.

GOOD LUCK - Co-workers wish William L. Villone good luck as he spends his last day as the city's director of Veterans Services. Francis Sullivan Appointed Veterans Services Director Mayor Walter J. Hannon announces the appointment of Francis L. Sullivan, 130 South St., as Director of Veterans Services.

He succeeds William Villone, who retired recently. The appointment is effective immediately. The job pays $17,000 a year.

Sullivan, 53, has been Assistant Director of Veterans Services for the past 13 years, and a city employee since 1949.

He is a graduate of Quincy schools and a lifelong resident of the city. He is active in various civic organizations, and has served on the Committee on Task Force for Jobs for Veterans.

In making the appointment, Hannon said he was "pleased to be able to fill the Veterans position with a career employee of the city."

"In his many years with the Veterans Department, Frank Sullivan has always displayed a professionalism in his duties, and an expertise in the field of veterans affairs," Hannon said. "He has worked hard and effectively to provide needed services to the veterans of our community, and it is with confidence in his ability to do a good job that I make this appointment."

Sullivan is married, and he and his wife Eileen have two children, Ellen, 19, a nursing student at Northeastern University, and John, 17, a grade 12 student.

Quincy To Receive $2.4 Million In Revenue Sharing

Quincy will receive a total of $2,005,913 in federal revenue sharing funds during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The appropriation is the second largest in the 11th Congressional District with Braintree receiving the top sum of $2,413,418.

Congressman James A. Burke said the cities, towns and counties in the district will receive a total of $8.73 million in revenue sharing funds. The money is part of $6.35 billion being distributed nationally from the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972. It will be divided into quarterly payments, the first slated for October.

Localities share two-thirds of the total amount allocated to their state. The remaining one-third [$68.8 million in Massachusetts] is apportioned to the state government.

Boston will receive approximately $21.3 million in revenue sharing funds.

Aerial View Of Proposed SOUTH QUINCY STATION And Ramps

PROPOSED SITE of the MBTA's South Quincy Rapid Transit Station Complex, near the Rte 3/128 interchange, and the Rte 3 improvements, planned by the State DPW are shown in this aerial map. The MBTA proposes to build a rapid transit station and 1,800-2,000-car parking garage along the South Shore Transit right-of-way, about 1.5 miles south of Quincy Center Station. The MBTA also would build access ramps to the station and circulation roadways for buses and kiss-and-ride passengers. The DPW plans a realignment of Rte 3 through North Braintree, construction of a collector distributor paralleling Rte 3, and the upgrading of Capen's Circle in North Braintree. A joint public hearing will be held May 28 by the MBTA and DPW on the Authority's application for $21 million in supplemental federal assistance toward building the transit-related facilities. The hearing will be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and will resume at 7 p.m. To help identify the proposed site, other structures shown on the map are: [1] two Reytheon Company buildings on Centre Street, South Quincy; [2] The Patriot Ledger printing plant on Folton Street, off Centre Street; [3] the Howard Johnson Warehouse on Penn Street, South Quincy, and [4] Archbishop Williams High School on Independence Avenue, North Braintree.

All Assured Of Right To Be Heard At S. Quincy MBTA Hearing

The MBTA assures proponents, and opponents of the proposed South Quincy transit-highway project that they will be able to testify at the public hearing, Wednesday, May 28, whether or not they have reserved a specific time to give testimony.

A spokesman for the MBTA, which is holding the hearing jointly with the Massachusetts Department of Public Works, said:

"Reservation of a specific time of day or evening for citizens and organizations to testify is solely for their convenience as it will eliminate a possibly long and tiring wait for their turn.

"An appointment to testify is not at all necessary and the hearing officer will recognize anyone from the floor. However, if anyone does wish to reserve time, arrangements can be made by calling 722-6595."

The hearing will be held at Quincy Masonic Temple in two sessions. The first will be from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and the second from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m.

The South Quincy transit-highway project consists of a Red Line rapid transit station, parking garage, access ramps between Route 3 and the station, and a circulatory roadway for buses and kiss 'n' ride passengers.

Make your own parkas, tents

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

It's true! You can make your own sleeping bags, jackets, vests, hoods, socks, parkas, luggage, comforters, tents... you name it. Write to Frostline Kits, 452 Burbank St., Broomfield, Colo. 80020 for your free catalog of pre-cut kits.

And "thank you" to the many readers who wrote to tell us about them.

Dear Mrs. Kinser:

I really enjoy your column and hope you can help me. I have a pattern for a lace centerpiece that I found in a magazine of needlework. It calls for "Boye Steel Knitting Pins" size 17 which are no longer manufactured. Would any of your readers be able to help me find a set? I'd appreciate it.

Marge Wiegrefe

There's a job for you, readers. Boye Steel Knitting Pins size 17. Got 'em?

Dear Mrs. Kinser:

Do you have a pattern for a neck pillow? Your column is very helpful and enjoyable. Keep it coming!

Myrtle Brennan

Thank you very much and I shall Yes, I do have the instruction sheet for making a very comfy, yet simple-to-make neck pillow. Just send 20 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of your newspaper.

Betty:

Your column is much enjoyed and, even though I personally do not do much sewing, I clip your ideas and send them on to friends who do.

Sue Burns,
Boca Raton, Fla.

That, Sue, is what I call a true friend!

Don't forget our two new leaflets: Pioneer Skirt (made from a pair of old jeans and a little fabric) 20 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Sunbonnet (one main pattern piece, a few buttons, snaps and ties) 20 cents and a stamped return envelope.

Dear Betty:

I'm feeling on top of the world tonight, and I just have to tell someone. Today I tackled that pile of mending that had been accumulating for umpteens weeks, and I finished the job — all of it! Of course, if I hunted through enough drawers, I could probably find more things that need mending, but at least there is room now on my sewing machine to pile them. I want to thank you for your very fine, prompt letter answering my last call for help.

Mildred Gross

Isn't it a great feeling to be caught up? (Just don't look in the drawers and you'll never know what's there!) And you're welcome. Write any time.

Wedding announcement doesn't call for gift

By RIV TOBIN
Copley News Service

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

We live in Southern California and our son is to be married in Illinois. Few of our friends will attend. The bride's family is sending out both invitations and announcements. Would invitations to our friends here make them feel obligated to send a gift or should we send out just announcements?

Mrs. H.M.S.

Dear Mrs. H.M.S.:

I would send invitations to close friends who know your son and will be truly delighted to learn of his marriage.

If you truly feel these people wouldn't wish to send a gift I'd send them announcements, which really don't call for a gift. Of course there is nothing mandatory about an invitation, as far as a gift is concerned.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

What is your opinion on the correct length of dress for the mothers of the bride and groom at a church wedding at noon in the month of June? The bride will be wearing the traditional long gown.

Just Asking

Dear Just:

The bride's mother usually sets the tone and I think her decision depends on where the reception is to be held. Either style is appropriate.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

The bride's gawky 7-year-old sister was the flower girl. This kid is taking ballet lessons and she came down the aisle on her tip toes, turning and dipping as she scattered daisy petals. Everyone else thought it was cute but I thought it was ridiculous. Have I seen everything? — A Southern Lady

Dear Southern Lady:

If everyone else thought the performance was cute, so be it. No, I don't think you've seen everything.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

There's a limit to hospitality

By PAT And MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I'm sure many people write complaining about their mothers-in-law but I'll trade my sister-in-law for any mother-in-law I've ever heard of.

Sally is 26 years old and has decided to return to college. She worked a couple of years and then married. She is now divorced. My husband was very pleased when his sister decided to complete her education. He told her she could live with us to cut expenses — unfortunately we live near the college!

My husband made this decision without consulting me, and Sally has turned out to be an impossible house guest. She keeps her bedroom in shambles, the bathroom is a disaster; and if she makes a sandwich, she leaves the mess for me to clean up. She even tosses her dirty clothes in with mine and expects me to wash them.

I've complained to my husband and we always end up in a fight. To top it off, Sally attends class only when she feels like it and has dropped two of her four classes. What do I do now?

Had It

Dear Had It:

Give Sally her dirty clothes, tell her to pack and leave — the sooner the better. This girl is NOT trying.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My mother is driving us up the wall with her transcendental meditation. She will sit in her room, hands in lap, eyes closed, for 20 minutes night and morning. She insists this helps her emotionally and that we are to leave her alone while she meditates. What can I do with such a mother?

C. C.

Dear C. C.:

You can leave her alone while she meditates. Why shouldn't Mom have time to collect her thoughts and stabilize her mood? What's so wrong with that?

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My sister is dating my best friend and I can see nothing but trouble developing. This friend, Bill, is great with men but he's a complete heel as far as women are concerned. He says he never intends to marry and prefers his freedom above all else.

I can see that my sister is really serious about Bill, and I happen to know that she has let the relationship go too far if you know what I mean. I've told Bill to find someone else and he said, "Your sister is a big girl and can make her own decisions. Besides, she isn't the only filly in my stable."

Shall I tell my sister what I know? They are both over 21.
Worried

Dear Worried:

Tell your sister exactly what you've told me; however, don't expect her to believe you. In dealing with love, consider what Antoine Bilt said: The first sigh of love is the last of wisdom.

FEARLESS FAIRWAY DRIVER

Unless you're playing with Spiro Agnew, you probably think golf is a safe sport. Actually it is, but the harmless-looking golf cart is another story. This little tri-wheeled vehicle may seem harmless, but even at slow speeds, smashups can cause serious injuries.

A Wisconsin man suffered a triple fracture of the ankle and a dislocated shoulder when the brakes failed on a hill. A Pittsburgh lady suffered a fractured leg when she was thrown from her cart when the steering wheel broke and the cart veered abruptly. Two brothers barely escaped serious injury when one of the wheels fell off and the cart plunged off a wood-plank bridge to the rocks 15 feet below.

The biggest menace on the fairways, however, is the drinking driver who becomes playful and reckless. Used properly, the golf cart can save overexertion but if you can't treat it with respect you can get hurt.

Hospital Needs YOU

Be A Real Hero, Donate A Pint Of Blood

By DEIRDRE SULLIVAN

hospital's supplies up to the recommended standards.

It's not an expensive donation for you. Your body replaces the blood you give in less than five days. But its value to someone else is immeasurable. It may not make the front pages, but sometime, somewhere, your blood may save a life.

Be a real hero. Donate at Quincy City Hospital.

Now, saving a life is supposed to be dramatic...like pulling someone from the path of a speeding car or performing brilliant surgery in the operating room.

But for those of us who don't patrol the streets in search of speeding cars or didn't graduate from medical school with honors, there is still a very vital, invaluable service we can perform to help save lives: Donate your blood.

The Quincy City Hospital Blood Bank needs you to replace their dwindling supplies. The 380-bed facility utilizes from 10 to 20 pints in just one day. You are the only ones who can keep the hospital well-supplied.

Thanks to a special ruling April 1, you may now donate at Quincy City in the name of any relative or friend and it can be shipped to any hospital in the Northeast should that relative or friend need it.

By becoming a member of the American Association of Blood Banks Northeast Clearing House Program, Quincy City will be able to give you and your family coverage in any hospital in the Northeast if you donate at our Blood Bank. A donor in another city or state may also donate in your name and have it shipped to Quincy City.

The Quincy Hospital Blood Bank is located on the ground floor of the east wing. It has four fully-equipped units for drawing blood and two specially trained I.V. nurses. Before donating, a sample is taken, a few questions on your medical history are asked, and your temperature, blood pressure, and pulse are checked. The actual donation takes less than 20 minutes without any pain or discomfort. Once drawn, your blood can be used for transfusions or can be frozen, plasma removed, and used later for treatment of shock. Thus many donors are needed.

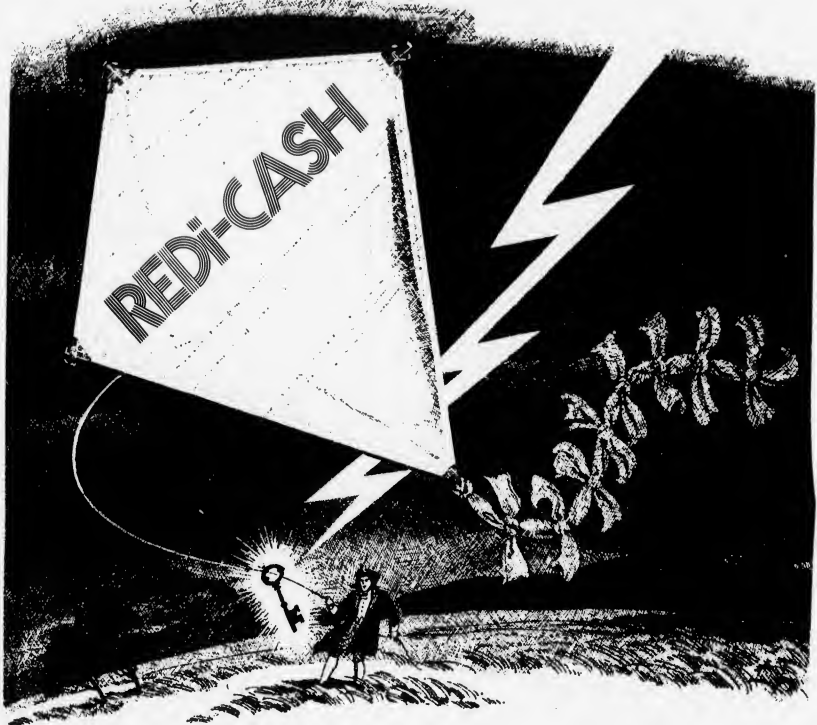

All that is asked by the staff at the Blood Bank is that you call them ahead of time at 773-1600, ext. 438. This way they can arrange an appointment for you during donors hours and save you waiting in line. Your appointments can be made any time on Monday through Thursday from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Saturdays from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Anyone from 18 to 66 or 17 with parental consent and weighing at least 110 pounds is eligible to donate. Thirty donors per week are needed to keep the

$49,100 Grant Application Filed

City Launches Intensive Lead Paint Poisoning Control Program

Mayor Walter J. Hannon announces recently that a $49,100 grant application was filed with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare by the city's Health Department for an intensive three-year lead poisoning control program.

Health Commissioner Alfred V. Mahoney, in cooperation with the Department of Planning and Community Development, filed the first-year application for the project, which could begin in July 1975. The grant will enable the city, in cooperation with several non-profit organizations, to provide more lead poison screening than they were previously able to afford.

The program, which has been endorsed by the South Shore Council on Children, will be administered by the Health Department under the direction of Dr. Mahoney. An intensive outreach program, which will canvass door to door in selected target areas will be the responsibility of the Quincy Community Action Organization.

According to Mayor Hannon, the canvass will be sponsored in order to reach every child from one to five years of age. "This canvass will use target neighborhood residents as outreach workers. Information on the nature and treatment of lead poisoning, and information on screening devices will be left at the home of every expectant mother and every home with young children," he said.

Five neighborhoods in Quincy, considered to have older housing stock, have been designated as target areas for the Lead Poisoning Control Program. These areas include Germantown, Quincy Point, Houghs Neck, Atlantic and Southwest Quincy. The last three areas have also been designated Community Development target areas by the city's Department of Planning and Community Development.

"Lead paint is a widespread community problem in Quincy," said Mayor Hannon. "Of 29,050 dwelling units, it is estimated that 22,165, or 76%, have lead paint," he added.

A 1974 screening conducted in one of the target areas showed 12 percent of the children had excessive blood-lead concentrations. At the Quincy Health Department Lead Poisoning Clinic, 12 percent of all children had high lead indications.

Concentrations of lead in the blood of young children occur when the child eats chips from a wall or ceiling coated with a lead based paint. Excessive concentrations of lead poisoning causes plumbism, a disease which slowly cripples its victims.

Current screening of approximately 1000 children each year, as well as housing inspections, are done by the Health Department. The department does not, however, currently have the staff to undertake an intensive program.

"There are approximately 4,100 children in the at-risk age group in the target neighborhoods," said Dr. Mahoney. It is our goal to screen 2,000 of these children the first year and 2100 the second. We will continue into other neighborhoods during the third year. "We estimate that about 10 percent, or 200, will require detoxification the first year."

Detoxification will involve a referral to the Carney or Children's Hospitals. These hospitals have become regional centers for the treatment of plumbism in children. Funds will be available for emergency medical treatment when other sources are not available.

The lead paint inspector will also be notified. Tests will be made of the child's home, and, the inspector will assist the owner in planning for rehabilitation of the unit if this is found to be necessary. Limited funds for emergency detoxification will be available as a last recourse as allowed by HEW regulations.

The Department of Planning and Community Development has offered its cooperation with the Houghs Neck Improvement Program to provide inspections, information and referral services.

"It will be the policy of our department to cooperate with the program in any way possible," said Geoffrey A. Davidson, Director of the Department of Planning and Community Development. "The code inspectors under the jurisdiction of the neighborhood improvement program will be instructed to be especially aware of the problem of lead based paint."

Housing inspections are carried out under a unique local ordinance. The Quincy Vacancy Ordinance requires that whenever a vacancy occurs in a unit, the electricity is shut off until a release is given by the Health Department. This allows thorough inspections and enforces compliance.

The South Shore Council for Children, the Area 524 Health Planning Committee, the Quincy Family Planning Project, the Visiting Nurse Association and the five civic associations representing the target neighborhoods will, also be involved in outreach programs. In addition to the canvassing, these groups will be involved in media campaigns and speaking engagements to maintain interest and support for the program. Ideas on how the program can best be tailored to individual neighborhoods will also be solicited, according to Dr. Mahoney.

In addition, an advisory board will be appointed by Mayor Hannon, the Department of Planning and Community Development, the Housing Authority, the Commissioner of Health, and the City Solicitor. Two members from each of the five neighborhood associations will also serve on the board.

"The board will monitor the progress of the program and provide recommendations on program operations to the Health Department," said Hannon.

Screening of children will take place in all area day care centers and lead clinics will be made part of the Health Department's Well Baby Clinic Program. Sites for these clinics include the Montclair Men's Club Well Baby Clinic, the Southwest Community Center, the Atherton Hough School in Houghs Neck, St. Boniface Church in Germantown, the Quincy Point Congregational Church, and Quincy's Health Center.

Hannon Proclaims Senior Citizens Month

Whereas, There are more than 17,000 citizens over sixty [60] years of age in the City of Quincy; and

Whereas, The City is endowed with a particularly high number of older Americans whose contribution to this community is imbedded within the historic and cultural development of this City; and

Whereas, The aging process involves special needs that must be met; and

Whereas, we shall endeavor to enrich their lives today, our own lives tomorrow and the lives of your children in the days to come;

Now, Therefore, I, Walter J. Hannon, Mayor of the City of Quincy, urge all citizens of Quincy to observe the month of May, 1975 as SENIOR CITIZENS' MONTH and work to provide these benefits and opportunities which will add satisfaction and dignity to the lives of these senior citizens.

Delahunt May Get Into Council Race

By HENRY BOSWORTH

At the moment there aren't enough City Council at-large candidates to get up a game of bridge let alone a primary election.

But that could change quite soon. Thinking of getting into the race is Rep. William Delahunt, for one.

Delahunt appeared to be a sure mayoralty candidate a few months ago but changed his mind. But he may now run for the open Council at-large seat instead.

"I'm considering it at this point," he frankly admits. "I'll make up my mind in a couple of weeks."

At this writing there are only three announced candidates for council at-large: School Committeeman Harold Davis, Sabina Stenberg and Joyce Baker. The latter announced Wednesday.

Of course, John Quinn will seek re-election. And Arthur Tobin is certain to run again. And Paul Harold is expected to make it official any moment now.

Without Delahunt, however, that's only six candidates and no need for a preliminary election as six are to be nominated for the three seats.

Delahunt's entrance or one other's is needed, or the at-large race could become The Great Waltz.

Delahunt, incidentally or coincidentally, is having a birthday party [33] in mid-July at the Blue Hill Tennis Club. The event will include a tennis tournament in which participants will include State Treasurer Robert Crane, Secretary of State Paul Guzzi and Dist. Atty. George Burke.

Could make a nice fund-raiser for a council at-large campaign kickoff.

THIS IS THE week of the two big political-social events of the young campaign season.

A cocktail reception will be held Friday night at the Sheraton Tara, Braintree for mayoralty contender City Councillor Joseph LaRaia. Champagne from 8 to 9 p.m. and an open bar and food until midnight.

On Sunday, it's Mayor Walter Hannon's turn as he and his wife, Patricia, host a party at the State Street South courtyard, North Quincy, from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. Hannon's expected to announce what everyone expects him to announce: he'll seek a third term. There'll be refreshments and entertainment throughout the afternoon.

INCIDENTALLY, LaRaia opens his campaign headquarters Saturday at noon at 867 Hancock St., across from Veterans Memorial Stadium. Phone numbers there will be: 471-0011 and 0932.

HIS MANY FRIENDS wish former Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa a speedy recovery from his illness. Della Chiesa, who served longer [12 years] than any one else as Quincy's chief executive, is now 73 and a Pembroke resident. He retired undefeated in 1965. Della Chiesa was affectionately known as the "penny pinching mayor" who used to walk around City Hall turning off unneeded lights.

SO FAR NO one has stepped forward to wrestle School Committeeman Daniel Raymondi for the Ward 2 City Council seat being vacated by Clifford Marshall to devote full-time to his Norfolk County sheriff duties. But the Speculation Corps wouldn't be too surprised to see either Peter Garcia or former Ward 3 Councillor Ted McLelland step in yet. Both Garcia and McLelland got re-shuffled out of Ward 3 in the redistricting.

QUINCY Rep. Joseph Brett has been installed vice-president of the Massachusetts Legisla^rs Association.

HAROLD DAVIS who is vacating his school committee seat to run for city council at-large, has tapped a member of his family to head up his campaign: Paul Hack, his cousin.

Hack is the son of the late Louis Hack, well known real estate man, basketball and football official.

The antics of the Democratic Party are giving our system of government a new name — Democracy.

With no wars now being waged, former President Nixon may finally say there is peace.

A kiss is a fragile make-up device for young lovers, often used as a substitute for logic.

The average poor slob with bills doesn't necessarily feel any better when he hears that Mr. Nixon owes his lawyers $500,000.

American technology reached the moon but finding a way to run big cars on less gas seems incapable of solution.

Letter Box

Says 'Question Of Week'

Answer Incorrect

Editor, Quincy Sun:

In your March 20th "Question of the Week", is there a law prohibiting standees on school buses in Mass.? The answer you printed was completely incorrect.

Section 7B, clause 2, Chapter 90 of the General Laws of The Commonwealth states, that adequate seating capacity for each passenger must be provided, but any bus with adequate straps, handles, etc. may carry not more than 25% more passengers than seating capacity allows. This is subject to section 7L. In cities which accept this section [7L] school bus operators must not allow the number of children riding to exceed the number of seats, and each child must be seated before the bus moves.

The volunteer operator on the Voter Information Phone for The League of Women Voters should have investigated the question thoroughly before answering and you certainly should have verified the answer before printing.

Yours truly,
James W. Leavitt

LWV Clarifies School Bus Standee Law

Editor, Quincy Sun:

With reference to our Question of the Week for 16 February 1975, regarding standees on school buses in Massachusetts, we submit the following statement of clarification.

Chapter 90, Section 7L of the General Laws of Massachusetts permits a city or town to prohibit standees on school buses. The community must vote to accept that provision. If, and only if, your correspondent's city or town has accepted Section 7L of Chapter 90, are standees prohibited in that community.

If a city or town has NOT accepted Section 7L of Chapter 90, standees are permitted to the number of 25% of the seating capacity of the bus, provided suitable straps or handles for support are available on the bus, under provisions of Chapter 90, Section 7B [2]. State and local officials whom we consulted interpret these provisions to mean that state law does NOT prohibit standees on school buses.

Edith Vanderburgh
Acting Director

[Ed. Note: according to the City Solicitor's office, Quincy has not voted on Chapter 90, Section 7L of the General Laws of Massachusetts. Therefore, standees are permitted in Quincy, subject to the above provisions.]

UNDER THE STATE HOUSE DOME

Ted: Will He Run?

By J.J. Smith

Ted Kennedy: Will he or won't he?

That seems to be the question being raised more and more these days about Massachusetts senior United States senator. Will he or won't he run for President in 1976?

Most people (including Ted) thought that the youngest of the famed Kennedy brothers had given the answer to that question last September when he told a Parker House new conference his decision not to run was "absolute."

"This decision is firm, final and unconditional," Kennedy said. "There is absolutely no circumstance or event that will alter the decision. I will not accept the nomination. I will not accept a draft."

Apparently, however, the power brokers of the Democratic party don't believe him and neither does a large chunk of the American people judging by his high placement on polls for presidential possibilities.

Teddy may well mean what he said about withdrawal from the presidential sweepstakes but, given the unalterable fact that he is who he is, it is impossible to ignore his possible candidacy when discussing 1976 possibilities.

The simple, inescapable truth is that the equivalent of a bunch of guys named Joe are the ones seeking the presidential nomination in his party. Those announced to date are, as regards a presidential league, little-known, little-understood and uncharacteristically uncharismatic for top level White House possibilities.

Ted Kennedy suffers none of these drawbacks. He's been in the public eye so prominently that to many Americans he's almost like one of the family. They may love him or hate him. They may regard him as a wayward son or an errant father or a model big brother — but they know him. He has an "instant recognition" factor that most politicians would give their eye teeth for.

Anyone who has ever traveled with Kennedy on the campaign trail knows the impact he has on people, especially women of any and all ages and young people. His is much of the appeal that was generated by the big Hollywood stars of a few generations back.

Yes, Teddy Kennedy — despite political warts and echos of Chappaquiddick — remains just about the hottest property in the Democratic party, and this is a fact of life not lost upon Democratic power brokers.

Ted Kennedy still insists he won't run for president but changing circumstances and the need of his party for leadership — and the idea that his nation, too, might need him — could conceivably change his mind.

That this youngest of the Kennedys is still regarded as the brightest presidential hope among the Democrats, despite Chappaquiddick, indicates the extent of the impact he has had on his fellow Americans everywhere.

This writer, for one, hopes that Kennedy won't run for the White House despite the pressures on him to do so. There are too many kooks in the world, and, unfortunately, the more violence-prone among them seem to be the Kennedy-haters.

The probability looms, however, that Ted Kennedy will be an authentic draft choice for president at the Democratic National Convention next year. In view of the fact that there has never been a truly authentic draft before, that might — just might — persuade Teddy to change his mind.

Despite Teddy disclaimers about the presidency, there are those who feel that for a non-candidate he is spending an inordinate amount of time on the national hustlings. He pops up all over the country, giving speeches and making fund-raising appearances — and, coincidentally, banking political I.O.U.'s from a wide range of fellow Democrats in key states. These are "notes" that could be cashed in at a national convention. Whether it will be 1976 or 1980 remains the key question.

To the pros, in the final analysis, it's the bottom line politically that they are interested in — can their man win! They don't care about charisma or Chappaquiddick or local busing problems, but — can the candidate get elected?

The national polls reveal two things — that President Ford is beatable, and that even the party faithful can't get turned on by the likes of Jackson or Bentsen or Wallace or any Democrats who have chucked their hats into the White House race to date.

All of which leads, almost inexorably, to non-candidate Ted Kennedy. As the "candidate" with the brightest prospects of going all the way, it is inevitable that, more and more, the question will be asked? Will he or won't he?

Inter-Church Ecumenical Service At St. Chrysostom's

The Inter-Church Council is sponsoring an Ecumenical service and celebration of the feast of Pentecost at St. Chrysostom's Church, Sunday, May 18, at 8 p.m.

The Ministry of the Word portion of the Consultation On Church Union [COCU] liturgy will be used as the format. The emphasis will be on scripture, preaching, prayers, and music.

The clergy from the following seven churches will participate in the Service: Union Congregational Church, First Church of Squantum, Atlantic United Methodist Church, Atlantic Memorial Congregational Church, Wollaston Church of the Nazarene, Sacred Heart Church, of North Quincy, St. Chrysostom's Church.

A procession and celebration of the "Birthday of the Church" is planned, with music to be provided by the A Cappella Choir from the Eastern Nazarene College.

All offerings will go to World Hunger via CARE.

7 To Be Confirmed Sunday At Bethany Church

Seven ninth grade students will be confirmed at the Bethany Congregational Church, Spear St., Quincy Center, Sunday, May 18. They are:

David L. Carr, Denise M. Van

Dine, Timothy Hall, Jonathon B. Green, William D. Ross, Edward W. Fenby, Janice L. Siddens.

Under the guidance of Miss Donna Zanolli, the group has spent eight months reviewing Christian beliefs, learning about church history and present-day organization, and attending a Chapel Service each Sunday prior to study and discussion.

A dinner for the confirmands and their parents was held Wednesday night, at the church, under the sponsorship of the Christian Education Committee.

Point Congregational Daily Nursery To Close

The Daily Nursery and Pre-Kindergarten of Quincy Point Congregational Church will close June 13 after more than 25 years of service.

The decision to close was made after study had been made of the needs of the community and the availability of other schools.

Start of pre-school education in Quincy has seriously affected this year's enrollment, it was noted. In addition, expansion of that program means that next year's enrollment would be even lower.

Home Improvements Guide

Vinyl Siding and a New Roof Freshens Home Exteriors

Give the exterior of your home a whole new fresh look that will give you greater home comfort and protection, plus the full satisfaction of having one of the most attractive homes in your neighborhood.

Starting where it counts, on the exterior, you'll be protecting your valued inside walls and furnishings from unsightly damage, besides giving your exterior a new permanent clean look.

The exterior sidewall cover of your home has a number of purposes. It must first provide you the needed protection against the damaging effects of nature's elements. It should guard you against water entering your home either from wind-driven rains or from melting snow or ice, and prevent moisture seepage. It should also contain insulating properties to reduce the amount of heat entering your home during the summer, and keep the cold out in the winter. Similar properties for the purpose of reducing the outside noise level should also be inherent in the material.

Now, strong popularity is accorded this new exterior sidewall cover that can perform these tasks and more. Its solid vinyl clapped and vertical styled sidings. For appearance, it creates handsome architectural effects especially when in use with other vinyl siding panels and with other natural siding materials, such as stone and brick.

Made of one of the toughest of all plastic compounds, solid vinyl siding is manufactured by Bird & Son, Inc., East Walpole, Mass. It is a triumph of modern technology, emerging as one of the most beautiful, durable building materials ever discovered or invented. It took years of research and development to perfect.

Solid vinyl is virtually indestructible and requires little or no maintenance. Dirt and grime may be removed with minimum of effort. It never needs paint or other surface coloring since the color of vinyl runs throughout the material. It is impervious to pollutants in the air, and is unaffected by fungi, termites or other vermin. It will not support fire nor will it conduct lightning or electricity.

Solid vinyl sidewall cover combines acoustical and thermal insulation properties with the aesthetic appeal of natural wood. It comes in colors proven to be most compatible to exterior designs; white and yellow.

A recent innovation in solid vinyl siding has been the development of BRANDED vinyl which accentuates handsome woodgrain textures, with vinyl-on-vinyl overtones.

More homes are heated electrically

A trend toward more electric heating systems in the home has already begun according to a joint report published by the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Bureau of the Census.

The report shows the proportion of new homes with electric heat increased from 36 per cent in 1972 to 42 per cent in 1973 with a corresponding decline in new homes using natural gas as a fuel. — CNS

The South Shore Music Circus was one of the first three tent theatres in the country and is one of the few still in operation. Unlike other musical tent theatres, the Music Circus is strictly non-profit, and all revenues above costs are distributed to charitable, artistic, or educational organizations on the South Shore.

Theatre in Cohasset began in 1933 at the Cohasset Town Hall, where one of the first experimental summer theatres was organized under the direction of Alexander Dean, then head of the Yale University School of Drama.

At that time, a resident company was maintained with such actors as Humphrey Bogart and Broderick Crawford. Others who were attracted in the early years were Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Ruth Chatterton, Ann Corio, Walter Abel, Sylvia Sidney, Jane Cowl, Helen Menken, Arthur Treacher, Cyril Ritchard, Edward Everett Horton and writers such as Sinclair Lewis, Thornton Wilder and Peter Arno.

In 1950, the move was made from the Town Hall theatre to the present site with the support and encouragement of Gertrude Lawrence, her husband Richard Aldrich, and his lawyer, David Holtzmann. The first manager of the Music Circus was Herman E. Krawitz.

The South Shore Music Circus is located on Sohier Street, just off Route 3A in Cohasset.

Subscription information is available at the box office or by calling 383-1400. Individual tickets to any performance are available at the box office, ticket agencies, or at Ticketron offices beginning on Memorial Day.

South Shore Camera Club Exhibit At Crane Library

The public is invited to attend the second annual South

Shore Camera Club Exhibition of Photography at the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Center, now until the end of the month.

The library is open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. It is closed on Sundays.

The South Shore Camera Club, is one of New England's largest camera clubs, with a membership of about 175.

The club exhibition includes both color and black and white photographs embracing several areas of interest; landscape, portraiture, nature, and photo-journalism.

The approximate 80 photographs are the individual efforts of many of the South Shore Camera Club's members.

The idea of an annual club exhibition was conceived last year as a means of stimulating public interest in photography as a fine art and to provide club members with an opportunity to exhibit their photographic works publicly. This exhibition is free to the public.

Joyce Baker Seeks Council At-Large Seat

Mrs. Joyce Baker of 162 Warren Ave., Wollaston announces her candidacy for City Councilor at-large.

Mrs. Baker cited her experience of more than 20 years in the business world as an accountant and office manager which she said qualifies her to be a candidate for the City Council. She said that particularly in this time of fiscal crisis involving each and every citizen there is a need for a candidate with practical experience in financial management and fiscal responsibility.

"I feel that today's voter, because of lack of information or involvement, allows a few to dictate the future of our city," she said in her statement. "It is necessary to become actively involved in order to make a change and voter strength lies in working together. Today's problems of high taxes, welfare costs, crime in the streets, and a runaway economy cannot be solved with patronage and the promising of favors.

"Neither will they disappear without a sincere combined effort between citizens and elected officials. We have got into the unfortunate habit of expecting our local government to furnish all the answers and to solve all of our problems. We have a personal responsibility to seek out these answers ourselves, including the responsibility to dictate the quality and dedication of our politicians by getting involved and exercising our vote.

"I believe in Quincy and the future of Quincy; I believe in the citizens of Quincy. I firmly believe that by working together we can solve many, if not most, of our local problems and if privileged to serve on the Council my efforts would be to strive for these results."

Mrs. Baker is a notary public, past president of the Wollaston School PTA, past president Quincy Women's Republican Club, a member Board of Curators Quincy Historical Society, Board of Directors Children Protective Services, member, Quincy Women's Club, Save Our Shores, Quincy Citizens Association, Quincy Junior College Women's Center. She is married to Lawrence W. Baker, and is the mother of three children.

A Thank - You To Over 600 Pupils

'Hot Dog Day At Quincy School'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

It was "Hot Dog Day" last Wednesday, not at Fenway Park but at the Quincy School, Newbury Ave., when over 600 students feasted on frankfurts, cokes and ice cream.

The Quincy School and its Parent Association were saying "thanks" to the kids for helping at cake and candy sales held throughout the year to raise funds later used to buy added supplies for the school.

The children dined in shifts, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., consuming a total of 1,000 hot dogs, 1,200 cokes, 600 bags of potato chips and 600 ice cream cups.

A total of 17 children won two McDonald's gift certificates in a poster contest held especially for the day. Kids created posters corresponding to the theme, "What Hot Dog Day Means To Me". The winners were:

Kindergarten - Nina Oh.
First Grade - Sandra Nogueira and Lynn Ward.
Second Grade - Joseph Bangs, James Capone and Paul Ragusa.

Third Grade - Dean Clark, Ellen Riley and Roxanne Rowe.
Fourth Grade - Karen Flaherty, Robert Waterman and Richard O'Sullivan.

Fifth Grade - Gail Jonatis and Lisa DuBois.

Sixth Grade - Kim DuBois, Richard Doyle and Tony LeBlanc.

Members of the Quincy Parent Association helping to plan "Hot Dog Day" were Mrs. Cathy Ierardi, chairman; Mrs. Sylvia Gelsomini, co-chairman; Mrs. Cathy Waterman, secretary; and Mrs. Donna Gallagher, treasurer.

2 Sacred Heart Pupils Win Ecology Contest Honors

Two Sacred Heart fifth graders have won honors in the Third Annual Elementary Education Ecology and Poster Program sponsored by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Joseph Paglierani, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Paglierani of 147 Vassall St., Wollaston numbered among 70 students to receive "highest honors" in the contest. He will receive a plaque from EPA Regional Administrator John A. S. McGlennon and Senator Edward W. Brooke for the poster he created for the program.

And Mary Patrice Atchison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Atchison of 55 French St., North Quincy, will receive a finalist certificate at May 19 award ceremonies for her 12-line poem submitted in the contest. Her poem read:

How come they had to change this world

From grass to treeless highways?

From blossomed trees to office chairs

To pollution in our skyways?
How come they have to raise the prices

Hour by the hour?

How come they have to spend so much to build a single tower?

Why do they put so much into soda bottles

Broken and thrown along the streets?

Ugly trash it models!

Now, if we all would just pitch in it would be a nice world to live in.

Paul Keough, EPA director of public affairs and coordinator of the program, said the judging panel received over 7,000 contest entries. He said teachers throughout New England discussed environmental matters with students during February and March. Each student was then asked to create a poem or poster about an environmental topic. Teachers submitted the two best entries from their classes to the EPA, explained Keough.

A total of 70 New England students received "highest honors" and 340 were selected as finalists.

Squantum PTO Plans Charlie Brown Field Day

MONEY TALKS

This Country Needs A Good Dose Of Intermediation

By Philip J. Lawrence
President

Colonial Federal Savings

And Loan Association
of Quincy, Holbrook and Wareham
8-6 Weekdays 8-7:30 Thursdays

A heavy flow of savings into institutions like ours would be a healthy symptom in a seriously sick economic situation. "Disintermediation", as we mentioned in an earlier column, is a clumsy word to describe what in the hands of private savers has been a clumsy and often costly operation. It has also been a key factor in the unrestrained inflation of recent years.

It is the opposite of "intermediation", which describes the common practice, especially since World War II, of putting personal savings on deposit with savings and loans, savings banks, credit unions, pension funds, and other "intermediaries", which in turn make these funds available to borrowers.

Disintermediation came into prominence in the tight money situation of 1966, during which market interest rates rose to what were then record levels. Savers reacted by disintermediating, taking their funds out of deposit accounts and investing directly on their own in market securities like stocks and bonds.

Financial institutions like ours could not compete for these funds, largely because savings entrusted to us were invested in long-term assets and because our regulatory agencies, like the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, imposed ceilings on the interest rates we were

Financial experts blame disintermediation for fostering the run-away inflation we have experienced in recent years. Intermediation tended to lower interest rates by keeping money in supply for borrowers. Disintermediation withdrew this money from the lending market, making it scarce and therefore boosting the price at which it could be borrowed.

Despite the tremendous growth since World War II in the gross national product [GNP], the rise in prices, and the volume of borrowing, inflation was kept at what we now consider a moderate level [an annual rate of 2 per cent in the 20-year period from 1949 to 1969]. This was because savings deposits [intermediation] rose spectacularly over those years—in savings and loans, for example, from less than $10 billion after World War II to over $130 billion twenty-five years later.

According to many economists, intermediation has been highly beneficial to our rate of economic growth. As one of them notes, "A high rate of economic growth requires a heavy volume of real investment. The lower the rate of interest that ultimate borrowers must pay, the greater their expenditure on real investments is likely to be."

Disintermediation is not only hazardous for the personal saver. It is also injurious to our economic system.

Brett Objects To Making Wollaston Ave. One - Way

Rep. Joseph Brett has expressed opposition to a recommendation to make Wollaston Ave. one-way in a southerly direction.

The city's traffic commissioners plan to recommend to the City Council an ordinance making Wollaston Ave., as well as other streets, one-way. The Wollaston Ave. recommendation came after review of a traffic study conducted to assess the traffic impact of a Friendly Ice Cream Shop to be located at 699 Hancock St.

In a letter to Warren Powers, chairman of the City Council's ordinance committee, Brett said "better enforcement of parking regulations in that particular area" could eliminate traffic problems caused by cars parking on both sides of narrow area streets.

Urging Powers to prevent the one-way restriction on Wollaston Ave., Brett said:

"As a neighbor in that area and one who uses that stretch of roadway frequently, I fail to see any justification for making the street one-way."

Responding to Brett, Powers said he wanted to review the William Moore Associates study which prompted the traffic commissioners to recommend the one-way restriction on Wollaston Ave. Powers said convenience would have to "take a back seat to public safety" in the resolution of the problem. He said:

"I will take into consideration Mr. Brett's opposition to making Wollaston Ave. one-way. And I will also take into consideration any benefits which might accrue to the people of Wollaston in terms of relieving the entanglement and extreme congestion in the area by making the street one-way.

North In 2 Suburban League Wins

The North Quincy track team continues to roll along and two Suburban League wins last week raised its league record to 4-3 and its overall mark to 8-3.

Last Saturday North had only two scorers in the State Coaches Meet at Brockton but those two turned in fine performances. Bart Petracca was third in the two-mile but his time of 9:28.6 broke his own school record and was only four-tenths of a second off the winners' time.

Mark Canavan placed fourth in the half-mile in 1:58.1, only a tenth of a second off the school mark.

North's mile relay team of John Mackey, Jerry MacKenzie, Brian Doherty and Canavan finished a close second in the seeded heat but was disqualified because of a lane violation.

North's outstanding season was highlighted last week by its biggest win, a 76-69 decision over perennial league power Brockton, whose only other losses since 1972 had been to powerhouse Weymouth South, which had previously knocked off the Boxers this spring.

"This was an awfully big win for us," Coach Lou Tozzi said. "This is our first year in the Suburban League and to defeat Brockton is a real shot in the arm for us."

North's win wasn't official until the 440-yard relay team of Brian Doherty, Matty Constantino, Matty King and Paul Doherty won.

The Raiders won the meet in the running events as they trailed, 45-27, after the field events and had to stage a tremendous rally to pull out the win.

Sophomore MacKenzie won the 440 in the record breaking time of 51.3 seconds, breaking Paul Affa's mark, and Brian Doherty was a double winner in the 100 and long jump. Paul Doherty anchored the 440 relay team, won the 220 and took third in the shot put.

Other Raider winners were: Canavan, 880; Petracca as usual, mile; Artie Barrett, two-mile; Dave Lorman, high hurdles; Rich Mahoney, high jump, and the mile relay team of Canavan, Mackey, Petracca and MacKenzie.

Earlier in the week North had rolled over Waltham, 88-57, winning all the running events except the high hurdles.

Mark Reale and Canavan were double winners, Reale winning the low hurdles and high jump and Canavan the triple jump and mile.

Other winners were Peter Hemphill, javelin; Petracca, half mile; Constantino, 220; Mahoney, high jump; Paul Doherty, 100; Mackey, 440; Artie Barrett, two-mile, and the mile relay team of Ken O'Brien, Phil Maloney, Petracca and Canavan.

O'Brien turned in his best effort of the year, doing 2:06 in finishing second to Petracca in the half mile.

Quincy Trackmen Shine In Individual Performances

Quincy's track team, which has had some good days this spring, fell on hard times last week and suffered two Suburban League losses to drop its record to 3-4. However, Coach Tom Hall continued to receive some outstanding efforts from individual performers.

Last Thursday the Presidents bowed to Weymouth North, 99 1/3 to 45 2/3.

Preston Carroll, who has N.O. Boosters Scholarships

The North Quincy High School Boosters' Club, although inactive this year due to lack of interest, has awarded the following scholarships:

Walter "Cap" Bryan

divided his time between track and baseball, broke the school record in winning the low hurdles in 20.5 seconds. Kevin Luggelle had set the previous mark of 20.6 in 1969. Carroll also anchored the winning 440 relay team.

Lane Watkins won the 100, Kevin O'Brien the mile and Charlie Gaziano the javelin.

Earlier in the week Quincy

Scholarship, Steve McCormick; Peter J. Zoia Scholarship, Mike Meehan; Daniel J. Dieso Scholarship, Steve McKinnon, and Boosters' Club Scholarship, Marianne Dunn.

had lost to Rindge Tech., 76-69, as Art DiLoreto broke another Luggelle record, placing second in the high jump at 6'1/2.

Other Quincy winners were Gaziano in the javelin, Tom McMahon, pole vault; Carroll, low hurdles; Tim Kane, half mile, and O'Brien, mile.

Quincy, North Under The Lights

Parents of Quincy and North Quincy baseball players and others unable to see games in the afternoon, will get a chance during the next week to see them in night games.

Quincy will host Waltham Friday at 7:15 under the lights at Adams Field and Quincy and North will meet for the second time next Monday, also at 7:15.

The Raiders will finish their season on Friday, May 23, at Waltham under the lights at 7:15. Friday afternoon North plays at Brookline and next Wednesday it will be Weymouth North at North Quincy and Quincy at Weymouth South.

Charlie Bunker's North team, which can lose only one more game and qualify for the state tournament, received a tough break Monday when rain washed out its game at Cambridge Latin in the fifth inning with the Raiders ahead, 3-0, behind the fine pitching of Tim Clifford. The teams were unable to get a complete game in and it was replayed Tuesday. The Raiders were 9-5 overall and 7-5 in the Suburban League going into the Cambridge game.

Meanwhile, Bud Mosher's Quincy team, out of tourney contention, won a wild 10-9 decision over Brookline Monday to make its overall record 8-7 and league mark 7-6.

Quincy twice lost three-run leads but scored two runs in the sixth to pull out the win.

Preston Carroll was three for three including a three-run homer for the Presidents. Mark DeLuca was three for four including a ground rule double which just missed clearing the fence in right center at Adams Field. Lou Fishman had two hits, Bob Maruccci a double and Dwyer, Dave Raftery, Jimmy Duggan and Paul Ferris one hit each. Duggan drove in two runs. Paul Vespaziani was the starting pitcher and Raftery got the win in relief.

Last Friday Cooper Jordan's last inning home run gave North and Clifford a 3-2 win over Weymouth South. Clifford pitched a three-hitter.

Quincy was bombed by league-leading Newton, 14-3. Carroll hit a two-run homer following Mike MacKenzie's triple in the second for a 2-0 lead but Newton exploded for six runs in the fourth and five in the fifth.

Earlier in the week North went from the sublime to the ridiculous as it surprised Newton, 3-2, behind Clifford but the following day was annihilated by Brockton, 22-6. Steve McKinnon, who has had a fine season at bat, went three for three in a losing cause.

Quincy defeated Weymouth North, 12-6, with 14 hits sparked by DeLucas's four hits, three by Paul Southerland and two by Ferris.

The Presidents also topped Rindge Tech, 7-3, with Vespaziani pitching excellent ball and also driving in three runs.

power. President John Kennedy looks forward to continued success as the average age on the team is only 21.

Quincy's touchdowns last week were scored by two 20-year olds, Billy Carroll and Paul "Whizzer" White, and by "old man" Lou Trubiano, 24, who played rugby at the U. of Rochester.

Saturday Quincy will go to Portland, Me., to play the Portland Rugby Club and hopes to avenge last year's 26-6 loss.

Quincy Rugby Club Wins 5th

The Quincy Rugby Club continued its winning ways Saturday with a 14-0 win over the Concord, N.H., Rugby Club.

The young Quincy club, in only its third year of existence, continues to surprise older established clubs and is now 5-0-1.

Co-Capt. Colin Riley, who contributed a two-point conversion to the winning cause, said the team's improvement "was just a matter of time since we've always had a group of good athletes and it was simply a matter of getting the necessary experience to compete with the older clubs. Most of our team never even saw a rugby game until two years ago."

This, coupled with the addition of several players with experience, such as Quincy's other co-captain, Larry Munson, who played for the University of Pennsylvania, have helped make the Quincy team a New England

Point Trackmen's Future Looks Bright

Point Junior High School is 1-1 in boys' track this spring and Coach Larry Keough is especially heartened by his eighth grade performers and expects his team to score well in the city-wide pentagonal meet on May 30.

Point opened with a win over Sterling but was defeated by Broad Meadows in the second meet. The Pointers will face Central next Wednesday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"We are very strong in certain areas, especially in the eighth grade," Keough said. "I feel some of our boys have a good chance of winning their events in every meet, and could be city champions."

In the win over Sterling, Point winners in the ninth grade were Kevin Zambruno in the shot put, Jim Dwyer, 100 and long jump; Randy Nord, mile and the relay team of Kevin Salverio, Jim Princiotta, Bill Johnson and Jim Dwyer.

Eighth grade winners were Peter Griffin, 100 and long jump. Bunky Harte, shot put; John Breen, half mile, and the relay team of Harte, Griffin, Billy Haines and Vin Lorenziano.

The only seventh grade winners were Steve Smith, 50-yard dash, and the relay team of Smith, John Roche, Paul Bandera and Rich Powers.

3 Quincy Youths In Home Run Hitting Contest

Three Quincy boys, all members of the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth League, will participate in a state-wide home run hitting contest to begin Saturday, May 17, at 4 p.m. at Avon High School.

This contest, "Go For The Wall" is sponsored by the Senior Babe Ruth League with similar exhibitions in the lower levels. The 12 South Shore area teams will each send a three-man team

Rounding out the squad are ninth grader Jerry DeCoste, eighth graders Dave Giglio, Gerry McDonald, Doug MacDonald and Russ DiPietro, and seventh graders Mark Gianunzio, Jeff Lawlor, John Corvi, Oriel Perreault, Russ Nord and Jim Gibbons.

St. John's Baseball Needs More Coaches

Rev. Joseph Connolly of St. John's Church has issued a city-wide plea for additional baseball coaches to work with boys in grades 7-12 in the Church's leagues.

Fr. Connolly said coaches are needed to round out the staffs of three baseball divisions. Five men are needed to complete the desired eight-coach Cadet level [seventh and eighth graders], two more are needed at the Junior level [ninth and tenth graders] and one more is needed at the Intermediate level [11th and 12th graders] to round out the staff of three.

Interested men, 18 years of age and older are urged to contact Rev. Connolly at St. John's Rectory at 773-1021.

2 Assistant Coaches Jobs Open At Quincy

At least two football assistant coaches' positions will have to be filled next fall at Quincy High.

Dave Burke has been named head coach at North Quincy and Bud Mosher notified school officials he will not return as an assistant. Both had been Quincy assistants for 11 years.

It is expected that all North Quincy assistant coaches will return to work under Burke, a former Raider standout himself.

HOLDING COURT

Don't admire your shots

By ED COLLINS
Copley News Service

You've just hit a beautiful forehand down the line. What a shot! The ball sails into the corner as you watch your astonished opponent take off in pursuit. ...

"Run, turkey!" you cry, as he scrambles for the ball. "He'll never get it without breaking his neck." You smile as he desperately lunges for the ball. ...

"Oh (expletive deleted)!" you shout. "He got it!" You take off for his weak cross court backhand and get it — on the third bounce.

You've learned your lesson: Don't stand there admiring your shots!

Even though you're surprised and happy, you must resist the urge. As soon as you play the ball, prepare for the return.

If you are exchanging hits from the baseline, make sure you move to anticipate the cross-court return as soon as you've played the ball. When at the net, follow the flight of your shot and cover the down the line return. Your footwork is just as critical after you hit the ball as before you hit it.

Bernard Reisberg Receives Coast Guard Commendation

Bernard M. Reisberg of 1399 Quincy Shore Drive, Merrymount, recently received a medal and certificate of administrative merit awarded by the First Coast Guard District of Boston.

A member of the First Coast Guard District Auxiliary for 12 years, Reisberg was cited for "his continuing devotion to duty and outstanding leadership" in his performance of duty.

Reisberg, owner of Bernie's Modern Formal Shop in Quincy and vice-president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association [QCBPA], has served as flotilla staff officer, vice-commander and commander as well as captain and vice-captain of various divisions.

BERNARD REISBERG
While captain of Division V, Reisberg upped the division's membership to the highest in the district. He then planned and guided the formation of Division XII.

Under his leadership, Division V sent Christmas gifts to the crew of the LORAN Transmitting Station at Cape Christian - a program which was continued throughout the years.

In making the presentation, Cmdr. J. P. Stewart praised Reisberg for his outstanding services in support of the Auxiliary. He said:

"Mr. Reisberg has earned the respect, praise and admiration of all who come in contact with him. His truly outstanding performance of duty over many years reflects highly upon him, the U.S. Coast Guard and the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary.

3 Memorials To Be Unveiled At Lincoln - Hancock School Dedication

School, will welcome those gathered for the dedication.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creodon will introduce the guests of the day. Mayor Walter J. Hannon will send the greetings of the city and Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin will extend the congratulations of the City Council.

Barry Coletti, architect of the school, will make a symbolic key presentation and Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue will offer a dedication prayer.

John R. Graham, executive director of Quincy Heritage, will present the official Quincy Heritage flag to a youngster.

Rev. John Tierney, pastor of St. John the Baptist Church, will close the ceremonies with a benediction.

Buffet-style refreshments, courtesy of the Quincy public schools, will then be served in the cafeteria.

The $5.2 million Community School opened in September 1973, combining both the former Hancock and Lincoln elementary schools. During the week prior to the formal dedication, "Old and New" will be the theme as school children visit the former Lincoln School at 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

A tree planting by Quincy Heritage will take place that week and the Thoreau Award given by the New England Architects and Landscaping Society will be presented to the school for its outstanding landscaping.

The Dedication Committee planning the day's ceremonies is headed by Morrie Hibbard. Other committee members are Gayle MacDonald and Susan Troy, teachers at the school; Catherine Roeder, media specialist; Linda MacIsaac, administrative assistant at Quincy Heritage; and Mrs. Robert Dullning, Mrs. Normand Goyette Jr., Mrs. Harry Johnson, Mrs. James Tuffo and Mrs. Joseph Zacheo, parents of Lincoln-Hancock students.

Quincy Delegation Opposes S. Quincy MBTA Station

By RON IACOBUCCI
STATE HOUSE -- The Massachusetts House approved 189-33 a bill that would prohibit the construction of a South

Quincy MBTA rapid transit station in action last week.

The Quincy legislative delegation voted in favor of the measure. The bill was ordered to a third reading in the House. This week, the South Quincy MBTA bill was engrossed in the House and is now awaiting action in the Senate.

The House voted to defeat 126-93 a bill that would regulate certain firearms and ammunition, specifically the controversial dum dum bullets. The bill received an adverse report from the committee on public safety. The attempt to save the bill failed with Reps. Joseph Brett and Robert Cerasoli voting against the restrictions and Reps. Thomas Brownell and William Delahunt voting in favor.

The House killed a bill that would prohibit or restrict smoking in certain public places. The roll call vote was 119-104 against with Reps. Brownell, Cerasoli and Delahunt voting in favor and Rep. Brett against.

Strong Opposition To School Committee Expense Accounts

matter to discuss in executive session...It is a matter for public session and school committeemen should be able to say "yes" or "no" in front of people, not behind closed doors.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creodon had no comment on the matter, saying he was not at liberty to comment on issues discussed during executive session.

Sullivan, chiding Raymondi for commenting on expense accounts, accused his colleague of "poor judgement". Sullivan said:

"Mr. Raymondi acted in poor order, he used poor judgement, in discussing publicly anything raised in executive session." "There was no motion," Sullivan continued. "No formalities. And this was all done in executive session."

Verifying the fact he "was thinking about a proposal," Sullivan said the intent of a monthly expense account was "to implement Rule 114 of the School Committee guidelines."

Rule 114 states a school committeeman can be reimbursed from school funds for all expenses incurred while performing duties as a school committeeman provided he submits an itemized statement of his expenses for approval. Sullivan said:

"Instead of making weekly or monthly statements, there could be a set figure to take care of incidental expenditures that a school committeeman might incur."

Sullivan said he felt such an expense account should cover ticket costs to social functions, tuxedo rentals, travel to and from meetings and such expenditures incurred solely because of one's membership on the school committee.

He said he felt school committeemen are "entitled to an expense arrangement of $300 per year," but emphasized he had not formulated a proposal to present at Wednesday's school committee meeting.

"I am thinking about a proposal," he said. "I am certainly in favor of school committee expenses."

Sullivan noted the City Council and other city departments have expense accounts for their members including car allowances.

"School committeemen do not have that," he said.

Specifying what the expense account would cover, Sullivan said:

"Everyone subscribes to neighborhood charities and civic projects, to the Boy Scouts and to Little League. I'm not talking about those situations. But I find myself being subject to - and I don't quarrel with this - but I find myself being requested to purchase tickets for dances, banquets, ads in ad books - things I would not be asked to purchase if I were not a public official."

Sullivan said a proposal to grant each school committeeman a yearly expense account of $300 would total $1,800 and would not constitute a "tax liability" for Quincy citizens. He said he would take a "wait-and-see attitude" before making any formal proposal to the school committee, testing the economic "climate" of the city.

"This is tax time. This is cherry sheet time," Sullivan said. "I want to wait and see what the impact is on the overall tax rate. We don't know what the climate is yet."

But he said Raymondi planned to "bring the matter to a head" at Wednesday's meeting. He indicated he would force a vote, if need be, by moving to grant the expense account and then voting against the measure.

"I want to air this matter once and for all," he said.

Though School Committee Chairman Charles Sweeney had no comment on any expense account suggestion, other school committeemen voiced opposition to any such account.

Harold Davis, candidate for councillor-at-large, called Sullivan's suggestion "well-intentioned...but inappropriate, particularly at this time with continued high inflation unemployment and high property taxes." Davis continued:

"When many employees in local and state government have been asked to forgo pay increases, I cannot support a measure which flies in the face of these people...We are dealing with elected officials who voluntarily sought the office knowing there would be no regular compensation."

School Committeeman Frank Anselmo called service on the school committee "a labor of love," and said:

"I have gone 12 years without getting a single dime and I'd just as soon finish out my term without receiving any compensation."

He said he wished a similar philosophy would pervade the City Council.

"We could save thousands of dollars if our City Council would adopt that philosophy. They are working men. Some hold two or three jobs. It's too bad some politicians become greedy for the almighty dollar."

School Committeeman Francis McCauley registered himself as opposed to an expense account for school committeemen and said he would not vote for such a proposal. He did note, however, that school committee members are called upon "from time to time" to buy tickets for banquets and buy ads for ad books. He noted, too, the city council has a monthly expense account of $135 while school committeemen do not. He added:

"I knew when I was elected to the school committee there was no salary, there was no expense account. I have no desire to change that at the present time."

Historical Society Launches $150,000 Fund Raising Drive

A $150,000 fund-raising campaign is underway by the Quincy Historical Society to complete renovations and put into operation its museum and library at the Adams Academy.

Announcement was made Wednesday by H. Hobart Holly, Quincy Historical Society president.

Charles G. Peterson, vice-president of the South Shore National Bank, has been named general chairman. Charles Francis Adams, direct descendant of President John and John Quincy Adams, is honorary chairman.

The drive will culminate a 20-year effort by the Quincy Historical Society to establish a museum and library.

An open house will be held at the Adams Academy Sunday, June 1 from 3 to 6 p.m. with brief ceremonies at 4 p.m.

Guests and visitors will have the opportunity at that time to tour the facility and to see the progress made in the renovation project.

"The library and museum will be a handsome showcase for the many mementos of Quincy's tremendous history," said Peterson.

"Now, at long last, we will have these cherished historic articles under one roof for Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin will cast the deciding vote in a City Council deadlock whether to restore $263,225 cut from the School Department budget or risk a court suit.

School Committeeman Francis McCauley expressed fear that teachers would face "payless pay days" next April and May if salary cuts made in the School Committee budget are not restored. He chided the City Council for its action.

School Committeeman Frank Anselmo called it "a power struggle" and said the question comes down to whether the School Committee or the City Council is running the school system.

A vote on the restoration of funds will be taken at the regularly scheduled June 2 City Council meeting or at a specially-called session.

At a special meeting of the School Committee Monday, Committeeman Frank Anselmo moved the City Council reconsider and accept the original school budget or the School Committee would "follow through the proper legal channels" to get the funds back.

The motion was tabled by School Committeeman Harold Davis following a suggestion by Mayor Walter J. Hannon to allow the City Council to reconsider its cut.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon told the School Committee "we can't live with the cuts," saying $209,869 chopped from the original $20.9 million for regular school salaries represented part of binding contractual agreements made with Quincy Public School teachers. Creedon said:

City Checking Quincy Bay For Pollution

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has directed Health Commissioner, Dr. Alfred Mahoney, to take weekly water samples at the Nut Island Sewage Disposal Plant to determine if untreated sewage is being dumped into Quincy Bay.

The samples are being taken on a scheduled basis known only to the Health Department, Hannon said.

"We want to make certain that Quincy beaches will not be polluted by improper sewage disposal," he said.

Meanwhile, Rep. Thomas Brownell has requested both the office of Atty. General Francis X. Bellotti and the MDC's Division of Water Pollution Control to investigate sources of raw sewage sighted along Squantum in Quincy Bay over the weekend.

Peter Karvjian of 105 Bayside Ave., Squantum, told Brownell and The Quincy Sun that he traced raw sewage off Orchard Beach to the Nut Island

Bernard Reisberg Receives Coast Guard Commendation

Bernard M. Reisberg of 1399 Quincy Shore Drive, Merrymount, recently received a medal and certificate of administrative merit awarded by the First Coast Guard District of Boston.

A member of the First Coast Guard District Auxiliary for 12 years, Reisberg was cited for "his continuing devotion to duty and outstanding leadership" in his performance of duty.

Reisberg, owner of Bernie's Modern Formal Shop in Quincy and vice-president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA), has served as flotilla staff officer, vice-commander and commander as well as captain and vice-captain of various divisions.

BERNARD REISBERG
While captain of Division V, Reisberg upped the division's membership to the highest in the district. He then planned and guided the formation of Division XII.

Under his leadership, Division V sent Christmas gifts to the crew of the LORAN Transmitting Station at Cape Christian - a program which has continued throughout the years.

In making the presentation, Cmdr. J. P. Stewart praised Reisberg for his outstanding services in support of the Auxiliary. He said:

"Mr. Reisberg has earned the respect, praise and admiration of all who come in contact with him. His truly outstanding performance of duty over many years reflects highly upon him, the U.S. Coast Guard and the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Quincy Delegation Opposes S. Quincy MBTA Station

By RON IACOBUCCI
STATE HOUSE -- The Massachusetts House approved 189-33 a bill that would prohibit the construction of a South

Quincy MBTA rapid transit station in action last week.

The Quincy legislative delegation voted in favor of the measure. The bill was ordered to a third reading in the House. This week, the South Quincy MBTA bill was engrossed in the House and is now awaiting action in the Senate.

The House voted to defeat 126-93 a bill that would regulate certain firearms and ammunition, specifically the controversial dum dum bullets. The bill received an adverse report from the committee on public safety. The attempt to save the bill failed with Reps. Joseph Brett and Robert Cerasoli voting against the restrictions and Reps. Thomas Brownell and William Delahunt voting in favor.

The House killed a bill that would prohibit or restrict smoking in certain public places. The roll call vote was 119-104 against with Reps. Brownell, Cerasoli and Delahunt voting in favor and Rep. Brett against.

Strong Opposition To School Committee Expense Accounts

matter to discuss in executive session... It is a matter for public session and school committeemen should be able to say "yes" or "no" in front of people, not behind closed doors.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon had no comment on the matter, saying he was not at liberty to comment on issues discussed during executive session.

Sullivan, chiding Raymond for commenting on expense accounts, accused his colleague of "poor judgement". Sullivan said:

"Mr. Raymond acted in poor order, he used poor judgement, in discussing publicly anything raised in executive session."

"There was no motion," Sullivan continued. "No formalities. And this was all done in executive session."

Verifying the fact he "was thinking about a proposal," Sullivan said the intent of a monthly expense account was "to implement Rule 114 of the School Committee guidelines."

Rule 114 states a school committeeman can be reimbursed from school funds for all expenses incurred while performing duties as a school committeeman provided he submits an itemized statement of his expenses for approval. Sullivan said:

"Instead of making weekly or monthly statements, there could be a set figure to take care of incidental expenditures that a school committeeman might incur."

Sullivan said he felt such an expense account should cover ticket costs to social functions, tuxedo rentals, travel to and from meetings and such expenditures incurred solely because of one's membership on the school committee.

He said he felt school committeemen are "entitled to an expense arrangement of $300 per year," but emphasized he had not formulated a proposal to present at Wednesday's school committee meeting.

"I am thinking about a proposal," he said. "I am certainly in favor of school committee expenses."

Sullivan noted the City Council and other city departments have expense accounts for their members including car allowances.

"School committeemen do not have that," he said.

Specifying what the expense account would cover, Sullivan said:

"Everyone subscribes to neighborhood charities and civic projects, to the Boy Scouts and to Little League. I'm not talking about those situations. But I find myself being subject to - and I don't quarrel with this - but I find myself being requested to purchase tickets for dances, banquets, ads in ad books - things I would not be asked to purchase if I were not a public official."

Sullivan said a proposal to grant each school committeeman a yearly expense account of $300 would total $1,800 and would not constitute a "tax liability" for Quincy citizens. He said he would take a "wait-and-see attitude" before making any formal proposal to the school committee, testing the economic "climate" of the city.

"This is tax time. This is cherry sheet time," Sullivan said. "I want to wait and see what the impact is on the overall tax rate. We don't know what the climate is yet."

But he said Raymond planned to "bring the matter to a head" at Wednesday's meeting. He indicated he would force a vote, if need be, by moving to grant the expense account and then voting against the measure.

"I want to air this matter once and for all," he said.

Though School Committee Chairman Charles Sweeney had no comment on any expense account suggestion, other school committeemen voiced opposition to any such account.

Harold Davis, candidate for councillor-at-large, called Sullivan's suggestion "well-intentioned...but inappropriate, particularly at this time with continued high inflation unemployment and high property taxes." Davis continued:

"When many employees in local and state government have been asked to forgo pay increases, I cannot support a measure which flies in the face of these people...We are dealing with elected officials who voluntarily sought the office knowing there would be no regular compensation."

School Committeeman Frank Anselmo called service on the school committee "a labor of love," and said:

"I have gone 12 years without getting a single dime and I'd just as soon finish my term without receiving any compensation."

He said he wished a similar philosophy would pervade the City Council.

"We could save thousands of dollars if our City Council would adopt that philosophy. They are working men, some hold two or three jobs. It's too bad some politicians become greedy for the almighty dollar."

School Committeeman Francis McCauley registered himself as opposed to an expense account for school committeemen and said he would not vote for such a proposal. He did note, however, that school committee members are called upon "from time to time" to buy tickets for banquets and buy ads for ad books. He noted, too, the city council has a monthly expense account of $135 while school committeemen do not. He added:

"I knew when I was elected to the school committee there was no salary. There was no expense account. I have no desire to change that at the present time."

Head Start Marks 10th Anniversary

Quincy Head Start, a self-development program for youngsters, celebrated its 10th anniversary last week, marking a decade of service to the Quincy community.

The program, geared towards the social and emotional development of a child, first began under the direction of the Quincy Public Schools with HEW funds awarded to Quincy Community Action, Inc.

Now under the direction of Charlotte Jolle, Head Start offers a 32-week year-round program which is free to children who will be four years old by Dec. 31 and whose family falls within certain economic guidelines. The program operates four days each week, four hours per day.

During its first five years of operation, Head Start operated under the direction of the Quincy Public Schools, offering an eight-week summer program held in various schools throughout the city.

Head Start has offered its year-round program since September 1971. Each class is conducted by a teacher, an aide and a volunteer.

A major goal of the program is to foster self-confidence and a positive self-image in each child. Each child undergoes a complete screening process to help detect and treat any possible learning difficulties. Parents are encouraged to participate in the program by visiting class, taking field trips with the classes and attending meetings.

Mayorality Campaign Underway

Hannon Cites Leadership, Integrity In 3rd Term Bid

Mayor Walter J. Hannon officially announced Sunday he will seek a third term as Quincy's chief executive, citing "positive leadership", integrity and teamwork as key elements in his administration.

Speaking before a crowd estimated at more than 2,000 in the courtyard at State Street South in North Quincy, Hannon urged the audience to learn from "the mistakes" of cities in the state and across the country - cities whose officials have failed to provide leadership. He said:

"For once, can't we see the mistakes of some of the cities in this Commonwealth and country where those who are elected to positions of trust and responsibility fail to give leadership. They are more interested in perpetuating themselves in office than they are in making the difficult decisions which would give life to their communities."

Hannon said he promised the citizens of Quincy "to make hard decisions" when elected Mayor four years ago and told the audience he was proud of the administration's accomplishments.

"We have economy in government," he said. "We have attacked waste and inefficiency. We have placed people in positions of authority and responsibility because of their ability, not because of their political affiliation. As a result, we have integrity in Quincy city government. All of this spells positive leadership."

Referring to the modern State Street South complex, Hannon said the building symbolized "what Quincy can become in the years ahead." He said he was proud to be part of the team having "the political guts" to withstand "all the criticism that came from those who worked to thwart the advancement of our city."

Hannon warned that cities, including Quincy, must be cared for, like people, and must be kept "healthy and vibrant" through proper leadership.

"Quincy is no different," Hannon said. "Without leadership, without people willing to make the sacrifices that are needed to direct the city in these crucial times, only you will suffer."

Citing "positive steps" taken in the areas of neighborhood improvements and education, Hannon said the tasks of city government are never finished.

"We can never rest on what we've done," he said. "Leadership means constantly being concerned about the future of Quincy. There is still much to do if Quincy is going to be kept a strong, financially sound, liveable community."

Hannon commended supporters and other city officials who worked with him throughout his years as mayor. He said:

"A group of men and women as dedicated as myself...are here with me today. I want you to know who they are. I want you to be as proud of them as I am. You owe them much. I owe them everything."

Predicting a win in November with the "support and effort" of those gathered at State Street South, Hannon then introduced members of the City Council, department heads and other city officials.

Davis Voter Survey

School Committeeman Harold Davis, candidate for Quincy city councillor at large, is now conducting a voter survey to determine the concerns of Quincy residents.

A written survey form prepared by Davis asks voters to rank the following issues in order of importance: unemployment, property taxes, inflation, quality of public education, crime in the city and quality of municipal services.

The survey also asks voters, "Is Quincy a good place to live." The final question asked voters, what they would do to improve life in Quincy if they were members of the City Council.

Davis said the survey will be complete in late summer. Individuals wishing to answer the questionnaire can contact Paul Hack of Hobomack Rd. Merrymount at 471-3582. An organization wishing to secure a large number of questionnaires for its total membership can also contact Hack, Davis said.

Already, Davis said he has received 200 questionnaire replies. One man, he said, suggested the opening of the clam flat to employ out-of-work clamdiggers in Quincy.

LaRaia Running For Mayor 'To Promote Public's Input' In Government

City Councillor Joseph J. LaRaia says his decision to seek the mayor's seat is "to promote the public's input in the decision-making powers of the city."

Speaking to neighborhood residents at the home of Robert Goslin, 4 Dums Hill Rd, LaRaia said:

"I hope to create a harmonious atmosphere with community leaders and city department administrators to promote an economy-minded government."

"My votes in the past have reflected concern for the taxpayer," LaRaia said, citing his support for an addition to North Quincy High School rather than a new school.

LaRaia also pointed out his opposition to the City Council's passage of a $2 million neighborhood improvement bond issue. "The city will probably be receiving $2 million from the federal government for the same project in the next two years," he said.

Citing Quincy's failure to join the towns of Weymouth and Brookline in the assessment suit against Norfolk County, LaRaia said "the city was asleep at the switch."

"I, like other councillors, suggested that we join in the suit," LaRaia said, "but we didn't and now the city is out some $600,000."

"The city has exhausted its revenue resources," LaRaia said, "and it's having difficulty establishing a reasonable tax rate."

Councillor LaRaia also told his audience of his "extensive administrative background both in private industry and with the public." And in addition to his own experience, he said he plans to surround himself with skilled administrators once he takes office.

Mayorality candidate Joseph J. LaRaia Saturday officially opened his "Tell-it-to-Joe" headquarters at 867 Hancock St., opposite Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Campaign workers joined LaRaia and his wife, Louise, in the ribbon-cutting ceremonies. The headquarters opening also means the opening of the "Tell-it-to-Joe" telephone lines which offers Quincy residents direct contact to the campaign for questions and comments.

The telephone numbers are 471-0011 and 471-0932.

OUR CHILDREN

Some parents fret over looks

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM
Copley News Service

Don't you like what your child looks like? Strange as it may seem to some of you, a lot of parents are apparently dissatisfied with their children's appearances. A number of letters recently received appear to be based on wishful thinking for a young Shirley Temple, Elizabeth Taylor or Freddie Bartholomew in the family, depending on parental movie memories and tastes. Here are some of them.

Q. Our son is a compulsive eater, and his weight shows it. I'm embarrassed to tell you how much he weighs. I'm tempted to put a lock on the refrigerator or wire his mouth shut as I recently read in the papers. Do you think either of those is a good solution?

A. Most of us are amateurs on the topic of weight-and-diet, so I think your first step ought to be your pediatrician or family doctor. He or she knows your youngster and would therefore be in a position to recommend whether or how to control your boy's eating habits.

Q. Height may be fine for boys, but for a little girl who is taller than all the other girls it can be sheer misery. Our little girl is only 8, and she's very upset because she's the tallest child in her class. Yes, she's taller than the boys too.

I don't want this to give her a complex, so your suggestions would be welcome. A. It probably won't be long before some of the boys pass her up. Maybe one or two of the girls also will. In the meantime you might enroll her in a ballet or dancing school where they take pride in grace and bodily form. She will perhaps learn that height can be an asset that will give her additional charm.

Q. My husband's nose is very prominent, and so is our 3-year-old son's. It is already easy to see that he will have a large one when he grows up. Although my husband's nose really doesn't bother me (and everybody else also seems to take it in stride), I wish our little boy had one more like mine which is small and slightly turned up.

There isn't much you can tell me, I imagine, but it's a little relief to get this concern off my chest.

A. You really have three choices: Stew over it and make all of you miserable; forget it and think more about other factors related to your son; or have it trimmed down later on.

The first two choices may be relatively easy to handle. The third really requires a lot of thought and consultation with surgical experts in this field.

BACKYARD ELECTRICAL SAFETY

Using electricity outdoors to operate garden tools, lights and appliances has become an accepted part of outdoor leisure living. But accidents do happen. They are most frequently caused by equipment or wiring that is faulty or improperly grounded for outdoor use. Here are a few suggestions:

- Use only cords, plugs, and equipment that have the Underwriters' Laboratories [UL] label and are recommended for "outdoor use". When necessary have a qualified electrician install permanent weatherproof [waterproof] outlets that can accommodate three-prong plugs. Never use indoor cords or lamps outdoors.
- Use adapters in any present two-hole outdoor outlets so that they will accommodate three-pronged plugs. Never cut off the third prong of a plug to make it fit a two-hole outlet.
- Observe special care when there is a swimming pool in the yard. In fact, safety experts urge that you use only battery-powered radios, televisions, etc. in a pool area.

What Did We Do In 1975?

When it's all over—Quincy's 350th anniversary and the nation's 200th bicentennial celebration—what will be our reply when someone asks, "What did Quincy do during that time?"

Let's see. We have had a gala birthday party and a mammoth decorated cake. We have commemorative bottles, medals and even T-shirts. Nothing wrong with any of that. It all has its place.

But what of significance are we going to leave for posterity? What can our children and their children look back on someday and say with pride, "That's what Quincy did in 1975?"

Well, there is one thing we can do that is quite appropriate for this 350th anniversary year. We can help the Quincy Historical Society finish a job that was started a couple of decades ago: completion of a museum and library.

The Historical Society has a $150,000 fund-raising drive underway this week to complete renovations and put into operation its museum and library at historic Adams Academy, on the site of John Hancock's birthplace.

It will be, as fund-raising chairman Charles G. Peterson notes, "a handsome showcase for the many mementos of Quincy's tremendous history." And, will place under one roof the cherished articles "for residents and visitors alike to view and enjoy."

And, as he further notes: "It will mean so much to our children as they study their city's and nation's history."

The museum and library are for all. An both will grow as today's happenings become tomorrow's history.

The north room will be available to groups to gather for meetings in an historical atmosphere. The south room will contain many historic exhibits. In the library, researchers will have available to them outstanding local history sources of information.

Quincy business, industry and individuals have been asked many times before to contribute to many worthy causes. And they have done so, very generously.

These, of course, are rough times for many people. The economy is still in dire need of a transfusion. Many are unemployed. But...

This is a true worthy cause. It is one opportunity for us to leave a permanent reminder to those who come after us that we completed a museum and library in 1975 in commemoration of Quincy's 350th anniversary.

Whatever you can give will help make all of this a reality. Regardless of what size contribution it may be, it is important.

And when someone asks us what we did in 1975 to commemorate this 350th anniversary year we can point with pride, to the museum and library and say, "We did that!"

Pig In A Poke

Massachusetts now is in the unhappy position where long-standing debts for wasteful extravagance in the past have returned to haunt us, and the Legislature must shoulder its full blame for this state of affairs.

Sadly, however, our lawmakers on Beacon Hill still seem unable to comprehend the extent of the Commonwealth's fiscal plight, nor their past responsibility for it and their present responsibility to correct matters. They're still playing tax games.

This was pointed up on a recent day when the House and Senate in joint session voted 229 to 41 to place a graduated income tax question on next year's ballot as a constitutional amendment. Three times since 1962 the voters have rejected this proposal by substantial margins.

Obviously, the lawmakers were offering a charade to the voters, trying to give the impression they're doing something about taxes. It was a hoax, pure and simple.

Massachusetts needs fiscal reform but, unfortunately, the Legislature thinks this can be achieved piecemeal by adding a new tax on top of old ones.

They continue to ignore the basic message that the voters want less extravagant spending, not heavier taxing, and that is the "bottom line" message that the taxpayers are most interested in.

Fr. McMahon Replies To Critic On Capital Punishment Stand

Editor, Quincy Sun:

Professor Jovanovic has answered my question about capital punishment: "Are we on the side of the criminal or on the side of the victim?" by saying that he is on the side of the victim and then proceeding to marshal arguments in behalf of the criminal. Let us consider his reasoning on the side of the criminal.

He points out that we all bear responsibility for those we educate or fail to educate. We refer him to the story that Christ tells about the rich man and the beggar Lazarus. When the rich man dies he goes to Hell for his sin of inhumanity toward Lazarus. He begs that he may return and warn his brothers so that they might avoid his fate, but he is told that they have the law and the prophets and that instruction is adequate. God does not blame the prophets. He blames the rich man and blames him enough to damn him.

Christ called twelve men to be his apostles and spent three years instructing them. One of them, Judas, betrayed Christ for thirty pieces of silver. Would the Professor blame Christ? The doctrine of the Church is that God gives every man free will and he may choose either good or evil. Both of these men chose evil.

When we speak of men acting according to their consciences, we must also bear in mind that there is a moral obligation for every man to form a right conscience. On some rather complex moral issues this may be difficult, but there is surely no intricate question involved in cold blooded murder. Can we accept the parallel between voting for or against the impeachment of a public official where there could be an honest difference of opinion and the wanton killing of a completely innocent person? The advocates of capital punishment believe in it for only one type of criminal, the one who commits first degree murder.

Professor Jovanovic seems to believe that God intends that society may never take the life of a man for any reason whatever. If we were to carry this attitude to its logical conclusion, there would never be a war permitted no matter how just the cause. The American Revolution would never have been fought; the Civil War would not have freed the blacks from slavery; and Hitler and the Nazis would have been left undisturbed in their inhuman massacre of the Jews because it would not have been right to fight World War II to stop them. Professor Jovanovic himself in his reference to a strong police force that "can repel force by force" accepts the thesis. "Protection" involves the willingness to kill in the line of duty.

I accept the Professor's argument that taking prayer out of the public schools has weakened our society. Training in daily appeal to God for help, guidance, and the strength to choose good rather than evil is vital for those who wish to be followers of Christ. Please note, however, that the repentant thief would be with Christ in Paradise. Christ did not perform a miracle and save the life of the thief. When we say that He came to save sinners we mean that He came to save their souls, not their lives.

He reminds us that His kingdom is not of this world, and He wants us to keep ever in mind that the only thing that matters for each of us is the salvation of our souls. To be sure, there will be "life eternal, for all", but the Catholic Church teaches that that eternal life may be spent in Heaven or in Hell. Man is a free agent and may choose to avail himself of the salvation which Christ won for us, or to reject it.

Finally, must we say that because man is limited, because his justice is not necessarily God's justice, that man must abandon the effort to achieve justice in this world? If we adopt such an attitude, the number of victims will grow and their cries will go unheeded.

Girls Making Sports History

Editor, Quincy Sun:

On Wednesday, April 30, 1975 I had the pleasure of witnessing sports history at Cavanaugh Field in North Quincy. There was a track meet between Atlantic Junior High 7th and 8th grades and North's 9th grade against Broadmeadows Junior High. Each grade was pitted against one another.

For the first time in Quincy school history girls were a part of this whole event. They competed against one another in track and field events right down to the throwing of the shot put.

It doesn't matter who won or lost, the fact remains all the girls did their best. Coach Jack Oliver of Atlantic Junior High and Denise Martin, coach of Broadmeadows, deserve a lot of credit for organizing these girls in order that they might show their individual talents in whatever event they try.

Also the next day after this meet good news was announced by the School Committee - the appointment of Dave Burke as the new North Quincy High football coach. Dave should add much to the sports picture in the north end of our city.

Commends HN Legion For Crafts And Models Club

Editor, Quincy Sun:

In the past few months I've had the opportunity to visit the Houghs Neck American Legion's children's models and crafts club, and have been most impressed with the program and its success.

An estimated 60 children, ages 4-16 participate in the program, being supervised and taught by a staff of adult volunteers. There are no fees involved, since the materials are donated or purchased through contributions.

Certainly, those involved are to be commended for their work in this program and the many other community activities and the post sponsors.

In 1974 the Houghs Neck American Legion Post put Quincy on the map by receiving national and state Legion awards for their community services programs. It looks like they're well on the way to repeating that feat.

McIntyre, Tobin... Real Togetherness

By HENRY BOSWORTH

They aren't exactly kids anymore but the friendship is as strong today as ever and their political lives have followed almost an identical pattern.

James McIntyre and Arthur Tobin have been as close to one another as brothers—actually closer than most brothers.

And their lives have been closely interwoven.

Both served in the same First Marine Division in Korea—McIntyre as a platoon lieutenant and Tobin a platoon sergeant.

Both are attorneys.

Both have served in the City Council and as City Council president.

Both have served in the Massachusetts House of Representatives. And both have served in the Massachusetts Senate.

McIntyre has been mayor but Tobin has not. But there are many in Quincy who think that one of these years Tobin will accomplish that career similarity too.

They have worked for one another in political campaigns. McIntyre helped get Tobin started on a political career and helped him through law school.

"Jimmy helped me more than we will ever say," Tobin remarked when he passed the bar in 1965. "And I mean he helped me more than just words of encouragement."

Their strong bond of friendship, and mutual admiration, goes back to their births.

They were born at Quincy City Hospital just three days apart. Tobin, May 22 and McIntyre May 25. Their mothers were in ward beds next to one another.

The year was 1930. Let's see, that makes them...

Time marches on and they continue to march along together.

INCIDENTALLY, if Tobin is backing either Walter Hannon or Joseph LaRaia, he's giving no public hint of it. He turned up at both the party for Hannon and the one for LaRaia at the personal invitation of each.

DOESN'T SEEM TO be much of a rush for the two vacant School Committee seats. At this writing there's only one officially announced candidate: Jan Rich, a political unknown.

Reportedly ready to get into the race is Thomas Mullaney who has come close to winning before.

But that still leaves the two seats pretty much up for grabs. Quincy unlike four years ago when something like 26 candidates scrambled.

THE DAY OUR planes sank those Cambodian ships, Mayor Hannon's office got a call from a fellow wanting to know where the air raid shelters were located. He was quite serious.

SOCIAL ITEM: The wedding of Marie Montilio and Gary Luck Sunday was one of the big social events of the year. She of course, is the daughter of noted Quincy baker and Mrs. Ernest Montilio. After the wedding at St. John's, the couple took off for their reception at King Philip, Wrentham—in a helicopter.

MILESTONE: Rep. Joseph Brett turned a spry 68 this week. And in case any political candidates are wondering, he's giving no thoughts to retirement. "I feel like I'm 39," he quips.

QUESTION OF WEEK

'What Is Personal Property Tax?'

"What is the personal property tax?" asked a caller to the Voter Information Phone of the League of Women Voters of Massachusetts recently.

He and his wife had purchased a vacation home on Cape Cod this past summer and recently received a personal property tax form to return to the town assessor.

The volunteer operator explained that the personal property tax law does not apply to household furnishings and effects at your place of domicile, but furnishings and effects at a second home are taxable in the community in which the house is located.

In addition, individuals owning snow mobiles, boats, or the like must pay a personal property tax on these items. The money collected from this tax remains in the city or town from which it is collected and does not revert to the Commonwealth.

This question is one of the many now being received by the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone. Individuals with any questions on government may call the VPhone Monday through Friday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number in the Boston area is 357-5880. Outside the Boston metropolitan area callers should dial the toll-free number 1-800-882-1649.

350th Medals Available At Banks

Quincy's 350th anniversary medals are now being made available through Quincy banks. Announces John R. Graham, Quincy Heritage director.

The medals can be seen and purchased at the Granite Cooperative Bank, and the Quincy branches of the South Shore National Bank, Quincy Savings Bank, Hancock Bank, and the Colonial Federal Savings Bank.

"We very much appreciate the interest and cooperation of the banks in helping Quincy Heritage making the medals available to the public," said Graham.

The 350th anniversary medal depicts the first Maypole in America at Merrymount and honors the granite industry and the nation's first railroad.

The medals were created by BGW Associates of North Attleboro. "These are double-struck medals of the highest quality," said Graham. They have been produced in bronze and sell for $3.50.

There is also a limited edition in sterling silver. The silver medals are individually numbered.

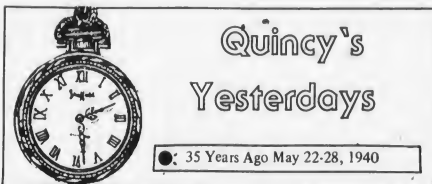

Only 500 have been produced and sell for $17.75.

"We want the medals to be collectors' items in the years to come," said Graham.

Special glass display cases are in each bank so that the public can see the medals.

Dial Phone Service Readied

New England Telephone and Telegraph announced plans for the construction of a new exchange building in Quincy Center.

Wilfred Rhodes, manager of the Quincy district said that the new building will provide dial phone service for the first time for the city's 16,000 subscribers. It was estimated that it would take up to a year to change Quincy's phones from operator service to dial service, but that in the long run the new service would be faster and more economical.

Little opposition to the dial service was expected.

ELABORATE CEREMONIES FOR OPENING OF 1840 TUBE

The 300th anniversary of the incorporation of the ancient town of Braintree was marked with elaborate ceremonies at the First Parish Church this week.

Under the direction of William Edwards, a tube sealed in 1840 was opened by Governor Leverett Saltonstall and Boston Mayor Maurice Tobin [a former "bare-footed Quincy boy"].

The tube was sealed in 1840, with instructions that it not be opened for 100 years. It was originally left in the vault in the office of City Clerk Emery Crane.

The tube contained old newspapers, sermons, etc. as well as a message, signed by the town folk of 1840.

As part of the ceremonies, a new copper tube was sealed [made by students of Quincy Trade School] to be opened in 2040. The new tube contained a message from President Franklin Roosevelt as well as a message signed by those participating in the ceremonies.

PLAYGROUND VANDALISM CITED

William Spargo, director of the city's parks and playgrounds declared that the park board was unable to keep up with the destruction and vandalism in the city's playgrounds.

Spargo noted that three $18. tennis court nets were slashed at O'Rourke and O'Neil playgrounds, while at Merrymount Park, the $9. base sacks on the baseball diamond were disappearing as fast as they were replaced.

The director warned that damaged tennis court nets would not be replaced this season.

STATE CHAIRMAN ADDRESSES G.O.P. WOMEN'S CLUB

Sirois spoke at the club's luncheon, which marked the climax of a successful membership drive in which 1,000 new women members were enrolled.

MERRYMOUNT SCHOOL ADDITION URGED

HOLLYWOOD HOTLINE

Cassidy cast as Barrymore

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

JACK CASSIDY
...cast as John Barrymore

HOLLYWOOD — Jack Cassidy has been cast as John Barrymore in "W. C. Fields and Me," a Universal movie with Arthur Hiller ("Love Story") directing. "W. C." will be Cassidy's second picture in a row for Universal, since he just finished "The Eiger Sanction" starring Clint Eastwood.

I wish I could say that I saw something good in "Tommy" other than Ann-Margret's skillful performance, but such is not the case.

As far as I was concerned, the music was monotonous and raucous; though Roger Smith tells me that at a screening in Dallas, young people interrupted the movie 18 times to applaud the songs.

The sadism was ugly and unclear; the symbolism was outrageous; and the religious implications were offensive.

In "Tommy," once again a movie maker has acted upon the probably correct assumption that Christianity is the one faith it's perfectly safe to satirize.

(Incidentally, when I say "correct," I'm thinking in terms of the here and now only — not eternity.)

Among the puzzlements in the picture was the drastic change in Tommy when he, as a child, saw his mother's lover kill his father; for he not only became blind, deaf and dumb, but his brown eyes turned pale blue, his round face became marvelously elongated, and his straight hair writhed into multitudinous curls.

To consider the positive aspect of the film, Ann-Margret once again proves that she can act, and that her performance in "Carnal Knowledge" wasn't pure luck.

At the premiere, Annie looked the total star in a sleeveless, spangled jump suit by Bob Mackie.

Young Tatum O'Neal also wore spangles, a white, spangled evening gown. In addition she wore high heels, a fur jacket and silver eye-shadow.

Somewhere under all that glamour, there's still a sweet, little girl, and daddy Ryan, who seems to have more influence over Tatum than anyone, should encourage the child within to get out.

Tatum's brother, Griffin, doesn't know how lucky he is to be growing up like a normal kid on the block.

Popular soapers to be expanded

By RICK ROBERTS
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:
Q. Are soap operas in trouble? "How to Survive a Marriage" was just canceled and I read they are going to change some of the other shows. Is that true? — J.P.,

Camden, N.J.

A. "How to Survive a Marriage" had only one real problem — it couldn't survive the ratings war in daytime television. Other soapers aren't in any immediate danger.

In fact, so popular are these daytime serials that the networks are planning to expand them to 45-minute and 60-minute shows.

"Another World" and "Days of Our Lives" have both gone to hour-long formats and, network officials say, it has been very popular.

Other shows which may go to expanded formats this next year include "Search for Tomorrow" and "As the World Turns" at CBS and "All My Children" and "General Hospital" at ABC.

QHS Drama Students To Present 'American Primitive'

The Quincy High School drama class and Quincy Heritage will present "American Primitive," a play based on the letters of John and Abigail Adams, at 8 p.m. May 30 at Quincy High School.

The opening scene of the play was written by the students themselves and demonstrates their views of the American Revolution.

During the play, slides of historic scenes will be shown to complement the dialogue, according to Kerry Mahoney, an administrative assistant with Quincy Heritage.

The William Gibson play of "American Primitive" was drawn from the letters and diaries of John and Abigail Adams. Most of the dialogue is derived directly from letters written between John and Abigail Adams while John Adams was attending the First Continental Congress in 1774.

Reservations for the May 30 performance may be made directly by calling Kerry Mahoney of Quincy Heritage at city hall. Only 150 reservations will be made.

Sophomore Dana Neitlich will play Abigail Adams while sophomore Wayne Gardiner will be John Adams in the performance directed by Quincy School English teacher Steven Weeks.

Other supporting roles will be played by students Robert Nord, Tim Perkins, Brian Smith, Donald Jones, Peter DelVecchio, Carol Bowman, Andres Magnell, Carolyn Robinson and Sharon Donahue.

A WINNER - The courtyard at State Street South, North Quincy, has been selected for a Merit Award by the American Society of Landscape Architects.

State Street Courtyard Receives Award

The courtyard at State Street South in North Quincy has been selected for a Merit Award by the American Society of Landscape Architects.

Termed by the society as an "outstanding submission", the entry was prepared jointly by the staff of SSB Realty, Inc. owners of State Street South and M. Paul Friedberg and Associates, landscape architects for the project.

The entry marks the second time that the courtyard has been recognized nationally. In June, 1974, the American Association of Nurserymen awarded State Street South a Certificate of Merit at ceremonies held in Washington, D.C. for "contributing to the quality of our nation's environment".

This year's award given for "achievements in design", will be presented in July at the Society's annual meeting to be held in Texas.

The Courtyard entry will be on public display during the meeting and will then become a part of the A.S.L.A.'s Traveling Exhibit which goes on tour throughout the world.

The Courtyard is described as being large enough to accommodate more than 1,000 people at a time. It is completely open to the sky above and features hundreds of trees, bushes and shrubs all surrounding a cascading water fountain and pool at the center. Since its opening, uses have included an employee clambake, fashion shows, and musical and theatrical performances.

When not in scheduled use, the courtyard has provided employees at State Street South with a pleasant setting for relaxing and socializing with friends during coffee and luncheon breaks during the day.

RSVP Volunteers Give 19,850 Hours Of Service

A total of 208 current RSVP volunteers [Retired Senior Volunteer Program] have devoted 19,850 hours of service to South Shore communities since the beginning of 1975.

RSVP Director Winfred Pulsifer said these 208 volunteers work in 50 agencies throughout Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Holbrook, Canton and Avon, each volunteering an average of 14.1 hours per month. Pulsifer quoted the RSVP national average of individual volunteer time at 4.3 hours per month. He said:

"This proves to me our program is giving volunteers something interesting to do. We sincerely hope more people in this city and in the entire South Shore area will avail themselves of the opportunities to help themselves into a fruitful senior existence."

Senior Aide Maria Coffin is now working with Loretta Ardini and Theresa Phelan, University of Massachusetts students, striving towards establishment of "Senior Instantaneous Referral Service", an information center which would hopefully offer toll free service and provide medical, social, financial and emergency information to senior citizens.

SIXTEEN Retired Senior Volunteer Program [RSVP] volunteers recently helped mail second half of tax bills to Quincy residents. A total of 23,000 bills were sent out. forsythia and autumn olive seedlings were donated from Granite State Deputy John Zampine of Braintree.

Richard Koch, City Director of Natural Resources, loaned rakes, shovels, and other garden tools, and helped with the planting as well. Grange members working on the project included Christine Curley, Pauline Sullivan, Evelyn Coffey, Mary Johnson, Theodore Johnson, all of Quincy; Lillian Wall and Harriet Gribben of Weymouth and Betty and Thomas Feeley of Mattapan.

According to Mrs. LoDico, the booklet listings will be updated regularly. She said some 30 businesses are now waiting to be included in the second pamphlet printing.

To verify eligibility for the discounts, senior citizens should carry with them identification cards distributed by the Council on Aging. Any eligible senior citizen who does not have an ID card can obtain one at the Council on Aging, 1120 Hancock St.

Mrs. LoDico first began working on the discount project in February, seeking the support of local merchants throughout the city. She graduated from Notre Dame Academy in Boston and received a degree in English from Mt. St. Mary's College in N.H.

"Operation Discount" will become a permanent program in Quincy, said Mrs. LoDico, striving to reach every senior citizen and to involve hundreds of Quincy businessmen.

350 Make Reservations For Seniors Ball

Reservations have been made by 350 persons for the Quincy Senior Citizens' 350th Anniversary Dinner and Ball.

The event, sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department under the direction of Mrs. Marion Andrews, Director of Senior Citizens Activities, will be held May 29 at Morrisette Legion Post Home.

Bus transportation will be provided from various locations throughout the City. The schedule will be announced. Many city and state officials will attend. A catered roast beef dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m., preceded by a social hour at 5:30 p.m. and followed by the ball from 8 p.m. until 11 p.m. Mementos of the occasion will be distributed.

The anniversary committee, as well as many of those in attendance, will be dressed in costumes of that era.

Tobin Holds Key Vote In School Budget Feud

"I don't see how we can sustain that kind of reduction without violating contractual arrangements with collective bargaining groups."

During Monday night's City Council meeting, Councillor John Quinn introduced a resolve from Hannon and the School Committee to appropriate $263,225 for the school department budget.

But Councillor Warren Powers exercised his right to object to a council order the first time it is presented, halting all discussion of the order. Powers said his objection to the order will give him and other council members time to "further review a budget dependent upon 46 per cent of the tax rate." He told The Quincy Sun:

"We can't blindly vote and rubber-stamp a budget of $26.8 million. Because of the large amount of money involved we have to be careful in our appropriations."

The $263,225 budget cut represents a one per cent slash from personal services and a one per cent cut from expenses which would reduce the anticipated tax rate by about $1.05.

Although Tobin was attending the legislative constitutional convention at the State House, during last Wednesday's special council meeting, when the vote to cut school department funds was made, he told the City Council he would vote on the matter in the event of a tie.

A head count taken at Monday's council meeting showed a 4-4 tie with Councillors John Lydon, Joseph LaRia, Clifford Marshall and John Quinn in favor of restoring the cut funds and Councillors Dennis Harrington, Warren Powers, Leo Kelly and James Sheets opposed.

Tobin told The Quincy Sun:

"I've read the order and am leaning towards cutting for tax purposes. But there are things in the budget cut that bother me. The cut in athletics, for instance. I've always been strong on sports for the kids...It provides a release for them, a way to expend their energies. And there is also the cut in personal services. I am in sympathy with the cut for tax purposes - I've been noted for fiscal responsibility - but the cuts have been made from accounts which will hurt the kids. I will weigh that heavily in making my decision."

Also discussed at Monday's Council meeting was a compromise proposal suggested by Tobin, designed to avert a court confrontation. The compromise would allow $150,000 in anticipated receipts from Quincy Junior College to offset a portion of the cut funds. The School Committee would then have to voluntarily cut the remaining $113,225 from its budget and would receive the funds back when an expected $2-3 million in refunds on last year's county taxes is received.

Tobin said, however, the compromise was "totally unacceptable" to the School Committee.

School Committeeman Francis McCauley, who made the motion requesting return of the cut funds, said there would be "pay-less pay days in April and May" if the cut in salary funds is not restored, since the City Council would be infringing upon contracts already settled with Quincy public school teachers. He said if the funds were not returned, the School Committee would be coming back to the Council for supplementary monies.

"The onus is on their shoulders," McCauley said.

Critical of the poor city councillor attendance when the school budget was discussed last Wednesday, McCauley said:

"Only four out of nine councillors showed up. There were three or four general questions and then out the door they went."

McCauley said he opposed any court action to recover the funds, saying the City Council would "make political hay out of it, saying we [the School Committee] don't want to co-operate in keeping the tax rate down."

But School Committeeman Anselmo said he favored court action to recover the funds, calling the entire situation "a power struggle" between the School Committee and City Council. He said:

"The question is: who is running the school system? The City Council or the School Committee? This must be settled once and for all."

Anselmo noted the School Committee cut nearly $700,000 from its budget before sending it to the School Committee and said it would be "bitting to the superintendent" to appear a second time before the City Council on the matter of the school department budget.

"We worked in honesty and in sincerity to produce a tight budget...The City Council has no right to infringe on the legal aspects of the School Committee."

School Committeeman Harold Davis said the City Council fails to specify where cuts should be made within the category of personal services.

"Where does the Council propose we make the cuts? Is it that we don't need three teachers at Snug Harbor, or two teachers at Merymont or one at North Quincy High School? The Council should deal in specifics, not in generalities, if they want to cut in this area."

$800 In Prizes To Be Given In Walkathon For Trees

Some $800 in prizes, including three 10-speed bikes, will be awarded to winners of the walkathon for trees to be held at 8:30 a.m. May 31 from North Quincy High School.

The goal of the walk is to raise $5,000 to plant trees in Quincy to replace those killed by Dutch Elm disease and pollution.

Instruction envelopes for the tree walkathon are now available at all of the city's public schools as well as the Quincy Heritage Visitors' Center in the Quincy Center MBTA Station.

In addition, some 250 businesses in North Quincy, Wollaston, and Quincy Center have on display the "color Quincy green" posters and donation cans. The participant merchants are members of their local business and professional associations which are sponsoring the walk with Quincy Heritage.

Prizes to be awarded to those who collect the most money for the walk include in addition to the three 10-speed bikes; three instamatic cameras; three portable AM-FM radios; four watches; and an electronic calculator.

Envelopes for the walk, along with sponsor money, must be turned in at the start of the walk at 8:30 a.m. May 31 at North Quincy High School.

The walk will proceed directly along the sidewalks of Hancock St. through North Quincy, Wollaston and Quincy Center to the parking lot of St. John's Church on School Street where prizes will be awarded by representatives of the North Quincy, Wollaston and Quincy Center business and professional associations.

Prizes will be awarded based upon how much money a walker turns in through the entry envelopes and by a special drawing from among envelopes submitted.

The walk is part of efforts by Quincy Heritage, local insurance agencies, garden clubs and business associations to raise funds to plant 500 trees.

The project commemorates the memory of Quincy-born John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States, whose personal motto was "Plant Trees for the Future". Still standing at the Adams Mansion and on the grounds of the White House are trees which John Quincy Adams personally planted.

Businesses or individuals who contribute toward the $80 cost of a tree will be specially honored at tree-planting ceremonies.

Direct donations may be made to the project by contacting or writing to Quincy Heritage at city hall.

Ward 3 City Councillor John J. Lydon Jr., is honorary chairman of the program. Atty. Alan Finer is the coordinator.

A Tribute To Deveau

Petition Drive Brings Patrolman Back To Beat

A North Quincy businessmen's petition drive has succeeded in re-locating a North Quincy foot patrolman on his area beat.

Patrolman Frank Deveau, an eight-year veteran of the North Quincy area, was transferred back to his beat Friday after spending a short time in Quincy Point.

When word of Deveau's transfer spread throughout the North Quincy business area, businessmen united in a what they called "a spontaneous effort" to get Deveau back. Several petitions circulated in the area and Joseph Marks of President Real Estate said an effort was made to touch every business in North Quincy. He said:

"After the reason for the petition was explained, there was not one hesitation to sign."

Deveau was described by area businessmen as a man devoted to his work, a man who knew North Quincy's people and problems. Andrew Walsh, owner of Walsh's Restaurant, perhaps summed up the feelings of other businessmen when he said:

"The North Quincy business community was shocked out of its shoes to learn of the transfer of Patrolman Deveau. He's a fantastic personality and law-enforcement officer...He's very close to the people here, he knows the kids and has helped out on numerous occasions with problems, taking a fatherly approach to the job, which I see as going beyond the call of duty."

Walsh emphasized the petition drive did not reflect in any way on Deveau's replacement. He said businessmen bemoaned the loss of Deveau's eight years of experience in the North Quincy area. He said:

"After working eight years in an area where he is intensely concerned with the problems and the people - well, for another man to accomplish the same thing would take, theoretically, eight years."

Ward 6 Councillor Dennis Harrington said he acted as "a conduit of the residents' concern" by requesting last week a meeting with Mayor Walter J. Hannon and Police Chief Francis X. Finn. Harrington said he told Hannon of the grassroots petition drive triggered to get Deveau back in North Quincy. A meeting was scheduled said Harrington, but he said he then learned Deveau had been transferred back to North Quincy.

Harrington nonetheless met with Hannon and Finn to discuss added police presence in North Quincy, particularly during the coming summer months.

Lt. Arthur Shea, assistant to Chief Finn, said Deveau's initial transfer out of North Quincy was merely part of "a general change in assignments." He said a total of 35 patrolmen had been transferred to other areas of the city as a result of 12 new patrolmen and an extra patrol car added to the force.

Commenting on his role in efforts to re-locate Deveau in North Quincy, Harrington said:

"The only thing that was instrumental in getting Patrolman Deveau back on his beat was the area residents' concern. My only function was a conduit of this concern. I happened to agree with them but it was their concern that spawned the petition. I am an echo of their concern."

Last week, Muriel Gomes, a teller at the North Quincy branch of the Hancock Bank, was talking of Frank Deveau.

"We miss him. We like him. He was always out there walking his beat. I wish we could get him back."

Her wish, echoing the sentiment of many others, came true.

■ Life styles change. Traditions and customs change. So does funeral service. Today, no two funerals are alike, because no two families are alike. Today a competent funeral director must provide a broader spectrum of services than ever before. It's a challenge. Funeral directors affiliated with National Selected Morticians meet this challenge with a wide selection in a broad range of prices so each family may choose what best meets its needs. As members of NSM in this area, we helped bring it about. We believe in matching the service to the need. It helps make us someone to count on, every time.

City Checking Bay For Pollution

treatment plant by boat. Karvjian said the area is polluted after each heavy rainstorm such as last week's. Brownell said that Asst. Atty. General Charles Corkin in charge of the Attorney General's Office Environmental Division told him Bellotti is "extremely interested" in the causes of Quincy Bay pollution.

The mayor's action came as a result of an Environmental Protection Agency hearing April 2, which directed the City of Boston to notify the Quincy Health Commissioner if raw sewage was being discharged at either the Nut Island or Moon Island plants.

The hearing came about as the result of efforts by Quincy City Councilors Dennis E. Harrington and Leo J. Kelly. Both Councilors have expressed concern with water pollution in Quincy Bay.

Hannon indicated that although he would like to take water samples at Moon Island, he has not ordered Dr. Mahoney to take such action as yet. "The City of Boston has just requested the EPA to set aside the order directing chlorination of untreated sewage at Moon Island," he said. "Until a decision is reached, we will be monitoring Nut Island only."

To date, Dr. Mahoney has not been notified by the City of Boston of the disposal of raw sewage at either Nut Island or Moon Island, Hannon said.

The Commissioner has said he would be surprised if such notification will ever be given. "I can't imagine that Boston would ever admit to raw sewage disposal in Quincy Bay," said Dr. Mahoney.

Both Mayor Hannon and Dr. Mahoney expressed concern with the continued disposal of raw sewage by the Town of Hull. "Hull isn't very far away," said Hannon. "And with the right winds, we have problems in the Chicatawut Beach area."

The Health Department also began regular water sampling at 13 Quincy beach sites including Avalon, Mound St., Broady St., Sandy Beach, Rhoda St., Edgewater Drive, Parkhurst St., Chickatawut, Nickerson, Orchard St., and along Wollaston Beach at Treasure Island, Sached St., and Milton Rd. The city has been taking water sample on a regular basis for two years to assure residents that the beaches are safe. Obviously, if a problem arises, we'd close a beach," said Hannon.

In discussing another aspect of pollution control in Quincy Bay, Hannon indicated that the coliform counts at the storm drain outfalls has shown a significant drop this year. The counts were taken over a three week period in April.

"We've made significant progress at the outfalls in the eight locations along Wollaston Beach," Hannon said.

In the last three years, extensive repairs have been done on the storm drain lines by the City of Quincy. Some $100,000 of repairs were conducted by the Quincy DPW under the direction of Commissioner James J. Ricciuti.

The work was done by the Sewer Department. Hannon indicated that through a special dyeing process, the Public Works Department discovered that there was infiltration of the storm drains in certain areas from the sanitary sewer system. The corrections were completed this past July.

"We feel that the drop in the coliform counts at the outfall locations is a direct result of controlling this infiltration," he said.

"We feel that the City of Quincy has taken positive action to eliminate contamination in Quincy Bay," Hannon said.

However, in reporting to the Mayor, both Commissioners Mahoney and Ricciuti expressed concern over sewage disposal procedures by the City of Boston and the Town of Hull.

"Hull has been directed by the EPA to construct a proper disposal plant but that will take time," said Ricciuti.

"The EPA has a direct responsibility to monitor water samples from both Moon Island and Nut Island," commented Commissioner Mahoney. "They initiated the order requiring Boston to notify me of raw sewage disposal, but they are the ones who should make sure Boston complies."

The issue of water contamination will be discussed at a public meeting at the Lincoln-Hancock School at 7:30 p.m. May 29. The program will be conducted by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Metropolitan District Commission.

Calls Statement 'Unfortunate'

Sheets Hits Salvucci On S. Quincy MBTA 'Political' Charge

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

A state official's recent statement labeling local opposition to a South Quincy MBTA station as "political" has drawn harsh criticism from a Quincy city councillor.

Responding to comments made by State Transportation Secretary Fred Salvucci, Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets said:

"If it is political to want to protect the people from increased flooding and all the hardship that goes with it, I guess I'm political."

Last week Salvucci was quoted as saying "local opposition to the South Quincy station was totally immersed in local politics" and recommended the Joint Regional Transportation Committee endorse plans for a South Quincy Station and expressway ramps.

Responding to local fear of increased flooding in the South Quincy area, Salvucci noted the MBTA is committed to spend $1 million to deal with the flooding problems there.

But Sheets said any drainage work done in and around a South Quincy MBTA station "would only increase the velocity with which the water would reach the small pipes and conduits downstream on Town Brook, backing up and flooding all along the way."

Calling Salvucci's statement

"unfortunate...uncalled for and unclear," Sheets said he questioned the secretary's right or the Transportation Committee's right to assess the motives of any elected official in the city. Sheets said:

"I'm not certain what he [Salvucci] meant by 'political'. If trying to protect the environment of South Quincy from additional automobile exhaust pollution is political; if trying to maintain the community character of a residential area is political; if trying to prevent traffic congestion on local streets is political, then I guess I'm political."

He continued:

"If however, by 'political' he means I oppose the new MBTA Station simply to appease a few citizens and that opposition is just public then this statement is unfortunate. It cuts at the integrity of my commitment to the people and only the people have a right to make such a judgement."

Sheets said he believes the South Quincy area could be "zoned down" to control development as Salvucci says the Hannon administration has promised. But he added:

"Based on my experience, I don't believe the integrity of that new zoning can be protected in the future."

Red, White, Blue Flowers To Decorate City

Thirty-five red, white and blue flowerbeds will brighten Quincy by week's end in preparation for Memorial Day week-end.

The traditional planting of the flowerbeds will be conducted under the direction of Richard Koch, City commissioner of natural resources; John Koegler, director of forestry; and Franklin McLaughlin, foreman of the forestry section of the Park and Recreation Department.

This year the red salvias, white petunias and blue ageratum were grown and nurtured by students at Norfolk County Agricultural School in Walpole. Quincy's Forestry Section furnished seeds and pots for the initial planting.

Today [Thursday] Gerald Peters, head of the plant science department at the agricultural school, will supervise a student planting of the red, white and blue flowers at Fore River Circle.

In addition, seven different flowerbeds will be planted on Elm Ave., Wollaston under the supervision of William J. V. Babcock, professor of biology at Eastern Nazarene College. He and his students grew a variety of flowers in the college greenhouse and will plant them along Elm Ave. by the end of the week.

Prof. Babcock has asked residents living near the flowerbeds to water the plants in case of any extensive dry spell.

Commissioner Koch also requested city residents to "treat the flowers as their own," watering them during any dry spells throughout the summer.

Comettes Down Underdogs, Bantam A's Top Executives

The Quincy Comettes, the all-star team from the Quincy Youth Hockey Association Girls' Division, edged the Underdog A.C. (parents and coaches), 7-6, and the Bantam A team topped the Creaky Executives, 6-4, in an exciting "fun" doubleheader last week at the Youth Arena.

In the Comettes' game Mary Ellen Riordan put the Comettes in front early with an unassisted goal. The Underdogs' George Colonisso came right back and scored with Jim Deitsch assisting.

Then Shawn O'Leary scored unassisted for the Comettes and Eileen Marr made it 3-1 with O'Leary having an assist. Frank McAuliffe got the Underdogs in range again, assisted by Jim Connolly and Jack Powers.

Goalies Regina Hussey and

Ed Cotter made a brilliant save [together] on a penalty shot and that seemed to pick up the Underdogs' spirit. But the Comettes continued to roll in the second period as Maureen Santry scored with Terry Flynn assisting, and Terry's sister, Kathy, scored unassisted, making it 5-2, Comettes.

The Underdogs kept fighting and went ahead on four goals by Bill Lewis, Connolly, McAuliffe and Deitsch with assists for Dave Tolve, Paul Hussey and Paul Flynn.

The girls came roaring back in the final period with Riordan scoring the tying goal unassisted and Doreen Hayes scoring the winner with Terry Flynn having an assist.

In the Bantam A-Creaky Executives game Brian Bertoni put the A's ahead with an unassisted goal in the opening period.

The Executives tied it early in the second period with Kenny Halloran scoring and Paul Hussey assisting. Bob Hayes put the Execs ahead, assisted by Marty Tolson and Jack Powers. But the A's tied it up with a goal by Mark Giordani assisted by Bertoni.

In the third period Jim Fitzpatrick scored twice for the A's with Bertoni assisting on each. The Execs tied it again on goals by Gary DeCoste and Halloran with two assists for Hussey and one each for Halloran and DeCoste.

The A's Bertoni scored the winner assisted by Fitzpatrick and Giordani added the insurance goal with two minutes left.

North Seeks 13th In Finale With Quincy

The North Quincy track team finishes its regular season today [Thursday] against Quincy at Veterans Memorial Stadium with the Raiders hoping to wind up with another outstanding record of 12-3.

Lou Tozzi's North team, which has been surging since he took over the reins, last spring had an 11-4 record and last winter was 9-3-1, winnings its last eight meets. Going into today's finale the Raiders were 13-1 overall and 5-3 in its first Suburban League season.

Tom Hall's Quincy team, which got off to a fast start but has had its ups and downs of late, had a 3-4 league mark going into the North meet.

Last Tuesday both North and Quincy took part in the all-league meet at Brockton. Saturday and Monday they will compete in the state class meet trials at White Stadium leading up to the class championships on May 31 at White. The all-state meet will be run on June 7 at Andover and the New England meet June 14, also at Andover.

Last week North, using only sophomores and juniors, romped over Cambridge Latin, 92-52, in a league meet as it won 13 of the 17 events and had two double winners.

Dave Lorman won the discus and low hurdles and Brian Doherty the long jump and 220.

Other Raider winners were Matty Constantino, 100; Phil Maloney, 880; Bob Levenson, mile; Ken O'Brien, two-mile; Matt King, high hurdles; Rich Mahoney, high jump; Steve Bonoli, pole vault; Mike Nee, javelin, and the 440 relay team of Dick Kennedy, King, Steve Doherty and Phil Strungis. North swept the two-mile and pole vault. Earlier in the week the Raiders ran away from Boston Tech and Boston Latin in a non-league tri-meet. North rolled up 101 points to only 38 for Tech and 26 for Latin.

With restrictions lifted on the number of events an athlete could compete in, Brian and Paul Doherty each won four events, showing their versatility.

Brian won the javelin, long jump, 100 and ran on the 440 relay team, while Paul won the shot put and 220 and anchored both the 440 and mile relay teams.

Other Raider winners were Mahoney, high jump; Mark Canavan, 880; Bart Petracca, mile; Artie Barrett, two-mile, the 440 relay team of Constantino, King, Brian and Paul Doherty, and the mile relay team of John Mackey, Canavan, Jerry MacKenzie and Paul Doherty.

New 12-year Old Babe Ruth League

For the past 43 years the Quincy Junior Baseball Leagues have fielded 43 teams in five leagues whereby 648 Quincy boys are playing good organized, competitive baseball.

To celebrate the city's 25th anniversary of Junior League baseball, a new 13-year old Babe Ruth League has been formed with five teams of 15 boys each. The league was organized and developed under the direction of John L. McDonnell, president.

The teams and managers are Bruins, Joseph Wilkinson; Celtics, William E. Roberts; Lobsters, George Roberts; Patriots, John Duffey and Red Sox, Robert Hogan.

The league will open Saturday at 10 a.m. at which time the Bruins will play the Celtics at Adams Field and the Patriots will meet the Lobsters at Merrymount Park. Games will be played at these two fields every Saturday and Sunday morning at 10 with the season ending July 6.

By establishing this league, it is believed the quality of play in the 13-15 year old Babe Ruth League bracket will be improved 100 percent within a few years.

The league was formed on a trial basis and league officials hope the public will get behind the movement and support the games.

Quincy Girls Tennis Team Looks To Future

This was a long, hard season for the Quincy girls' tennis team but Wayne Hamilton, who took over as coach this spring, had a very young team with a minimum of experience and he hopes the experience gained this year will benefit the First Ladies next season.

Last week Quincy continued to find the going rough as it was blanketed by rival North Quincy, 5-0, in a Suburban League match.

Hamilton received a rough break at the onset when Sally Rickson, the First Ladies' top player and one of the outstanding young players in New England, did not report.

"The girls were very enthusiastic and willing to practice hard but it is a young, inexperienced team," Hamilton said. "We had to play most of our matches with players missing, which made it all the more difficult. The girls improved greatly in the last few matches and gave the opposition plenty of trouble."

Hamilton has five seniors, including an exchange student from Belgium with no experience, only two juniors and seven promising sophomores.

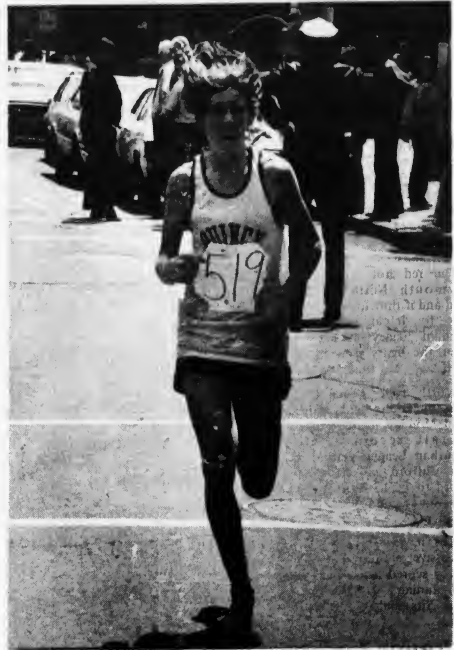

The top singles players are Senior Diane Erwin, one of four returnees from last year; and two sophomores, Enid Braverman and Barbara Moore. Enid has played with the Quincy Tennis Club and with the Boston Harbor Marina teams, while Barbara played with Conestoga, Pa., High School.

The rest of the squad includes Seniors Linda Grant and Sybil Grassi, who played last year; Vicki Foye and Vera Smolderen, the exchange student, who have had no experience; juniors Terri Chernick, the other veteran, and Judy Guest, no experience; and sophomores Randa Broughton, Ellen Coleman and Lydia LaFeria, no experience; Annette Ferner and Philomena Hastings, who played in last year's Quincy Tennis Tournament.

Hamilton singled out Braverman as the most consistent player and Ferner as the most improved.

BOB THORNE, Quincy High's outstanding cross country and distance runner, crosses the finish line in third place in the 15-18 boys category in recent Boston Junior Marathon. John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. hosted the fourth annual event.

First Ladies Veto Raiderettes

Barbara Webster's Quincy High girls' softball team last week evened its record at 5-5 with its second win over North Quincy, 6-3.

Lois Malvesti was the winning pitcher and also hit a long home run. Patty Scorza showed speed on the bases and scored two runs. The First Ladies erupted for five runs in the opening inning.

In a wild junior varsity game Quincy rolled, 27-12. Rosie Maloney was the winning pitcher and Valerie King and Terry Greenleaf hit home runs. Every First Lady scored at least once and again the first inning was the big one. Ginny Weeks caught a fine game.

In their previous game the First Ladies' varsity outslugged Brookline, 14-10.

Miss Malvesti was the winning pitcher and Rosemary Pestilli had a good game behind the plate. Tricia Kussman scored five runs and Cindy Tozzi scored three.

2 Quincy Girls Win Special Olympic Swimming Medals

Two Quincy girls, students at St. Coletta's Day School, Braintree, captured top prizes in the swimming competition of the State Finals of the Massachusetts Special Olympics held recently at Springfield College.

Elizabeth Leonort led all swimmers winning three gold medals, and Kadee Daley finished with two silver and a gold medal.

The swim team, under Coach Dick Crisafulli, won 12 gold, 16 silver and 6 bronze medals in all. The National Finals will be held in August at Michigan State University.

Raiders Eye Tourney Berth, Presidents Drop Pair

The North Quincy High baseball team, riding the crest of a five-game winning streak and winning six of its last seven games, Wednesday sought its first berth in the state tournament since Coach Charlie Bunker took over six years ago.

The red hot Raiders faced Weymouth North at Adams Field and if they lost they would have to defend league-leading Waltham Friday at 7:15 p.m. under the lights at Waltham to qualify.

North rolled over Quincy, 11-3, under the lights at Adams Field Monday night to make its overall record 13-5 and Suburban League mark 11-5 as Tim Clifford ran his pitching record to 7-2 (5-2 in the league) with his second win over the Presidents.

North missed its fourth successive shutout win when Quincy scored three times in the sixth inning. Clifford gave up seven hits and didn't walk a batter.

A five-run surge in the third inning clinched things for the Raiders and made it easy for Clifford. Jack Rable had three hits, Steve McKinnon, leading the Suburban League with a .500 batting average, had two as did Dennis McGuire and sophomore Bob Stack. John Lawlor and Frank Micelli had one apiece. North did some excellent bunting to help its cause.

"Clifford and McKinnon have to be the two finest players I've had at North Quincy," said Bunker, who hoped to finally make the tournament after barely missing the last three years.

Preston Carroll turned in another outstanding game for Quincy with three hits, two stolen bases and several more excellent catches in center field. Neil Dwyer had two hits and Dave Raftery and Paul Ferris one each. Mark DeLuca, the league's number two batter with a .460 average, was held hitless by Clifford.

Bunker recently moved Stack and pitcher Pete Fallon up from the junior varsity and the moves paid off as Fallon pitched two straight shutouts last week and Stack excelled at shortstop.

Saturday Fallon blanked Brookline, 8-0, all three Brookline hits being of the infield variety, struck out seven and for the second game in a row didn't walk a batter. Micelli led the attack with a double and single and four runs batted in.

Last Thursday Clifford blanked Cambridge Latin 3-0, on three hits and earlier in the week Fallon made his varsity bow with a five-hit 2-0 shutout win over Rindge Tech.

Quincy, which has found the going rough with its junior lineup (Carroll is the only senior playing), was held to one hit and bowed to Waltham, 10-0, last Friday night and earlier in the week dropped a 6-2 decision to Brockton. Bud Mosher's young Presidents are 8-10 overall and 7-9 in the Suburban League.

Burgin Belts Kiwanis, Colonial, Remick's Win

In the Quincy Junior Baseball League Burgin-Platner walloped Kiwanis, 12-4. Michael Monahan was the winning pitcher with 12 strikeouts. Kevin Walsh hit a three-run homer.

Colonial Federal nipped Elks Club, 4-3, as Bob McCormack struck out 11 to earn the win. Ed Carroll and Danny Mullaney drove in two runs in the first inning. After a third inning home run by Billy Mullaney, Mark Millane singled in the winning run in the fifth. Elks rallied for two runs in the fourth on Paul Reinhardt's second double of the game. The Elks scored a run in the fifth but McCormack halted them before they could score the tying run.

Colonial Federal also topped Burgin-Platner, 4-2, with Billy

DiCarli the winning pitcher. Colonial spotted Burgin two first inning runs, then DiCarli settled down to pitch one-hit ball the rest of the way. Millane had three hits for the winners but the winning run scored on a solid single by nine-year old Tom Traverse in the fourth. DiCarli got stronger near the end and retired the final seven batters in a row.

Remick's edged Keohane's, 8-7. Remick's jumped off to a four-run lead in the first. John Todd drove in two with a double and Mike Sullivan the other two with a bases loaded single.

With Remick's leading, 5-0, Keohane's scored three runs in the fourth, the big hit being a double by Bud Mullen clearing the bases. Keohane's tied it in the fifth with two runs as Mike Stranger relieving Jim Ferrera on the mound.

In the top of the sixth Todd and Glenn Segalla singled home three runs and Stranger stopped Keohan's after it had rallied for two runs in the bottom of the inning.

Remick's blanked Kiwanis, 10-0, with Todd pitching three-hit ball. Remick's jumped off to a 2-0 lead early on a two-run double by Segalla. The winners continued to score with John Barrett driving in a run with a triple, Scott Lowell doubling and Ferrera and Todd singling. For Kiwanis Jamie Walsh, Sean Martin and Mike Avitable had the hits and John Coleman kept the score from mounting even higher with sparkin defensive plays.

Raiders Eye Tourney Berth, Presidents Drop Pair

The North Quincy High baseball team, riding the crest of a five-game winning streak and winning six of its last seven games, Wednesday sought its first berth in the state tournament since Coach Charlie Bunker took over six years ago.

The red hot Raiders faced Weymouth North at Adams Field and if they lost they would have to defeat league-leading Waltham Friday at 7:15 p.m. under the lights at Waltham to qualify.

North rolled over Quincy, 11-3, under the lights at Adams Field Monday night to make its overall record 13-5 and Suburban League mark 11-5 as Tim Clifford ran his pitching record to 7-2 [5-2 in the league] with his second win over the Presidents.

North missed its fourth successive shutout win when Quincy scored three times in the sixth inning. Clifford gave up seven hits and didn't walk a batter.

A five-run surge in the third inning clinched things for the Raiders and made it easy for Clifford. Jack Rable had three hits, Steve McKinnon, leading the Suburban League with a .500 batting average, had two as did Dennis McGuire and sophomore Bob Stack. John Lawlor and Frank Micelli had one apiece. North did some excellent bunting to help its cause.

"Clifford and McKinnon have to be the two finest players I've had at North Quincy," said Bunker, who hoped to finally make the tournament after barely missing the last three years.

Preston Carroll turned in another outstanding game for Quincy with three hits, two stolen bases and several more excellent catches in center field. Neil Dwyer had two hits and Dave Raftery and Paul Ferris one each. Mark DeLuca, the league's number two batter with a .460 average, was held hitless by Clifford.

Bunker recently moved Stack and pitcher Pete Fallon up from the junior varsity and the moves paid off as Fallon pitched two straight shutouts last week and Stack excelled at shortstop.

Saturday Fallon blanked Brookline, 8-0, all three Brookline hits being of the infield variety, struck out seven and for the second game in a row didn't walk a batter. Micelli led the attack with a double and single and four runs batted in.

Last Thursday Clifford blanked Cambridge Latin 3-0, on three hits and earlier in the week Fallon made his varsity bow with a five-hit 2-0 shutout win over Rindge Tech.

Quincy, which has found the going rough with its junior lineup [Carroll is the only senior playing], was held to one hit and bowed to Waltham, 10-0, last Friday night and earlier in the week dropped a 6-2 decision to Brockton. Bud Mosher's young Presidents are 8-10 overall and 7-9 in the Suburban League.

● Junior League Baseball

Burgin Belts Kiwanis, Colonial, Remick's Win

In the Quincy Junior Baseball League Burgin-Platner walloped Kiwanis, 12-4. Michael Monahan was the winning pitcher with 12 strikeouts. Kevin Walsh hit a three-run homer.

Colonial Federal nipped Elks Club, 4-3, as Bob McCormack struck out 11 to earn the win. Ed Carroll and Danny Mullaney drove in two runs in the first inning. After a third inning home run by Billy Mullaney, Mark Millane singled in the winning run in the fifth. Elks rallied for two runs in the fourth on Paul Reinhardt's second double of the game. The Elks scored a run in the fifth but McCormack halted them before they could score the tying run.

Colonial Federal also topped Burgin-Platner, 4-2, with Billy

DiCarli the winning pitcher. Colonial spotted Burgin two first inning runs, then DiCarli settled down to pitch one-hit ball the rest of the way. Millane had three hits for the winners but the winning run scored on a solid single by nine-year old Tom Traverse in the fourth. DiCarli got stronger near the end and retired the final seven batters in a row.

Remick's edged Keohane's, 8-7. Remick's jumped off to a four-run lead in the first. John Todd drove in two with a double and Mike Sullivan the other two with a bases loaded single.

With Remick's leading, 5-0, Keohane's scored three runs in the fourth, the big hit being a double by Bud Mullen clearing the bases. Keohane's tied it in the fifth with two runs as Mike Stranger relieving Jim Ferrara on the mound.

In the top of the sixth Todd and Glenn Segalla singled home three runs and Stranger stopped Keohan's after it had rallied for two runs in the bottom of the inning.

Remick's blanked Kiwanis, 10-0, with Todd pitching three-hit ball. Remick's jumped off to a 2-0 lead early on a two-run double by Segalla. The winners continued to score with John Barrett driving in a run with a triple, Scott Lowell doubling and Ferrara and Todd singling. For Kiwanis Jamie Walsh, Sean Martin and Mike Avitabile had the hits and John Coleman kept the score from mounting even higher with sparklin defensive plays.

Kelly Concerned

Officials To Discuss Move To Halt Black's Creek Dredging

Ward 1 Councillor Leo J. Kelly planned to meet Wednesday with MDC and city officials to discuss a move to halt dredging in Black's Creek.

Last week, the Quincy Conservation Commission served a cease and desist order on the Metropolitan District Commission, threatening court action if "illegal fill" was not removed from the marsh area.

The Commission has the right to serve such an order according to the Wetlands Protection Act, Chapter 131, Section 40 of the General Laws, said Clara Yeomans, the Commission's executive secretary.

Scheduled to attend Wednesday's meeting in City Council chambers were a representative of Mayor Walter J. Hannan, City Natural Resources Commissioner Richard Koch, Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti, Mrs. Yeomans and Kelly, chairman of the City Council's Public Works Committee.

Mrs. Yeomans emphasized the Commission is not opposed to the dredging of Black's Creek but is opposed to the adverse effect this operation is wielding upon the creek. She told The Quincy Sun:

"The dredging operation has released silt which has agglutinated the drainage passages that get tidal waters into the marsh. We want to restore the marsh to a healthy condition."

Kelly said planned improvements at Caddy Park hinge upon the completion of the Black's Creek dredging project. In a letter to Francis Burgin, MDC chief construction engineer, Kelly said:

"I do not want to see any unnecessary delays in the Black's Creek project which could stall this new major program.

"I do not want the residents of Quincy to have to view the unsightly conditions of abandoned fill left along Quincy Shore Drive, Southern Artery and Furnace Brook Parkway, especially during the summer months."

Kelly said the dredging operation alone costs an estimated $1 million including fill removal, flooding protection and recreational and aesthetic improvements.

Bids for the $1.3 improvement project along Quincy Shore Drive and Caddy Park will be open Friday, according to Kelly.

The cease and desist order allows the MDC to respond within 60 days of the date of the letter [May 15] by removing "all illegal fill" and restoring the marsh "to a healthy condition". The Commission said noncompliance with the order would prompt initiation of legal action against the MDC.

Kelly said he hoped Wednesday's meeting would avert the need for "any legal administrative steps which would only delay major improvements."

Quincy' three high schools will graduate a total of 1,195 students Wednesday, June 4 in combined commencement exercises to be held at Veterans' Memorial Field.

Five-hundred 10 seniors will receive diplomas from North Quincy High School, 495 from Quincy High School and 190 from Quincy Vocational Technical School.

Combined bands under the direction of Michael Cahill will perform a fanfare and procession at 6 p.m., opening the ceremonies.

David Watson will then direct the combined bands and choirs in The National Anthem.

An invocation will be offered by Rev. Bedros Baharian of Quincy Point Congregational Church with a response - "Onward, Ye People" by Sibelius - performed by the combined choirs under the direction of Maurice Carboneau.

Patricia Foley, president of the class of 1975 at Quincy High School and at Quincy Vocational Technical School, will then welcome all those attending graduation exercises.

Paul Keeley, president of the senior class at North Quincy High School, will introduce Mayor Walter J. Hannon who will extend greetings to those gathered in Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Platform guests, including School Committee members, will be introduced by Lloyd M. Creighton, principal of Quincy High School, Charles T. Sweeny, vice-chairman of the School Committee, and Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin.

Peter J. Chrisom, principal of North Quincy High School, will read a letter from The White House.

Following a prayer offered by Rev. Austin Fleming of St. Ann's Church, Wollaston, three graduates will address the audience.

Cynthia A. Gunnison of Quincy Vocational Technical School will speak on "Vocational Education", Kathleen Keating of Quincy

High School will pose a question, "A Day Or A Lifetime?" and Jane E. McGilvray of North Quincy High School will speak on "A Bicentennial Graduation."

Graduates will then be presented by School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon following a combined band musical selection under the direction of Anthony C. Ferrante.

Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue will offer benediction at the close of the ceremonies and the combined bands will march the graduates off the field with the recessional "Ployhar", directed by Michael Cahill.

To Prevent Law Suit

Tobin Will Vote To Restore Council School Budget Cut

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin will vote to restore $263,225 cut from the School Department Budget, breaking a 4-4 City Council deadlock and averting a possible court suit.

Tobin said he plans to cast the deciding vote at the Monday, June 2 council meeting. He told The Quincy Sun:

"As president of the City Council, I do not wish to have my city split and become involved in yet another law suit...My vote will bring the factions in the city together and allow the city to go on to other business."

At a special School Committee meeting last Monday, Committeeman Frank Anselmo moved the City Council reconsider and accept the original school budget or the School Committee would "follow through proper legal channels" to get the funds back.

The motion, however, was tabled by School Committeeman Harold Davis following a suggestion by Mayor Walter J. Hannon to allow the City Council to reconsider its cut.

School Committeeman Francis McCauley had predicted possible "payless pay days" next April and May if salary cuts made in the school budget were

Public Hearing

Copies Of S. Quincy MBTA Impact Available

Copies of the Environmental Impact Analysis [EIA] of the proposed regional transit-highway project in South Quincy are available for public reference.

They are at City Hall, the Thomas Crane Library and branches, the Thayer Library in Braintree, and Braintree Town Hall, MBTA General Manager Joseph C. Kelly announces.

Kelly said the EIA is a report of studies undertaken by the MBTA and the Massachusetts DPW to assess both the beneficial and detrimental environmental impacts of a 'South Quincy rapid transit station and parking facility and Rte. 3 highway improvements between Capen's Circle and the Rte.3-128 interchange in North Braintree.

The EIA, he said, is required by both the National and Massachusetts Environmental Policy Acts and is also the first step of the environmental review process for federally-aided mass transit and highway projects.

"The Authority hopes all those interested in the proposed project will review the report before the May 28 public hearing because it discusses the various transportation alternatives for the area and indicates how adverse environmental impacts, such as traffic and flooding problems, can be remedied," Kelly said.

On May 28, the MBTA and MDPW jointly are holding a public hearing at Quincy

Squaw Rock Open

To Public For Recreation

Richard Koch, Quincy's commissioner of natural resources, has announced Squantum's historic Squaw Rock is now open to the public as a passive recreation site.

The area, acquired from Boston last year, overlooks the Boston skyline and the Harbor islands.

A full-time caretaker will be assigned to the area to provide daily maintenance of the grounds, Koch said. He added, picnic tables will dot the area, adding to the enjoyment of Quincy residents.

'Dairy Festival On Wheels' At Pageant Field

Quincy's Pageant Field has been transformed into a dairy farm this week, offering educational cow-milking demonstrations, plain-fun milking contests and a look at a complete milking parlor.

Civic, fraternal, youth and service organizations, boy and girl scouts, mothers clubs, senior citizens, school children, everyone can now visit the "Dairy Festival On Wheels" through Friday.

Two 35-foot trailers are set up on Pageant Field - one resembling a dairy barn, the other, a milking parlor - through the courtesy of Milk Promotion Services, Inc. of Montpelier, Vt. This company has conducted a Boston Common Dairy Festival for the past 20 years and has agreed to come to Quincy at the request of the Quincy School Department.

Over 1,300 elementary school children will tour the "Dairy Festival On Wheels" as a complement to their health, science and social studies curricula. Miss Janet DiTullio, assistant coordinator of language arts and social studies for the Quincy Public Schools said teachers will receive film strips, booklets and other learning material prior to the children's farm visit.

Pleased at the opportunity to bring the dairy festival to Quincy, Miss DiTullio said:

"We're looking forward to it and hope the festival will be a first for the city. So many children aren't able to get into Boston to see it."

The dairy barn houses four cows - each representing a different breed - and a calf for children to pet. Feed, water and bedding for the animals are also stored in the barn. In addition to regular milking demonstrations the festival offers educational demonstrations on the dairy cow held in a corral near the barn.

A mobile milking parlor contains dispensers, wash sinks, glass collection jars and other modern sanitary equipment necessary to produce quality milk and dairy products for today's society. A glass will allow almost complete visibility into the milk room.

Master of ceremonies at the festival is Dan Hurd, 20-year veteran of the "Dairy Festival On Wheels."

The festival began Monday. Visiting hours for the rest of the week are from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

George Cross, public relations director of Milk Promotion Services, Inc., said the festival can arrange special show hours for groups as large as 350. Jack Kerrigan, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association [QCBPA], said groups can contact the QCBPA office [471-3272] to arrange scheduling for visits to the dairy barn and milking parlor.

PDQ's Vivian Forecasts

'S. Quincy MBTA Outcome Will Shape Quincy's Future'

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

The outcome of the South Quincy MBTA controversy now climaxing in the city will shape the course of Quincy's future, according to John Vivian, president of the newly-formed Progress Downtown Quincy, Inc. [PDQ].

Vivian, former executive director of the Springfield Central Business District which spearheaded economic revitalization in that city 15 years ago, predicts Quincy will face an uninviting and bleak future without the station and ramps, he said in a frank interview with The Quincy Sun, he sees:

- Stagnation and deterioration.
- Empty office and store space.
- Continued erosion of the tax base with the burden on the homeowner.
- Limited investment in the city.

● "A market potential of zero."

But with the new station, its sister ramps and roadways filtering into Quincy Center, Vivian sees a prosperous, competitive and bustling future for the City of Presidents including:

- Development of "a key site" in Quincy.
- Increased investment.
- Expanded retail and residential downtown districts.
- Broadening of the tax base.
- "An unlimited market potential."

Vivian, who is president of the Quincy Co-operative Bank, calls the South Quincy MBTA Station feud "the most depressing thing happening today." He said elected Quincy officials must concentrate on long-term development plans for Quincy.

"Quincy is a viable city with a lot of potential," he said. "But some officials are not looking beyond tomorrow or the next election... They must take a stand which might cost them votes in South Quincy. They must look towards long-range growth of the entire city."

PDQ, formed after months of discussion and consultation with Mayor Walter J. Hannon, the City Council, and other Quincy organizations, consists of 13 incorporators from banks, real estate, engineering, planning and development, and from regional and Quincy-based business organizations. This corporation of private businessmen hopes to co-ordinate specific plans for revitalization projects in Quincy Center and to raise private funds and encourage private investment in these very projects.

William E. Kelley, president of Hancock Bank; Rev. Bedros Baharian, chairman of Quincy Planning Board and president of Quincy Point Congregational Homes, Inc.; Atty. Harold H. Slate, businessman and property owner; Frank E. Remick, owner of Remick's of Quincy; William Moore, civil engineer; and Harvey MacArthur, chairman of the board of Quincy Mutual Life Insurance.

... Quincy must start acting like a city, not like a town...

Pointing to the city-owned Hancock parking area as one of the first development target sites of PDQ, Vivian said:

"We are prepared to attract developers to that site... Quincy businessmen are ready to set off on a major investment. Otherwise, we wouldn't have formed PDQ."

Vivian envisions a revitalized Hancock parking area as a site containing:

- Apartments to meet the needs of both the young and the elderly, adding a more residential hue to Quincy Center.

- Another major department store "to anchor development" and encourage the start of added specialty shops.

- Office facilities which would in turn encourage employees to shop in Quincy Center.

- A possible cultural or civic center geared towards the theatre and the arts.

- A hotel-motel facility able to accommodate traveling businessmen and salesmen.

But Vivian emphasizes any such development hinges on the building of a road network to provide direct and easy access to the now-isolated and hard-to-find Quincy Center Business District.

"We've got to have the roads," he said. "You know, I've been here in Quincy over a year now, and I still don't know how to tell people how to get here. You can't get in an out of this city!... If you can find Furnace Brook Parkway, you can get east and west in the city - maybe... This is not going to entice any major development in Quincy."

Citing day-long traffic congestion as a problem now detracting from Quincy's development potential, Vivian said such a "problem" could be turned into a plus:

"That congestion is terrible during rush hours and not much better during normal business hours. But this is a strength if we can capitalize on it, to make the area more free and easy and accessible to attract more business."

Another plus in Quincy's behalf is what Vivian calls its enormous regional "people market."

"Quincy can draw people from Boston and from all along the South Shore corridor. The regional people market is great.

People are looking for a decent place to shop."

And although Vivian admitted that mall mania has triggered competition with Quincy's retail market, he praised the "aggressive, successful and accepted businesses" dotting downtown Quincy, saying:

"I can't think of a mall around that the city can't compete with. Of course those malls do have stores like Filene's and Jordan's which could have been in Quincy if the roads had been here."

When involved in business district face-lifting in Springfield, Vivian said "ultimate development" in the area did not take place until completion of two interchanges tying Springfield directly to high-speed roadways, thus providing a convenient, unconfusing route directly into the city's central business district.

In Quincy, Vivian said the roadways are there - Rte. 128 and Rte. 3 - but they bypass the city.

"Anyone trying to get in here is horrified. The city is off by itself."

Drawing parallels between Springfield then and Quincy now, Vivian said, Springfield 15 years ago faced two major problems: creation of jobs and increasing taxes coupled with an eroding tax base and an increase in services.

"That was not unlike Quincy today," said Vivian.

To salvage downtown

Vivian said he did not necessarily envision a similar kind of development in Quincy but said "something drastic" has to happen in this city to solve its inaccessibility bind.

"If something isn't done to solidify the road situation, you're not going to see much more investment in Quincy. I can only see a continued erosion of the tax base with the burden on the homeowner... Something

'We've got to have the roads... You can't get in and out of this city... This is not going to entice any major development in Quincy.'

Springfield and to halt a steady exodus of businesses, the city performed an unheard-of feat, Vivian related. It bought a golf course and created Memorial Industrial Park on the east side of Springfield. In addition, the city built a Civic Center costing $12 million and private industry pumped some $70 million into a mall complex called Bay State West.

drastic has to take place here - like road networks - to get people in and around the city."

Vivian also pointed to an attitudinal problem hindering growth in Quincy. He said a city of Quincy's population and size should now be "a core city."

"I'm not sure Quincy recognizes its role as I see it," Vivian said. "Quincy is a city,

[Cont'd on Page 11]

... some officials are not looking beyond tomorrow or the next election. They must take a stand which might cost them votes....

Other elected officers of PDQ, in addition to Vivian, are David Leitch, vice-president of Burgin Platner & Co., vice-president; Atty Stephen Keefe Jr., clerk; and Martha Reardon, community development manager at South Shore Chamber of Commerce, treasurer.

Incorporators and directors of PDQ are:

Charles A. Pearce, president Quincy Savings Bank; Robert Blair, chairman of the board of South Shore National Bank; RIGHTS 'N' WRONGS Miniskirts stir crime?

By RIV TOBIN
Copley News Service

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

May I use your column as a vehicle to express my thoughts on the reason for the high juvenile crime rate? I was a tenth grade teacher for 20 years. As the girls' hemlines went up and the necklines went down, discipline problems increased.

I saw girls expose their thighs and breasts to lure their male peers into frightening acts. I have never had children of my own, but I wonder if parents of daughters know how their offspring flaunt their tender womanhood. Boys in my class would have had to be blind not to have become aroused. I know many of them took out their frustrations in acts of vandalism.

I do not suggest that the lax dress codes is the only reason for our soaring crime rate in high schools but I sincerely believe it is a major contributing cause. Thank you for letting me sound off. — Retired in Illinois

Dear Retired:

Your letter is food for thought. Perhaps I will hear from other teachers and parents of these young students.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

I have an old picture of a boy and girl facing each other and bowing. Underneath the picture are the words Gar Gjennom Maven. I would love to know what these words mean. Do you know if they are French? — Mrs. Gros

Dear Mrs. Gros:

They are not French but I'm putting your question in the laps of my readers for a translation. Answers may be sent to me in care of this newspaper.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

I am a recent divorcee, 60 years old. I have two married children and a 17-year-old son who is still at home. I believe I should use my maiden name as a first name but my maiden name has eight letters in it and does not go well with my married name. Would it be all right to use my given name instead? — D. S.

Dear D. S.:
To use your given name is socially incorrect. Your credit cards, bank statement, etc. should read, Mrs. Smithson Waverly (Smithson being your maiden name).

Dear Mrs. Tobin:

Is a wooden pepper grinder suitable on a formal dining table? — Karen A.

Dear Karen:

No, but they are proper on any table other than one set for formal dining. A formal setting calls for individual cellars and pepper holders, or at least one for every two persons. They are usually porcelain-lined silver or made of cut-crystal silver.

COOKING CORNER

Try doing something different with lettuce

By ELAINE SMYTH
Copley News Service

Salad eaters all over the world should be eternally grateful for that adventuresome soul who first sampled a common weed along some European or Asian roadside — found it tasty and passed the word along. For, of the several hundred varieties of lettuce known and eaten today, all reportedly originated from that common weed.

Today's problem is that, all too often, lettuce is treated too commonly. We know how well it fits into a tossed salad and that's that.

But even if you don't intend to do anything else with lettuce than toss it as a salad, at least explore some of the numerous varieties available in markets.

The next step is to do something different with lettuce. Here are some suggestions:

- TROPICAL SUNSET SALAD
2 (3 ounce) packages lemon flavor gelatin
2 cups boiling water
1 (1 pound 4 ounce) can crushed pineapple
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
2 medium-large bananas, sliced
4 teaspoons cornstarch
1 cup non-dairy whipped topping
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
Crisp lettuce

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Stir in one cup undrained pineapple, lemon juice and salt. Cool until mixture begins to thicken. Fold in bananas, and spoon into oiled 9-inch cheese-cake (spring form) pan, and chill until set. Meanwhile, combine remainder of undrained crushed pineapple with cornstarch. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and thickens; cool. When mixture is cold, fold in whipped topping, and cheese. Spoon over the set gelatin spreading in an even layer, and chill thoroughly. Loosen edges of mixture with a small spatula, and remove sides of spring form pan. Garnish with small crisp salad greens. Cut into wedges to serve. Makes eight servings.

BRAISED LETTUCE WITH BACON TOMATO SAUCE
1 medium head lettuce
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons bacon drippings
Bacon Tomato Sauce

Cut lettuce into wedges. Tie with string to keep leaves in place. Place in saucepan. Add water and bacon drippings. Cover tightly. Boil rapidly four to five minutes. Remove to serving dish. Cut strings. Serve with Bacon Tomato Sauce.

BACON TOMATO SAUCE
¼ cup finely chopped fresh onion
2 tablespoons salad oil
2 cups chopped peeled fresh tomatoes
½ cup water
¼ cup sliced fresh celery
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup cooked diced bacon

Cook onion in oil in saucepan until limp and transparent. Add tomatoes, water, celery, salt and pepper. Cook uncovered over low heat 20 to 30 minutes. Strain through a medium-fine sieve. Add bacon. Serve over braised lettuce. Makes: four to six servings; two cups sauce.

The Kitchen Almanac

To get the maximum number of slices from every pound of meat (with no crumbs), cook the meat at a low temperature. A roast crumbles only when cooked at too high a temperature.

The expert say look for a smooth, rounded, depressed "scar" at the stem end. This indicates the melon was picked at full maturity and separated easily from the stem. Avoid bruised or damaged fruit.

ARIES: (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19 — Also Aries Ascendant) — You're getting an idea a minute now and feel an urgency to put them into practice. Curb tending toward extravagant tastes — take a more practical viewpoint. Evaluate yourself realistically.

TAURUS: (Apr. 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Difficulties with an overbearing relative is a possibility. Recoup from the encounter by seeking the company of friends, and getting "away from it all" in the great outdoors. Cooperate with mate.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — Curb your temper. Don't get angry over news you hear. Make a new friend and pursue your own interests. Concentrate on career goals, and squelch antagonistic feelings toward your boss.

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — Someone new in your life can become a very important part of it in the future. Curb tendency toward self-indulgence in the "good life" such as rich food and drink. Don't talk about a new romance.

LEO: (July 23 to Aug. 22 — Also Leo Ascendant) — Career may be more important to you than romance at this time. Take care of things at work — don't procrastinate. The possibility of problems with a younger, self-centered relative is evident now.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — Romance may blossom, and someone met now may become a lasting emotional partner. Friendship can turn into love as the days go by. Work pursuits are favored and your life is fulfilling.

LIBRA: (Sept. 22 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Wind up any projects at work that are not yet completed. Your artistic ability is emphasized. Repairs may be necessary to your home. Take care of them now. Don't meddle in affairs of others.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — You seem inspired now with marvelous ideas. A piece of work completed now could bring increased income. Be kind and considerate of others in need. Resist using any sort of deception.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — You are in a romantic and artistic phase. Good time to entertain and/or redecorate your home. Children and their activities are highlighted. Don't forget to pay your bills on time.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — A breakthrough in understanding is possible. It comes from your intuitive-self. Hard work could make you resentful of not having leisure time. Guard childishly angry reactions. Curb temper.

AQUARIUS: (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Career matters are exciting. Travel is possible. Avoid quarrels over money. There are opportunities for you in large social gatherings. Maintain personal appearance. Praise comes to you.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Romantic indecisions appear to be a problem. Nagging worries about goals in career could depress you. Know that things will work out OK, and get out with people. Personal life changes are for the best.

STRICTLY PERSONAL

Some girls like collecting scalps

By PAT AND MARILYN DAVIS
Dear Pat and Marilyn:

My best friend has been dating my boyfriend behind my back. Why does she always want my friends? She has done this before and never dates anyone but a couple of times.

other guy, and I had failed a history test. So you see I had every reason to be upset. Why can't Dad understand?

Dear John: John
Stop worrying about Dad understanding. There are a couple of points that need your understanding.

Don't drive if emotions are on a rampage. Analysis of a test by Dr. Woehr, clinical psychologist, confirms the widely held theory of relationship between mood and personality and driving record. Emotions do have an effect on individual driving reactions. Keep calm — the life you save may be your own.

Dear Pat and Marilyn: This is a question that six of us cannot answer so we are asking you. If a boy won't pay attention to you is it being too forward to go up to him and begin a conversation? Also, if a boy is seeing you at school, is it wrong to call him at home to get an assignment or ask a question about some other school activity?

I think that the walking up part is fine, but phoning a guy is overdoing it. Some of the girls agree, but most of them tell me that I would have gotten along great with Queen Victoria. Who wins?

Victorian Vickie

Dear Vickie: Regardless of Women's Lib I still think boys prefer to do the phoning. Instigating a conversation at school is fine. Many people, both male and female, are glad when another can break the ice.

If a girl is approachable, the boy will call her if he's interested. Let's at least let the male think he is doing the pursuing.

Anita

Dear Anita: Some girls just like to see how many scalps they can collect. Why keep a "friend" who confiscates all your boy-friends?

Dear Pat and Marilyn: My mother drinks. I try to do everything to keep her happy — yet, I can't help. Why?

Beth

Dear Beth: The first thing to learn is that you are NOT responsible for your mother's behavior, and you did not cause the problem. Neither can you cure it.

May I make a suggestion? Attend a few Alateen meetings. You will receive pamphlets concerning alcoholism, will learn to build your own life, and be able to set some realistic goals for yourself.

You will not feel alone at Alateen. There are almost eight million alcoholics in the United States. Many have teen-age children and that is why Alateen has grown from one to several hundred groups in such a short period of time. Call AA for your local Alateen group today. They do help.

Dear Pat and Marilyn: My father is furious because I ran into the back of another car. One of my teachers had just bawled me out, my girlfriend had dated an-

DEATH AT THE CROSSING

If your two-ton car collides with a twenty-ton locomotive, it's not difficult to imagine who comes out the loser. But can you really conceive of such an accident happening? How could you get in the path of an on-rushing train with its whistle screaming and the crossing lights flashing. And in broad daylight at that?

It wouldn't make sense, would it? Yet, [hold your hat], 1,200 motorists are killed and three thousand injured annually in car-train crashes. And, by far the majority are in a position to clearly see the train bearing down on them!

In one-third of the accidents, the vehicle actually runs pell-mell into the train! Typically, it happens because a driver zooms up to the crossing so fast he can't stop, especially if the roads are icy or slick. Advice: When approaching a crossing, slow down and be prepared to stop. Don't try to race a train to the crossing. If it's a tie - you lose.

New Bells For St. Mary's

Four bells were dedicated in blessing ceremonies at St. Mary's Church, West Quincy this week.

It was noted that this was the first time such ceremonies were held in the city, since St. Mary's was the only Catholic Church in Quincy which had bells.

The bells were blessed by pastor Rev. William O'Connor. The largest of the bells was donated by Dr. Joseph Sheahan.

BURGLARY AT THOMAS CRANE LIBRARY

Burglars broke into two safes at Thomas Crane Library over the weekend. The amount stolen was only $10.

Librarian Truman Temple explained that monies from fines and other receipts were never left in the building over night.

Inspector John Avery noted that the burglars were very considerate of the premises. Instead of staining the floor with tobacco juice, they used a cup for a cuspidor.

BETHANY MAY DISCONTINUE EVENING SERVICES

Bethany Church was to decide later this week whether to discontinue its Sunday evening services.

Rev. Mr. Lind noted that Bethany and other churches were forced to compete with the modern program created by the radio, the automobile and the summer camp. He said that as a result it was difficult to secure large attendance on Sunday evenings during the warm weather.

QUINCY REGISTRY BRANCH BOOMING

Inspector William McConnell, officer in charge of the Quincy Registry branch noted a 300 per cent increase in receipts, since the branch opened in 1923.

He said that more than 50 people a day visited the Quincy office for license examinations. He also said that Quincy's allocation of 15,000 license plates had already been exhausted.

Assisting McConnell at the branch was Miss Mary Hayes and Miss Florence McKinnon.

PERMITS FOR MILLION DOLLARS OF CONSTRUCTION

Building Inspector Warren Parker said that building in the city reached the million dollar mark for new construction during the month of May. An average of three permits a day were issued by this department. Quincy, he noted, was one of the few cities in the state to show growth at such an unusually rapid speed.

MASTER BARBERS ORGANIZE

The master barbers of Quincy organized a Master Barbers' Association for the purpose of promoting better relations between themselves and the unions.

Joseph Angelo was elected president. The organizational meeting was held at the shop of Philip Mercurio on Saville St.

Letter Box

'Congratulates' Public Officials For Builder's 'Forced Retirement'

Editor's Note: The following letter was sent to the Quincy City Council.

We in the building industry congratulate our public officials for our forced retirement. Government has lost touch with the realistic needs of the people.

Look at the thousands in line at the unemployment office each cold New England day. Think of the others who can't even qualify.

These are the people who supported the government's socialistic spending during their working years, and now find their company sponsored insurance is invalid, some pension plans don't pay off, and their social security benefits will be greatly reduced. Our public officials have not recognized that this country's largest business, with hundreds of affiliated trades and suppliers, is the one business that can take our country out of this depression.

We certainly don't want our government to give us the same treatment the fishing industry has received over the last 30 years, and we don't need continued competition from government subsidizing buildings instead of subsidizing people. Nor do we need special tax concession to a few at the expense of many, or land give away deals. Neither do we need any more government expensive subsidized housing, particularly when they don't conform to our zoning laws, are poorly planned, and will be a deficit for at least 40 years, while we continually neglect the sick, the majority of the elderly, the young families, and most important of all, the workers who are taxed to support these unprofitable programs.

It was announced last June, 10 months ago, a $33,000. apartment house impact study was to be made. The Quincy Master Builders Association has repeatedly requested it be given a part in it. Thirty questions were submitted. Only a dozen were indirectly answered, and we seriously question some of the answers as false. Why weren't all the questions answered? What can be done to be heard?

While industry is fighting to go back to work, public officials are attempting to further retard construction by continually changing the zoning of land preventing private capital investment from building tax producing income property.

In six months, the City of Quincy issued permits for $319,500. new construction. Since January 1st one house and one garage. What a shame! We should be adding approximately 20 million dollars in new construction a year to run the City smoothly. Not Quincy.

Our public officials legislate us against growth, and our planners want the best communities with complete recreation, well maintained open space, and rich interiors, thereby eliminating those who plan desperately need just plain housing.

The public officials then charge private investors with failing the job, but then endorse far more expensive subsidized housing, with our tax money, housing that doesn't comply with the zoning laws private capital investors have to respect.

How can our public officials expect the working man to continue when they have lost touch with the realistic needs of the people.

Private capital construction has been boxed in by a socialistic government policy, either competing with, or controlling or limiting his ambitions, thereby creating this economic depression.

Government should admit their mistakes by eliminating their one sided studies and zoning rules, and allow industry to get involved, allow the character of the neighborhood to improve, put people back on the payroll.

The Quincy Master Builders Association would like to be given the opportunity to be heard by our public officials, so that we might turn the industry around and get started again.

Labor is waiting. May we have that meeting?

Yours truly,
Roger B. Lyons

CONSUMER PROTECTION

By MAGGIE M. LODICO
Director, Consumer Protection
City of Quincy

Q. Do insurance companies have to explain costs and benefits to the consumer?

A. By law, insurance companies selling automobile insurance are required to explain to the consumer all costs and benefits in an easily readable pamphlet - relative costs and optional benefits must be explained so that it is easily understood by the consumer.

Q. What should basic hospital insurance cover?

A. Basic hospital insurance should cover hospital services and expenses also expenses of the services of the surgeon while treating an illness that puts the patient into a hospital. Limits of coverage vary with different plans. "Major Medical" and "Extended Coverage" are backups of most basic plans.

Q. What is the Harvard Community Health Plan?

A. H.M.O. has been described as a medical supermarket—a group of doctors, and other medical personnel in association with doctors and other medical personnel in association with hospitals join together to provide a complete range of health services for which the member pays a flat annual fee. Since the fee is fixed, emphasis is on preventative measures to keep members healthy.

Q. What are the elements of a funeral?

A. Embalming, cosmetician, casket or urn [if cremation], cemetery services, grave, grave opening, perpetual care, monument or marker, clergyman, flowers, transportation, burial clothes, newspaper notices, death certificate or other notices.

When attempting to choose from the various options, consumers should feel free to talk to more than one funeral home. A decision this big should not be made hurriedly. It is usually best to call at the home in person as it may take several hours to discuss the alternatives. A consumer who seeks information from a funeral home is under no obligation to purchase its services.

I have said many times this is your money...spend it wisely.

'S. Quincy MBTA Outcome Will Shape Quincy's Future' Says Vivian

The Ward Race: Or Bean Bags Anyone?

By HENRY BOSWORTH

So far at least, this year's City Council ward races have generated about as much excitement as a game of bean-bags.

It's almost unbelievable but at this writing there isn't one announced challenger for the five seats held by incumbents.

And even more unbelievable is the fact that the vacant Ward 2 seat has so far attracted only one candidate.

What's the reason?

Are the ward councillors doing such a good job that they look unbeatable? Or don't good men on the outside care to run anymore?

Let's look at the picture:

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly doesn't appear to have any competition at the moment, anyway. Paul Harold who gave him a real good run two years ago, is about to officially announce his candidacy for councillor-at-large instead.

In Ward 2, Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall is giving up the seat and the only taker so far is School Committeeman Daniel Raymond.

He could possibly walk off with it without a scratch unless either Peter Gacia or former Ward 3 Councillor Ted McLelland get in. A lot of people are encouraging Gacia to make the move.

Ward 3 Councillor John Lydon doesn't have a challenger yet and may not get one.

Neither does Councillor James Sheets over in Ward 4.

Ward 5 Councillor Warren Powers appears the most likely to have opposition. Mike Peatridge who ran against him two years ago had been acting like a candidate some weeks ago although he's been pretty quiet recently. But Peatridge is expected to run.

Last but not least, Ward 6's Dennis Harrington is also an incumbent without a challenger at the present time. And there are no rumors of anyone in that area about to get into it.

The amazing thing is that all five incumbents are only winding up their first term and no one has yet dared to challenge any of them. There's a strong possibility that three or four of them could ride "free" to re-election.

It sure as heck aint like the old days in Quincy.

SOME OF THE so-called political experts are beginning to wonder what affect the ho-hum city council ward situation may have on the mayoralty race.

Who will be helped or hurt more by the lack of hot ward races-incumbent Walter Hannon or challengers Joseph LaRaia and Grace Saphir?

It would seem that LaRaia and Saphir would be hurt more than Hannon. A challenger has got to get the vote out but if there isn't any action at the ward level, it isn't going to bring out too many voters.

QUINCY'S CITY ELECTIONS are supposed to be non-partisan and all that. True, there is no "D" or "R" beside the names of candidates on the ballot. But partisanship was really always there below the surface.

And that may be one of the reasons why there are so few candidates this year. The Republican party in Quincy, a once-upon-a-time powerhouse, just doesn't have its Wheaties anymore.

The Republicans are so far outnumbered and so weak that any Republican who runs for anything in Quincy should be given the Badge of Courage.

True, Walter Hannon is a Republican and he's mayor. But he's a political rarity. He happens to have a lot of strong Democrats who prefer him as mayor than they do one or two other Democrats who would like to be mayor. And, of course, he has Republicans with him, too.

It's a pity though that Republicans don't have the old get-up-and-go they once had. They would be out running for office instead of talking about the good old days. Quincy would be a better city for it, too.

ENTRANCE OF J. Thomas Mullaney and Kenneth Runge into the School Committee race this week [as predicted here] should perk up what had been another drab picture.

That gives us three candidates for the two seats being vacated this year.

Mary Collins of Squantum, who ran for state representative last year, is expected to announce her candidacy for the school committee any week now. And Dean Paul Nicastro is leaning that way although there are those trying to talk him into running for the Ward 2 council seat instead.

A TESTIMONIAL FOR Sabina Stenberg, candidate for City Council at-large, will be held Saturday from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Bryan VFW Post. She's providing free bus service for all senior citizens.

HER MANY, MANY friends are praying for the recovery of Mrs. Kathryn McDougall, popular long-time administrative assistant at the Quincy YMCA. Kay, sister of former YMCA President Floyd Folmsbee and daughter of the late YMCA Executive Director Floyd Folmsbee was stricken during the YMCA annual meeting May 20. She is in intensive care and in serious condition at Quincy City Hospital.

RONALD IACOBUCCI of 10 Hyde St., South Quincy will work this summer as confidential secretary to Lt. Gov. Thomas O'Neill. Last summer he interned with Rep. James Burke in Washington. A student at Boston College he has also been covering the State House for The Quincy Sun.

not a small town. It provides a lot of jobs for people in and out of the city. But Quincy must start acting like a city, not a small town. Unless it begins to deal with its stagnation, the situation is going to get worse."

Pointing to an example of stagnation, Vivian said the corner of Cottage Ave. and Hancock St. should rate as "a 100 per cent corner," a corner where business thrives. Instead, office space is vacant there. Vivian said:

"That corner is symptomatic of what is going on in the city. And you'll see more of it. A good store should go great guns there."

Strongly opposed to the imposition of an eight-story height limit in Quincy, Vivian labelled such legislation "regressive," saying it would ward off potential developers.

"If a developer needs 10 or 12 stories and then comes to Quincy to find an eight-story limit, he'll say, 'I'll look at a more progressive city.'"

Vivian seems to think Quincy will need a crisis to awaken itself to its problems of stagnation and isolation.

"One problem there has been is that there has been no crisis yet," said Vivian. "Politicians and the business community to some extent have not noticed the deterioration that is taking place or about to take place in Quincy."

And without the South Quincy Station and expressway ramps, Vivian sees the goals and functions of PDQ as stymied and constricted.

"We'd be stalled without a station. We'd have to act on a very limited basis."

To people like Vivian, then, the letters PDQ may be sounding an ironic yet insistent and concise warning to the Quincy community - do something...Pretty Damn Quick.

Tobin To Vote To Restore Budget Cut

not restored.

The feud had been labelled "a power struggle" by School Committeeman Frank Anselmo who said the question came down to whether the School Committee or the City Council was running the school system.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon told the School Committee, "we can't live with the cuts," saying monies chopped from regular school salary funds represented part of binding contractual agreements made with Quincy Public School teachers.

Tobin told The Quincy Sun he thought nothing would be gained by the city's entanglement in a law suit. He said:

"We've had too many law suits recently. I think reasonable men sitting down and seeking a solution to a problem ought to be able to reason together. The best interests of the city could not be served by splitting it...and having the Mayor's office and the School Committee fighting among themselves."

The $263,225 cut from the original $26.8 million school department budget represented a one per cent slash from personal services and a one per cent cut from expenses. The cut would have reduced the anticipated tax rate by about $1.05.

The expected vote Monday will record Tobin, and Councillors John Lydon, Joseph LaRaia, Clifford Marshall and John Quinn in favor of the motion to restore the cut funds and Councillors Dennis Harrington, Warren Powers, Leo Kelly and James Sheets opposed.

Referring to cut made in the Quincy Junior College budget, Tobin said:

"I have always been an advocate of the Junior College and with the troubled economy, youngsters don't have the money to go to a four-year college and now, more than ever, they will be using the services of a two-year institution. This is not the time to be cutting faculty salaries or expenses or sports programs. I feel that money spent towards such programs and services will be money spent to help the prevention of juvenile delinquency."

Thumbnail Thoughts

By J. J. SMITH

After learning big corporations secretly financed political campaigns, why the surprise about bribes to foreigners?

Whether traveling abroad or here at home, the true New Englander is always glad to get back. Where is it any better?

New Hampshire residents look down their noses at Massachusetts politics, but we at least know how to mark our ballots legibly.

Summer hasn't arrived. The first "skimmer" or "floater" is yet to be seen!

New York City may be broke but we bet they had a better time getting that way than did Massachusetts.

Quincy Co-operative Bank Elects John Herbert Board Chairman

Several changes in the management structure of The Quincy Co-operative Bank were voted at the annual meeting of the bank's Board of Directors, announces President John A. Vivian.

John R. Herbert, senior director and clerk, was elected Chairman of the Board to succeed Heslip E. Sutherland, who is retiring from the bank. Sutherland served as President of the bank from 1956 to 1971 and has been Board Chairman since.

Francis J. Mitchell was elected Clerk of the Board to fill the vacancy caused by Herbert's election as chairman. Miss Marjorie Casell, assistant vice president, was elected assistant clerk to succeed Miss Harriet Couch, who is retiring. Carl R. Abramson of the bank staff was elected assistant treasurer.

At the annual meeting, Vivian reviewed the bank's year of growth, pointing to the remodeling of the main office in Quincy, the opening of the Cohasset branch, the refurbishing and addition of safe deposit boxes to the Hanover office, and the scheduled opening of branches in Braintree and at 1000 Southern Artery senior citizens housing project.

He said that the free N.O.W. Accounts continue to grow dramatically, providing funds for consumer loans and mortgages. Herbert is Executive Director of the Massachusetts Newspaper Publishers Association. He is President of the Pan American Society of New England and is a director of the International Center of New England and the World Peace Foundation. He is former editor of The Patriot Ledger and former executive editor of the Boston Herald Traveler.

Mitchell is comptroller of Old Colony Crushed Stone, and is a member of the Hanover Board of Selectmen of Hanover.

Abramson started as a trainee with the bank in 1973, and worked in the savings and mortgage departments. He is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts with a degree in Psychology.

Conway Calls For 6-Point Program

South Shore Realtor Jack Conway termed what is now going on in the home finance market as "a revolution in mortgage financing" in a speech at Pier 4 before the Society of Real Estate Appraisers.

He called for a hard hitting six-point program of action to combat the mortgage ills of the day.

The six-point Conway program:

- Urging to the highest level for thrift in big government, because a continuation of a $60 to $80 billion budget deficit can only prolong the chaotic mortgage market.
- Continue to press for legislation which would relieve the tax on thrift accounts, the first $10,000 on an individual account, $20,000 on joint accounts.

- Do everything possible to further legislative feeling that FHA be spun off from the socio-economic influences of HUD so that the great middle class home programs like 203 can move ahead.
- Urge local savings banks and other thrift organizations to use the authority they already have to make low equity, long term VA and FHA and conventional loans.
- Support any legislation that would involve itself with a variable interest rate mortgage instrument because a VRM would tend to encourage thrifts to get more involved with term mortgages.
- Support legislation which would provide for terms longer than 30 years because this is just another way to make high rates and higher real estate taxes more digestible for the home buyer.

Lions Honor Johnny Balbo

Johnny Balbo of Oak Brook, Ill., president of Lions International and former Quincy resident and professional wrestler, will be honored Wednesday, May 28, as Quincy salutes a man dedicated to the challenge of Lionism.

Balbo, born and educated in Quincy, joined the Lions Club in 1952, becoming a member of the La Grange, Ill. Club. His hometown Quincy Lions Club will sponsor the evening's salute to him at Valle's Steak House in Brintree.

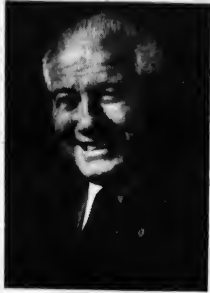

A social hour will begin at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m. Accordionist Mabel Biagini will entertain during the evening.

Head table guests will include Mayor and Mrs. Walter J. Hannon, Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Tobin, Lions District Governor and Mrs. William Wyskowska, Lions International Director and Mrs. Ernest Smith and John Graham, executive director of Quincy Heritage. Toastmaster for the evening will be Kenneth P. Fallon, Jr. of WJDA.

Balbo was elected president of Lions International last July at the organization's annual convention in San Francisco.

Active in Lions Club activities since 1952, Balbo has served in all district offices and was chairman of the Council of Governors in Ill. in 1960-1961. Elected to the International Board of Directors in 1965 for a two-year term, Balbo was later elected third vice-president of Lions International at the 1971 Annual Convention held in Las Vegas.

Boasting a 21-year record of perfect attendance, Balbo has received many awards for his work on behalf of Lionism. He was the recipient of the Ambassador of Good Will Award, the Supreme Extension Award, the Senior Master Key Award, the 100 per cent

JOHNNY BALBO
Governor's Award, and 12 International Presidents Awards. Balbo won the World's Light-heavyweight Championship Title in 1947, holding that crown until 1949. He retired from professional wrestling in 1955 after a 24-year career. During World War II, he worked as a ship builder at what is now General Dynamics Quincy Shipyard.

General chairman of the salute to Balbo is George R. Riley, president of the Quincy Lions Club. Roger Perfetti, first vice-president of the Quincy Club, will serve as reservation and ticket chairman. Everett A. Tatreau, past president of the Club, is publicity chairman.

Tickets for the event may be obtained by contacting Roger Perfetti at 479-5200 or George Riley at 471-6200. Tickets must be reserved by Monday, May 19. Checks can be made payable to "Quincy Salute to Johnny Balbo".

MONEY TALKS

Here's Why The House Industry Has its Ups And Downs

By Philip J. Lawrence
President
Colonial Federal Savings
And Loan Association
of Quincy, Holbrook and Wareham
8-6 Weekdays 8-7:30 Thursdays

Why is it that the housing industry, so responsible for the fulfillment of the American family dream, is the most volatile of all the components of the Gross National Product?

It is because in boom times, when money is in tight supply and interest rates soar, home building wanes. And, conversely, in periods of recession, when money is plentiful and interest rates fall, the housing industry zooms.

We are now experiencing a sad period for families seeking to own their own homes and builders eager to supply them. Housing starts declined by almost 43 per cent in 1974 from what they were in 1972. Moreover, the price of newly-built single-family homes has practically doubled in the past decade.

Unfortunately, this comes at a bad time for the post-war babies who are now at an age [approaching 30] when growing families and home ownership are natural concomitants.

How can this goal be accomplished when the median sales price for new homes nationally is approximately $37,000? When in the Chicago area only 5 per cent of the traditionally single-family homes are selling for under $40,000?

The principal sources of funds for home financing in this country are the savings and loans and mutual savings banks. They are limited in their lending principally to home mortgages. They are also restricted by Federal regulations with respect to the interest rates they can offer to attract savings and by state usury laws on how much they can charge for home lending dollars.

When money is in tight supply and savings and loans reach interest ceilings Federally imposed on savings, depositors seek other places for higher returns. Savings available for home borrowing therefore decline to a trickle. Other potential lenders -- like commercial banks and insurance companies -- switch their investments to other fields providing more lucrative returns than are allowed by usury laws on home mortgages. Hence the money squeeze on home purchasers, realtors, and the home-building industry.

Another reason for the volatility of the housing industry is that potential home buyers are justifiably sensitive to the interest rates they must pay to satisfy their dream. The Federal Reserve has noted that a one-percentage-point increase in long-term interest rates reduces housing expenditures by $3 billion after one year, whereas business plant development is reduced by barely one-half billion dollars. Families can defer such decisions whereas businesses cannot if they are to remain competitive. Businesses can pass along the costs to consumers of their products, but families must absorb them.

All this helps to explain why the graph of housing activity runs counter to the rise and fall of the national economy.

Wollaston Park Assn. Commends City For Black's Creek Area Cleanup

The Wollaston Park Association has commended the city for its "splendid clean-up job" in the Black's Creek area and has urged neighborhood residents to keep the area rubbish-free.

In a letter to Richard E. Koch, Quincy's Commissioner of Natural Resources, the association wrote:

"We want you to know that your efforts are recognized and very much appreciated by the residents of Wollaston Park and Beechwood Knoll. We hope that in the future the neighbors will neither dump anything there themselves nor permit outsiders to use the fringe of this valuable marsh as a disposal area."

Commenting on the recent flood of water noted in the marsh, the association continued:

"We trust that you and the Quincy Conservation Commission will insist that tides be permitted to course the marsh daily and that muck will be cleared from the creeks to permit the marsh to resume its invaluable function as a vital link in our important eco system."

Wollaston Community Assn. Planning July 4th Field Day

The Wollaston Community Association plans a 4th of July Field Day for the youngsters of Wollaston at Pageant Field, Merymount Park from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The committee is headed by Kathy Roberts and Robert Ulehak. They noted that more than 1,000 youngsters participated in various contests and events at last year's event.

It was the first fourth of July celebration held in Wollaston in many years. The attendance convinced the committee that a bigger and more varied program should be planned for this year.

Tom Costello, activities chairman, is seeking more volunteers to help with the various events. An organizational meeting will be held Monday June 2, at 7:30 at Wollaston Legion Post. Anyone willing to give five hours on July 4th to help the youngsters of Wollaston is urged to attend."

Financial donations to help defray the costs may be sent to Pam Spring, 107 Waterston Ave., Wollaston.

ENC To Receive $7,600 NSF Grant

Congressman James A. Burke announces the Eastern Nazarene College of Quincy will receive a $7,600 grant from the National Science Foundation.

The College must match the NSF funds by providing at least 50 per cent of the equipment costs. The equipment program is designed to help Colleges and Universities improve the quality of undergraduate science instruction by updating courses and teaching laboratories.

Of the 884 institutions submitting proposals, Eastern Nazarene College was one of 388 colleges awarded a grant. Almost 2,000 proposals were received by the National Science Foundation, but even with the largest amount of available funds since 1969, only 547 grants were possible. Nazarene's grant was awarded for use in their Biology Department.

North Trackmen In State Class Finals

North Quincy's track team, which last week finished its most successful regular season in many years, will be well-represented Saturday in the finals of the state class meet at White Stadium.

The qualifying meets in the four classes were held last Saturday and Monday and Lou Tozzi's Raiders did well in Class B.

In final events held Monday North's Brian Doherty was fourth in the long jump, Mike Nee was fourth and Pete Hemphill fifth in the javelin, and Artie Barrett sixth in the two-mile.

In qualifying events for Saturday's finals, North's Brian Doherty and Bill Lewis of Framingham South tied for first in the 220, Mark Canavan was second in the half mile, Bart Petracca third in the mile and also qualifying for Saturday's finals were Paul Doherty in the 100, Matty Constantino in the 220 and Jerry MacKenzie in the 440.

Tom Hall's Quincy team didn't qualify anyone for Saturday's finals but in last week's Class A final events Charlie Gaziano won the javelin with a toss of 188 feet.

Last Thursday North finished its most successful season in many years when it again dominated the running events to romp over Quincy, 89-56, at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Raiders finished their regular season 12-3, bettering last spring's 11-4 mark. They were 6-3 in their first Suburban League season and won their final eight meets in a row.

Quincy had the lead following the field events but couldn't match North's tremendous runners.

The best race of the day found North's Brian Doherty edging Quincy's Preston Carroll in the 220 with the best time of the Suburban League season, 22.6.

North's other winners were Paul Doherty, 100; Jerry MacKenzie, 440; Mark Canavan, half mile; Bart Petracca, mile; Artie Barrett, two-mile; Brian Doherty, long jump; Steve Bonoli, pole vault; Paul Doherty, shot put; Dave Lorman, discus; the 440 relay team of Brian Doherty, Phil Strungis, Matty King and Paul Doherty, and the mile relay team of Canavan, Dick Kennedy, Phil Maloney and Petracca.

Art DiLoreto was a double winner for the Presidents, taking the high hurdles and high jump. Ed Coletta won the low hurdles in his first try in this event, Dennis McCarthy won the triple jump and Charlie Gaziano the javelin.

"This is always a fine meet and, the competition and spirit are excellent," Tozzi said. "There are no grudges and no fights, only the best of feelings."

"In a way I hate this meet because Lou and I are such close friends and there is such good feeling among the kids," Hall said.

Quincy finished its season 3-5 but Hall had some outstanding individual performances throughout the season.

Earlier in the week North made an excellent showing in the all-league meet. Points were not kept in terms of team results but the Raiders would have finished second to Newton.

Canavan won the half mile, Brian Doherty the 220 and North's mile relay team of John Mackey, Canavan, Petracca and MacKenzie also won. Matty Constantino was second in the 220, Petracca, turning in the best time ever for a Quincy or North runner, 4:21.7, was a close second in the mile, and the 440 relay team second.

The Raiders' MacKenzie was third in the 440, Barrett third in the two-mile, Rich Mahoney fourth in the high jump, Paul Doherty fifth in the 100, Brian Doherty fifth in the long jump and Pete Hemphill fifth in the javelin.

Quincy's Carroll won the low hurdles, in which he was undefeated this year, missing his own school record by just a tenth of a second. DiLoreto was third in the high hurdles and fifth in the high jump, Gaziano third in the javelin and Paul Ladas tied for fifth in the 440.

In the Suburban League girls' meet Jody Silva of North Quincy won the javelin, Quincy's Denise LaPere tied the school record in the 880 but finished only fifth, Jody Yurkstis was fifth in the high jump and fourth in the 100 and Kathy Keating took third in the discus.

Portland the rest of the way.

Quincy closes out its season Saturday at Amherst against the U. of Massachusetts Rugby Club. A win will give Quincy its first unbeaten season in its three-year history.

Coach Denise Martin of Broad Meadows Junior High's first girls' track team is optimistic and rightly so after several fine performances.

BM shapes up as a contender in Friday's city-wide pentagonal meet at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The BM coach had a fine turnout of nearly 50 girls and the depth has paid off in the team's meets.

Graham, Lisa Marrocco and Leamen also won.

Quincy Rugby Club Wins 6th, 14-10

The Quincy Rugby Club remained undefeated last Saturday when it defeated Portland, Me., Rugby Club, 14-10. Quincy now has a 6-0-1 record with one game left.

This marked the first time the young Quincy club had ever defeated Portland, a perennial Eastern Rugby League power. Quincy took a quick 10-0 lead, scored by Billy Carroll and Kevin Hanley, and a two-point conversion by Colin Riley. Portland fought back to a 10-10 tie at the half but Carroll scored again early in the second half and the Quincy defense shut out

Central Girls Track Team Shows Promise

By TOM SULLIVAN

The first girls' track team at Central Junior High shows considerable promise and should be among the contenders for the city-wide title in Friday's pentagonal meet at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Although this is Central's first year, Coach Susan Collins is blessed with several experienced girls, some of whom have run unofficially with the high school team and many of whom competed last summer for the Quincy Track Club.

"To tell the truth, my main experience with track up to now had been cross country running on my own," admitted Miss Collins. "We had a fine turnout of about 50 for the team and many of them are experienced. We practice twice a week in addition to our Wednesday meets and I was delighted with the interest shown during April vacation when more than 20 of the girls came to each practice, even on a Sunday."

Central was edged by Atlantic-North, 79-71, in its opening meet, but romped over Sterling, 100-50, and outclassed Point last week, 106-44.

Miss Collins' three relay teams (seventh, eighth and ninth grades), won all three meets and several individuals have also won in all three.

The ninth grade relay team is made up of Janice Kelly, Dottie Irvine, Karen Kandalaf and Joyce Kennedy. The eighth grade team has had different combinations and running have been Laurie Smith, Paula Church, Joan Higgins, Debbie Biagini, Jenny Seamans and Anne Cleary. The seventh grade team includes Patti Micelli, Laurie Clarke, Anne Sullivan and Julie Mullen.

Each grade has its own events with the seventh graders competing in the 50-yard dash, 440-yard run, long jump, high jump, shot put and one-lap relay.

The eighth grade events are 100-yard dash, half mile run, long jump, high jump, shot put, and half mile relay.

Ninth graders compete in the 100, mile, 45-yard low hurdles, long jump, high jump, eight-pound shot put and half mile relay.

Ninth graders on the team are Karen Kandalaf, Joyce Kennedy, Debbie Reed, Denise Reardon, Genny Yee, Lisa Horion, Dottie Irvine, Donna Ross, Rory Nolan, Julie Falco, Chris O'Rourke, Debbie Stanton, Julianne Drain and Janice Kelly.

Eighth graders are Joan Higgins, Paula Church, Laurie Smith, Anne Cleary, Margie Donlon, Francie Maloney, Elia DiVello, Jennifer Seamans and Pattie Irvine.

Seventh grade competitors are Patti Micelli, Marie Falchetta, Eileen McKenna, Julianne Hurley, Karen McCarthy, Julie Mullen, Laurie Clarke, Suzanne Cauty, Patti Stanzian, Lauren Wood, Kim Murphy, Chris Cunniff, Cheryl Ayles, Kathy MacDonald, Mary Burgess and Anne Sullivan.

"Our practice sessions are held at the stadium which gives the girls a chance to watch the high school teams practice," Miss Collins said. "Too, many of the high school trackmen and coaches have been giving the girls valuable tips including Lou Tozzi [North Quincy boys' coach]; Tom Hall [Quincy boys' coach]; and Bob Troup [Quincy girls' coach]. Also, Frank Kelly, who is active in the Quincy Track Club, helps at practice and officiates at the meets.

"The girls love track and the majority of them show up for every practice and never seem to tire. It could be difficult with so many teams practicing at the stadium at the same time but everyone helps each other out. For example, the boys at Central have had a team for many years and help out the girls.

Mad-Cap Boxing Show To Aid Buzz Orio Scholarship Fund

Jordan [Tinker] Picot of Quincy and Paul [Iron Jaw] Stackpole will head a cast of zany characters Friday as a mad-cap comedy boxing act unfolds at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall to raise scholarship funds.

Picot and his team of five cohorts started a fund-raising tradition eight years ago, staging their comic routine for civic groups and any charitable cause.

Last year, the routine - which also includes the serious side of boxing - netted a total of $700 for the Houghs Neck Community Council Scholarship Fund.

This year, proceeds will benefit the Council's Buzz Orio Scholarship Fund.

Picot, a former professional fighter, held the New England Golden Gloves Championship crown three years.

The event will begin at 8 p.m. Friday, featuring a black belt karate exhibition, amateur boxing bouts, insight into how boxers train and a 45-minute comedy boxing act.

Other members of the Picot-Stackpole routine are John [Doc] Sweezy, magician, entertainer and referee; Ray [Bad-Eye] Russell, Picot's second; Tom Lentini, "The Doctor"; and Fred [The Mouth] Connolly, fight announcer and trouble maker.

The act will include sequences such as "The Telephone Call", "Baby Costume", "B.O. Test", "Blood Plasma", "The Pie Face", and "Shaving Cream".

Mayor Walter J. Hannon will referee one of several amateur bouts which will include matches featuring Johnny Desmond, 150-pound New England champ; Pepper Roach, 160-pound New England and national champ; Danny Long, 147-pound New England champ; Freddie Roach, three-time Junior Olympic champ; and Bobby Lingoos and Jack Attridge.

Special guests will include ex-heavy weight contender Tom McNeely and ex-middle weight contender Joe DiNucci.

Tickets may be purchased at local Houghs Neck businesses or at the door.

S. S. Horseshoe League Season Starts June 2

The South Shore Horseshoe League will begin play Monday, June 2, at the St. Moritz Horseshoe Club West Quincy.

All pitchers interested in joining the league are asked to go to the courts Monday, May 26, or Tuesday, May 27 and pitch to establish average. The league will use a handicap system to equalize players of varying degrees of skill. Women may join the league—some already have done so.

There will be a minimum of three players on each team,

Houghs Neck Wins 3, Remick's Edges Bryan

Remick's edged Bryan VFW Post, 5-4, Monday night in seven innings in the Quincy Junior Baseball League.

Jim Ferrera and John Todd combined for 12 strikeouts and allowed only three hits and two walks for Remick's. Glenn Segalla had a bases clearing double in the first, Remick's added a run in the sixth when Ferrera tripled to score Robbie Craig who had singles.

Meanwhile, VFW, led by Danny Boyle and Bruce Tobin, had chipped away at the lead and Boyle scored the tying run in the sixth after doubling to send the game into overtime.

Remick's won the game when, with two outs and the bases clear in the seventh, Todd walked and Segalla doubled him to third. Craig walked to fill the bases and Mike Sullivan strolled to force in the winning run. Todd pitched the bottom of the seventh to pick up the win.

Mike Strangere saved the game for Remick's when he made a great catch of Jim Sullivan's bid for a game-winning two-run homer. He made the catch right at the center field fence.

Houghs Neck had a big week with three wins. It nipped the Elks, 2-1, with Danny Marsters, Tom McFarlane pitching for HN. Greg Oriola and McFarlane had two hits and drove in the winning runs. Joe Scurti pitched for the Elks. Bob Haslett had two hits and Scurti had a single.

HN also defeated Boston Gear, 6-3, with Marsters and McFarlane again the pitchers. Oriola had a double and Frankie McPartlin, Phelan, Eric Green, Matt Kenny and McFarlane also had hits. McPartlin made a fine defensive play at first base which ended a three-run rally by Boston Gear.

Rotary won two games as it defeated Gear, 14-6, and Sears, 3-1.

In the Boston Gear game Gary DiNardo was the winning pitcher, giving up only four hits. Tom McHugh had two doubles

In the Sears game Johnny Costigan gave up only three hits and struck out eight. Steve Sacchetti had two hits for Rotary and Glenn Houlihan, Kevin Greeb, Hennessey and Pecavich also had hits. Pettinelli played a strong game catching. John Sullivan pitched for Sears and Kenny Mann hit a long triple.

Kiwanis also came up with a pair of wins, topping Rotary, 7-5, and walloping Colonial Federal, 12-4.

Against Rotary Jamey Walsh was the winning pitcher. Mike Avitable hit a grand slam home run to win the game. Walsh and Sean Martin had two hits each and for Rotary DiNardo and Costigan had the hits.

In the Colonial Federal game Martin was the winning pitcher. John Coleman had two doubles and drove in three runs, Rick Barry had three hits and three RBIs and Avitable and Walsh two hits apiece.

Point Softball Girls Impressive

Point Junior High School may have a small enrollment but you'd never know it the way the school's first girls' softball team is rolling.

Like the boys' baseball team, the girls have had an excellent first season and are leading contenders for the city title.

Coach Kathleen Bertrand's team has combined fine team effort with solid pitching, hitting and defensive play.

In Point's opening game it had one bad inning, the fourth, when Atlantic-North scored three runs for a 3-2 win, but it battled back for a 4-3 win.

They went on to defeat Central and Sterling.

In the win over A-N, Ellen Doucette pitched well and Marie Brow came up with two outstanding fielding plays to end the troublesome fourth inning. The girls also did some good hitting.

"The girls have a lot of enthusiasm and the team play has been outstanding," said Miss Bertrand. "This is a new sport in the junior high schools and the spirit is great. I think we should have a good season."

The starting team has Janice Russo at second base, Debbie Russo at shortstop, Ellen

Spinello, Phelps FB Winners

Tony Spinello and Edna Phelps shot low gross of 44 in the mixed Scotch Foursome at Furnace Brook Golf Club last week.

Five teams tied for low net of Doucette, pitcher, Lori Robertson, first base, Wendy Isaacson, left field, Nicole Perreault, center field, Marie Brow, third base, Cindy Watt, catcher and Maureen Blanchette, right field.

Rounding out the squad are Maria Pappamarkous, Irene Martel, Patty Bollen, Tracey Harris, Jackie Pizzi, Joyce Christiansen and Lisa Montgomery.

THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL

Kenneth Runge To Seek School Committee Seat

Kenneth J. Runge of 87 Willet St., Wollaston, announces his candidacy for School Committee tonight at a reception at Peter's Landing.

Runge, self employed with businesses in Quincy and Braintree, was formerly with the sales and engineering divisions of Boston Gas Co.

Runge attended Boston public schools, Franklin Institute, Quincy Junior College and Northeastern University. He is an associate member of the Democratic City Committee, a member of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and an officer in the North Quincy Knights of Columbus. Runge said his goal is to guarantee that the learning experiences of students in Quincy public schools are responsive to their needs, and that this effort is supported with as many human and financial resources as the school system can permit. He said he is also encouraging input to his campaign from the PTA's and other concerned parents and voters.

Runge is married to the former Christine Manning of South Boston and Weymouth. They have four children, JoAnn, Kenneth Jr., Karen and Gregory.

LaRaia Impressed By Youth

"The youth have truly shown their concern for their government," remarked mayoral candidate Joseph J. LaRaia after witnessing some 300 high school students turn out Sunday night for the "Youth for LaRaia dance."

"I'm encouraged by this type of response," LaRaia said following the four-hour dance at the Carlton House. "Not all of these young people are voters yet, but the important thing is they're interested."

"The fact that they can't vote does not remove them from government. Their concerns are as important as anyone's."

J. Thomas Mullaney School Candidate

J. Thomas Mullaney of 115 Standish Ave., Wollaston, announces his candidacy for the School Committee.

Mullaney said he is running "as a parent interested and concerned about education and a taxpayer worried about the rising tax rate."

A senior financial analyst with the Polaroid Corp. for 15 years, Mullaney served in the U.S. Army and is a homeowner and lifelong resident of Quincy. He is married to the former Mary McIsaac of West Quincy and they have two children ages 5 and 13.

He attended Quincy public schools, Bentley College of Accounting and Finance, Northeastern University and has a B.S. degree in business management.

He is former chairman of the Quincy School Building Needs Committee, former treasurer Quincy Citizens Association, a member of the Concerned Parents of North Quincy High School, Myles Standish PTA, Wollaston Community Association and Montclair Men's Club. In his formal statement, Mullaney said:

"I am running as a parent interested and concerned about education and a taxpayer worried about the rising tax rate. I feel a sound education governs a student's ability to achieve his or her full potential in life. I also feel that a public school system has to set limits on the scope of its activities and programs. Priorities must be established and blended with the City's ability to pay for them.

"In today's troubled economy with its high unemployment and reduced tax revenues the school commissioner is called upon to make very difficult, but crucial decisions on school policies, programs and spending.

"In 1970 when I first decided to run for the office I vowed to learn as much as possible about the role of the school committee. Thus for the last five years I have attended most of the school committee's meetings. I feel the knowledge that I have gained would allow me to be an effective member immediately.

"As the former chairman of the School Building Needs Committee I'm quite familiar with the problems we have with our aging school facilities. As the parent of a student who faces double sessions, probably to be held at Quincy High, while North Quincy High is renovated I'm concerned about the effect of double sessions.

"The students at both schools will be effected no matter how well the double sessions are planned and administered. If elected I will do anything financially and educationally reasonable to reduce the time spent on double sessions.

"In November 1974 the Quincy School Committee presented Tom Mullaney with its Public Service Award. This citation is given in recognition of uncommon efforts and continuous personal service in support of the Quincy Public Schools."

Saphir Says Quincy Needs 'More Horse Sense, Less Nonsense'

Mrs. Grace E. Saphir, candidate for mayor, told a group of Ward 6 voters at a recent coffee hour that "What Quincy needs is more horse sense and less nonsense in City Hall."

Speaking to the group at the home of Mrs. Greenough Abbe, 25 Crabtree Rd, Squantum, Mrs.

Saphir charged that, "the growth of cronyism has made it virtually impossible for city workers with legitimate grievances to speak out for fear of retaliation," by what she called "The Palace Guard."

Mrs. Saphir likened the situation in Quincy to that of Boston where firemen who "didn't go along—didn't play the administration's game—were penalized and given K.P. Duty."

Citing what she termed improper land use, abuse of zoning variances, a failure of city officials to deal realistically with the high unemployment rate, and failure to stabilize the tax rate, Mrs. Saphir urged the voters to "Open the windows at City Hall and let in a breath of fresh air."

This, she charged, will end the abuses that "tend to sprout like crabgrass when any group forgets that it was elected to serve the city, not to use it as a stepping stone to some other office."

"These days," Mrs. Saphir asserted, "it's fashionable to poke fun at the virtues of the horse-and-buggy days, but I believe the people of this city would welcome some old-fashioned horse sense. Heaven knows, we have had our fill of such headline-seeking nonsense as machine-gun press conferences and posed pictures at pizza-parlor openings."

She said "the professional politicians" have failed the people. She called for an end to government by City Hall "insiders", saying, "It's high time we brought in some outsiders--some ordinary everyday citizens with horse sense to serve this city."

'Anything Less Unacceptable'

Time To Consider Patriotism 'Normal And Right', Says Tobin

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin, keynote speaker at Quincy's Memorial Day observances Monday, told citizens it is time patriotism is considered "normal and right."

Delivering his address from the World War II podium in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Tobin told the gathering of young and old:

"It distresses me that so few feel the pride of patriotism. There is something deeply wrong when love of country falls short of love for home and family. It is time we made it clear that patriotism is normal and right and anything less is unacceptable for citizens of the United States."

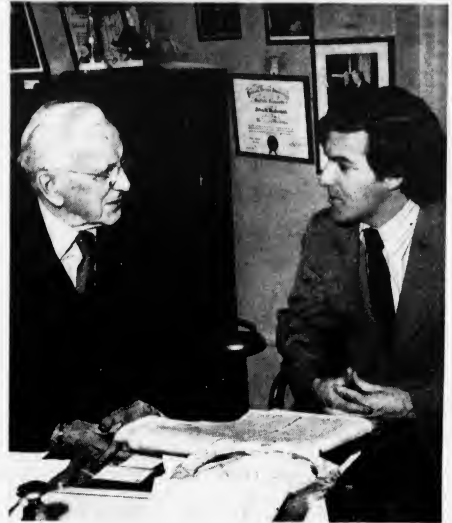

Tobin summed up the meaning of patriotism by quoting an inscription over a cemetery entrance in India. Tobin related:

"In a cemetery in northern India lie the bodies of many American soldiers who fought and died in the Second World War. Over the entrance to the cemetery are these words: 'Tell them that we gave our todays for their tomorrows.'"

"That's the meaning of patriotism," said Tobin, "and that's the message of Memorial Day."

Listing the number of Quincy's dead in the American Revolution through the Vietnam War, Tobin pointed to the hundreds of American flags flying on so many graves as a sobering reminder that "the price of freedom is always high." He said:

"No one can deny the great sacrifices which Quincy has made for our country. We must never forget them or their families. We must never forget those who have been disabled and who so honorably carry the scars of war. We must never forget the widows, or the mothers whose sacrifices are without measure. We must never forget the children who have lived without their fathers."

PAUL HAROLD of Adams Shore conferred recently in Boston with former Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives John W. McCormack, on the new national charter of the Democratic Party. Harold attended the recent Kansas City Charter Convention as a state-wide alternate delegate. He also serves as National Committeeman for the Massachusetts Young Democrats.

Tobin's speech culminated the city's traditional Memorial Day ceremonies to honor and remember Quincy's dead of all wars.

Sunday and Monday, Quincy veterans organizations and auxiliaries decorated the graves of war veterans throughout the city.

Monday morning, marching units assembled on School St. in the Ross Parkingway. The parade ranks, numbering in the hundreds, proceeded down School St. to Hancock St., crossed Washington St. and proceeded to Coddington and Sea Sts., reaching the Mount Wollaston Cemetery where Tobin gave his address.

The Memorial Day parade was sponsored by the Quincy Veterans Council.

Dukakis Veto Stands On MBTA Bill

By RON IACOBUCCI
STATE HOUSE—The final legislative effort to save the bill that would prohibit the construction of a rapid transit station in South Quincy failed on Tuesday.

The attempt to reconsider the vote against overturning the Governor's veto was defeated 119-103 with the entire Quincy Legislative delegation voting for reconsideration.

Earlier in the week, the bill was enacted by the House and Senate. The effort to overturn the Governor's veto was defeated 120-104.

Rep. Robert Cerasoli and Thomas Brownell led the floor fight against the station while Governor Dukakis personally appeared in the House lobby to speak in favor of the station. The force that was most effective in pressuring legislators in favor of the South Quincy Station were the labor unions.

The entire Quincy legislative delegation, Rep. Joseph Brett, William Delahunt, Brownell, Cerasoli voted against the construction of the South Quincy Station.

Earlier in the week, Senator Arthur Tobin led the fight against the station in the Senate. Sen. Tobin said: "The residents of Quincy and Braintree are not trying to stop the MBTA expansion. We are trying to enable the expansion of the system to go forth faster to Sharon, Norwood, Randolph, Avon, Stoughton, Dedham, Scituate, Duxbury and Weymouth.

"These are the communities where the commuting motorists live who would be using the South Quincy Station complex going in and out of Boston."

'Decision Already Made'

Cerasoli Calls MBTA Hearing 'Farce'

Rep. Robert Cerasoli labeled Wednesday's scheduled South Quincy MBTA Station public hearing "a farce."

In testimony before federal officials at the day-long hearing Wednesday, Cerasoli said the decision to build the South Quincy Station had already been made despite strong opposition expressed by local residents. He said:

"I'm afraid the true purpose of this hearing has not been served because the decision of this hearing has already been made. This hearing is a farce."

Tracing his history of involvement in the South Quincy controversy, Cerasoli said he knew the residents' opposition to the South Quincy Station because he had "knocked on doors in South Quincy," gathering voters' views on the station.

Cerasoli also worked last year to re-word what he claimed was a "confusing and unclear" public policy question regarding the building of the station - a question which appeared on the November ballot in wards which would be directly affected by a new station. When the question was not re-worded, Cerasoli organized an education campaign, telling voters of the claimed confusion in wording.

Prior to the hearing, Cerasoli told The Quincy Sun the responsibility for the building of the station rested solely in the hands of Mayor Walter J. Hannon and Gov. Michael Dukakis. He said:

"If anyone is responsible for this station in South Quincy, it is the mayor of Quincy and the governor of the Commonwealth. This is a classic example of the government being completely unresponsive to the people's wants and needs. If there is any renegeing on responsibility to the people of Quincy, it is because of the mayor and the governor." Local opposition to the South Quincy Station focuses on aggravation of flooding problems in the area, increase in traffic on residential streets and rampant development in the area which residents feel would be triggered by the new station.

The proposed South Quincy Rapid Transit Station complex planned by the State Department of Public Works includes the MBTA Red Line station, an 1,800-2,000 car parking garage, access ramps to the station and circulation roadways for buses and "kiss-and-ride" passengers. The DPW plans realignment of Rte. 3 through North Braintree, construction of a collector distributor paralleling Rte. 3 and the upgrading of Capen's Circle in Braintree.

Wednesday's day-long hearing was held by the MBTA and the DPW on the Authority's application for $21 million in supplemental federal assistance towards building of the transit-related facilities.

The hearing was scheduled to take place in the Quincy Masonic Temple in two sessions: from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 7-11 p.m.

QCA Urges Mayor To 'Scrap'

Underpass Plans

The Quincy Citizens Association has urged Mayor Walter J. Hannon to "scrap permanently" any plans to build a traffic underpass on Hancock St. near City Hall.

At the association's last monthly meeting, members unanimously passed a resolve registering "unalterable opposition" to an underpass in Quincy Square.

In a letter to Hannon, Pasquale S. DiStefano, president of the association, said the organization's reasons for opposing the project. He said:

"We urge that the underpass idea be scrapped permanently...It is an unnecessary expenditure of money, the underpass will create more problems for Quincy Square than it is worth - and we feel that the people of Quincy definitely do not want it!"

Graduates Urged To Help Shape Nation's Course

NORTH QUINCY GRADUATES don caps and gowns for commencement exercises Wednesday at Veterans Memorial Stadium. From the left are, Cheryl Hogan, Bruce Shea, Stephen McCormick and Tricia Daly.

School Supt. Dr. Lawrence P. Creedon Wednesday night challenged Quincy's graduating seniors to use their talents to help shape the course of the country, ensuring the survival of our nation and its people.

In remarks prepared for delivery Wednesday night at the joint commencement of Quincy and North Quincy High Schools and Quincy Vocational Technical School, Dr. Creedon quoted the words of Winston Churchill who said: "We shape our buildings and then our buildings shape us." Dr. Creedon told parents, friends and graduates gathered at Veterans Memorial Stadium:

"In a very significant way, this evening marks the beginning of a new construction period. With this commencement the graduates need to appreciate that for most of them their life pattern has been formed, their building - their individuality - has taken shape and that its final appearance now rests with each one of them.

"In leaving here this evening our graduating seniors need to appreciate that we have labored and loved in shaping them, now they must start shaping the future, and thus us, as they begin to assume positions of responsibility in their chosen fields."

After Marathon Hearing MBTA Fight May Go To Washington

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

The next round in the South Quincy MBTA Station battle may be fought in Washington, D.C.

Rep. Elizabeth Metayer of Braintree, calling last week's MBTA-DPW marathon hearing "intentionally stacked", is helping to organize a meeting with federal officials to represent clear opposition sentiment to the proposed MBTA station.

According to official figures, 109 city and state officials and individuals representing organizations or themselves, testified in favor of the Station while 32 recorded themselves as opposed, at the public hearing last Wednesday at Masonic Temple, Quincy Center.

On the citizens' front, Pasquale DiStefano, president of the Quincy Citizens Association, is co-ordinating a delegation of other Quincy community organizations to accompany Mrs. Metayer to Washington, D.C.

During the day-long hearing that wound up at 1 a.m. Thursday, 11½ hours of testimony was heard before a group of MBTA and DPW officials.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon, speaking in favor of the South Quincy site, recalled the apprehensions and reservations of Quincy City Councillors and Quincy residents when the Red Line first came into Quincy. In testimony Wednesday, he said:

"Residents anticipated traffic problems, high assessments and other negative changes. But these changes didn't happen. Property values haven't gone down; they've gone up. Apartments haven't dominated our established area; they've been built only where zoning permits. Traffic in Wollaston and

Museum, Library Dedicated As 'Living Center Of Historical Activities'

The Quincy Historical Society's museum and library at Adams Academy was dedicated Sunday not as "a private club" but as "a living center of historical activity."

Historical Society President H. Hobart Holly said:

"This building is symbolic of a heritage from the past that will now serve the future. This is not to be a private club or just a place of preservation, but a living center of historical activity."

Attending dedication ceremonies were Mayor Walter J. Hannon, former mayor Thomas Burgin, representing the Adams and Temple Fund which leased the Adams Academy building to the Historical Society for 99 years, Rep. William Delahunt and City Councillors Warren Powers, Leo Kelly, Joseph LaRaia, John Lydon and John Quinn, and School Committeeman Francis McCauley.

The Society held an open house from 3-6 p.m. with several hundred guests and visitors touring the renovated building.

Mrs. Rudolf Oberg, society librarian, and Lawrence Yerdon, society museum director, served as co-chairmen of the open house.

North Quincy hasn't congested the streets. These communities today are just as good and solid as they were before the MBTA. Some are better."

Hannon, responding to residents' fear of an aggravated flooding problem in South Quincy as a result of the Station, said the MBTA has pledged to spend $1 million to control flooding there. He added:

"I would like to go on record to say if this is not enough, then it is expected that the State, and the MBTA will pay their fair share to do away with this problem of flooding."

But Rep. Thomas Brownell and other opponents disagreed. In his prepared testimony, Brownell said:

"I'm convinced in the long run that a station and a 2,000-car parking garage at the proposed location can only have a detrimental impact on the South Quincy community. The area has had a long history of frequent and perennial flooding which will be aggravated ten-fold by the construction of this project."

During his testimony Rep. Robert Cerasoli quoted extensively from the Environmental Impact Statement prepared for the South Quincy site. Near the conclusion of his statement, Cerasoli said:

"In my mind the environmental impact statement has proved that not only will there be a tremendous impact felt by the local community, but that with the construction of the station, uncontrolled development will come and major traffic problems will occur on local streets."

Cerasoli called the hearing "a farce...perpetrated on the people of the community," saying the decision to build the station has already been made.

DiStefano said he would meet with other Quincy organizations this week, formulating "a strategy" by Sunday to handle the MBTA controversy. He said:

"I'm prepared to go to Washington if we develop this as an option at our meeting. I feel we can lick this for Quincy. We'll never stop fighting this station until they start building it."

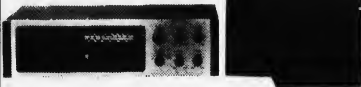

The Quincy City Council and the Quincy State House delegation are all on record as

STRICTLY PERSONAL Rudeness doesn't solve problem

By PAT AND MARILYN DAVIS
Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
I have six children. They range in age from 4 to 15. When people find out that I have six children, you would think I had committed a crime.

When my 5-year-old started school, the kindergarten teacher said, "I assume this is the last." We support our family and do not intend to have any more, but why can't people mind their own business?

Mother of Six

Dear Mother:
Many people are sincerely concerned about overpopulation, and this is a very real problem. However, being rude is not the answer.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
I make a reasonably good living. We can afford to have a nice home, a new car every three or four years, and short vacations. My wife does not see it this way. We happen to be of more modest means than most of the people on our street. My wife wants a shiny new car every year and new furniture to match the neighborhood's.

I own an appliance store and there is just so much money that I can earn. The result of this conflict is that my wife pouts and makes me miserable. No amount of talking can convince her that we can't afford everything. How can I slay this green-eyed jealous monster?

No White Knight
Dear White Knight:

Why not suggest to your wife that she do some volunteer work instead of spending so much time concentrating on herself? Such contacts may broaden her narrow view.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
I am 18 years old and I want to be an interior decorator. For a long time I've been interested in upholstering furniture and other related projects. The problem is that I'm a guy and my parents think that I must need hormone treatments. I am not feminine. I like girls and I know I am perfectly normal. But nearly everyone has this impression of a limp-wristed interior decorator.

There is a fine art center near my home that will provide me an excellent background; and when I graduate, I will have a profession that will provide me a good living. Put in a word for me. People should not pigeonhole professions. Not all lumberjacks are rough and not all construction workers use off-color language.

Irritated

Dear Irritated:
Go ahead and start the classes. Eventually your parents will come around to your way of thinking. Good luck with your career.

Trim parties with grace

By RIV TOBIN
Copley News Service

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
We are four wives whose husbands and we are feeling the pinch of inflation. We have always given beautiful parties in the past. Our menus included filet of beef, asparagus, flambé desserts and fine wines. You know, the whole bit. Two of us think we should cut back and have less expensive parties. The other two women feel this might, in some way, reflect on our husbands. What is your opinion?
— Four in Florida

Dear Four:
I agree with the other two women. It would, indeed, reflect on your husbands. It would show their guests you were able to serve a tasty dish of stew and rice with gracious aplomb. It would also tell your guests you stand by your husband and are willing (and able) to renounce when necessary. And who ever said the best parties were built around a rack of lamb, asparagus tips and vintage wine? To go into debt to try and impress one's guests is not only foolish but short-sighted.

Dear Mrs. Tobin:
Please settle an argument from two points of British royalty. What is the difference, if any, between the heir apparent and the heir presumptive? Also what's the distinction between the queen mother and the dowager queen? — Just a Mr. and Mrs.

Dear Mr. and Mrs.:
According to the American College Dictionary, an heir apparent is one whose right is indefeasible, provided he survives the ancestor. Prince Charles is the heir apparent to the British throne. An heir presumptive is one whose expectation may be defeated by the birth of a nearer heir.

A queen dowager is the widow of a king. A queen mother is a queen dowager who is also the mother of a reigning sovereign. Please note that the words queen dowager and queen mother are spelled with small letters. In speaking of THE Queen Mother, the term becomes a pronoun and so is capitalized.

-----STITCHING WITCHERY-----

Dear Betty:
When they say your sewing machine is out of time, what do they mean, and how does it act? — Mrs. Norman Setterburg, Clarinda, Iowa.
The timing of a sewing machine has to do with when the bobbin hook goes by the needle to pick up the thread.

If the hook passes by too soon, too late, too high or too low, you will have skipped stitches. It is possible for a machine to be so far out of time that it will not make a stitch at all.

Open your machine so you can see the bobbin operate. Now, turn the wheel slowly by hand and watch the threads make a stitch. It's fascinating! Adjusting the timing is not a difficult job for a good machine man.

City Awarded $15,000 For Freedom Park

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin announced Quincy has been awarded a $15,000 grant for its bicentennial project Freedom Park by the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission.

Tobin said Quincy numbers among 85 Massachusetts communities to receive matching project grants totaling $500,000.

in the third round of the Bicentennial Grant Program.

Noting the involvement of many Quincy civic organizations which worked to attain the grant, Tobin said:

"The award of this grant is an indication of community involvement in the best interests of the city."

Brownell Seeks More Mosquito Control Spraying

Rep. Thomas F. Brownell has requested the South Shore Mosquito Control Project to conduct additional spraying throughout Quincy to control "a large number" of "very troublesome" mosquitoes.

In a letter to Project Director Simon Veneau, Brownell said he has received "numerous complaints" from residents of Houghs Neck, Adams Shore, Merrymount and other sections of the city, asking that something be done about the mosquito problem. Brownell wrote Veneau:

"It is my understanding that your Project has already sprayed the city of Quincy. However, I respectfully request that additional spraying take place due to the increased number and size of the mosquitoes."

3 Memorials Dedicated At Lincoln Hancock School Ceremonies

The Lincoln-Hancock Community School was formally dedicated Sunday with the unveiling of three memorials, the presentation of a flag and a symbolic key, musical selections and student-guided tours of the building.

Robert E. Pruitt, former superintendent of Quincy Public Schools was the main speaker at the ceremonies. Pruitt now serves as a senior research associate specialist for community colleges and technical institutes in Washington, D.C.

Memorials were dedicated in honor of the late Dr. Charles Djerf, Private John W. Jackson, a World War II Marine killed in Iwo Jima who lived on the school's present site, and the Grossman family.

Barry Coletti, architect of the school, made a symbolic key presentation and Rabbi Jacob Mann offered a dedication prayer.

John R. Graham, executive director of Quincy Heritage presented a youngster with the official Quincy Heritage flag.

A granite memorial to the late Private John W. Jackson was unveiled at the dedication ceremonies.

Jackson, a World War II Marine killed in Iwo Jima, lived on the present site of the Community School.

A short summary of Jackson's life was given by City Clerk John Gillis, a member of the William R. Caddy Marine Corps League, and friend of the Jackson family.

Mrs. Jackson, mother of the soldier, assisted by Mayor Walter J. Hannon and her sons Joseph and George unveiled the monument, erected at the base of the school's flagpole.

John Jackson, a 13 year old nephew placed a wreath in front of the monument, and Joseph Jackson, a 5 year old nephew presented Morrie Hibbard the principal of the new school with an American flag for the school.

The colorguard for the William R. Caddy Post presented arms while the flag was raised from half staff to full staff.

The Lincoln-Hancock Community School Center was dedicated in memory of the late Dr. Charles Djerf and a memorial to the Grossman family was also announced in recognition of land donated for the present school site.

Following benediction of Rev. John Tierney, pastor of St. John's Church, buffet-style refreshments were served, courtesy of the Quincy Public Schools.

BIGGEST TEENAGE KILLER

The combination of drinking and driving is the biggest killer of all teenagers. Forty percent of all fatal accidents involving people under 25 also involve drinking and the automobile. The percentage gets worse as you go down the age ladder. Although drinking drivers of all ages are more likely to contribute to serious auto crashes than non-drinking drivers, the problem is aggravated when the driver is in his teens or early 20's.

Younger drivers who drink are statistically likely to become more involved in traffic crashes than older, more experienced drivers. Unfortunately, 18-year-olds are still learning the driving task at the same time they are learning how to drink. The results are proving to be tragic. This factor is especially evident in the states which have reduced the legal drinking age to 18. Without exception, the number of fatal crashes involving drivers between the ages of 18 and 20 have increased significantly.

$4,328 Quincy Merchandise Up For Bid On Ch.2 Auction

Merchandise collected from 44 businesses and individuals throughout Quincy and valued at $4,328, is being auctioned this week during the 10th annual Channel 2 auction to benefit the station.

The nine-day auction, televised over WGBH-TV, Ch. 2 began Friday, May 30 and will continue through Saturday, drawing an anticipated audience of 1.4 million viewers bidding for antiques and other items auctioned on the air.

Merchandise was collected by Quincy's 11-member team of "Go-Getters" headed by Kathleen Mitchell. Other "Go-Getters" are Ann Pegg, Kathy Hawley, Mary Collins, Betty Swanton, Maureen Roche, Jolene Hack, Mary Denneen, Martha Regan, Ann McInness and Ellen Harrington.

Assisting in the collection of antiques and other donations was the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association [QCBPA].

Businesses and individuals throughout the city donating to the Channel 2 auction were:

Barker's Stationery, Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Store, Blue Hill Girl Scout Council, Boston Harbor Marina Tennis Club, Capitol Super Markets, Clifford's-Paterson Flower Stores, Cobbler's Hut, The Craft Cottage.

Dutton's, E. A. Erikson, Fashion Floors, Flower Basket, Gloria's Ceramics, Granite City Electric, Granite City Hardware, Donald Hayward, Hanover Beauty Academy, Jason's Luggage and Music Shop, Kenso Communications.

Kincaide Furniture, Milton's, Bernie's Modern-Formal Shop, Montj Granite Co., O'Lindy's Bowling Alley, Peter's Landing, Personal Sportswear, Quincy Furniture, Quincy Heritage, Quincy Typewriter.

Ralph Roberto, Rogers Jewelry Store, Lou Rizzo Hair Styles, Sawyer's Campus Shop, Second-Handtiques, Settles Glass Co., Shea Formica, Sir Speedy Instant Print, South Shore Skin Diver, Spahn Studio of Music, Stone Jewelry, Strong Enterprises, Dick Sutherland, Wollaston Florist and Arthur Wyer.

Channel 2, one of three stations operated by the WGBH Educational Foundation, relies solely on public funds to maintain its programming. Faced with rising costs, the station depends more and more on Auction revenues for its daily running expenses.

Last year, auctioneers sold 9,500 items, earning a total of $600,000 for the Station.

Firefighters To Receive
 $2.50 per Day

At its meeting this week the City Council received a petition asking that the land bounded by Rawson Rd, Hampden Circle and Willett St., Wollaston, be purchased for a public playground.

Referred to committee was a request to appropriate $50 a year for the use of the church tower of the West Quincy M.E. Church for locating the fire alarm bell.

The sum of $9,400 was appropriated for the purchase of land for the new Wollaston school.

Also approved were new wage schedules for the city's firemen. Captains were to receive $1,100 a year and lieutenants $1,050. Permanent firemen would receive $2.50 a day for the first two years and $2.75 thereafter.

NAME FOR NEW WARD 6 SCHOOL DEBATED

There was a controversy surrounding the naming of the new Ward 6 School.

A small faction wanted to call it the Montclair School, but it was pointed out that this would be misleading since the school was in fact located not in Montclair, but in Bellevue Park.

Two other names suggested for the school were Dexter Wadsworth, for former school committeeman and William Everett, for former principal at the Adams Academy

REDUCED ELECTRIC RATES ANNOUNCED

Quincy Electric Light and Power Company reduced its rates this week from 17 cents per kilowatt hour to 15 cents.

It was noted that this reduction would amount to considerable savings for the consumer, while it would cut revenue for the company by $6,000 per year.

Light company Supt. Austen said that there would be further reductions as the volume of electric use was increased.

MONEY APPROPRIATED FOR GRANITE DISPLAY

The Granite Manufacturers voted to appropriate $1,500 for the display of specimens of Quincy granite and Quincy workmanship at the national convention of Retail Granite Dealers of America in Rochester, N.Y. There would be one piece of granite from every yard and if possible one from each quarry on display.

Survival Receives $153,050 Grant Honors 47 Volunteers At Dinner

A second year grant for $153,050 from the National Institute of Drug Abuse within the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has been made to Survival, Inc., the Quincy-based drug and youth program serving the South Shore.

The grant announcement was made by Robert F. Hassey, Executive Director of the multi-faceted program at the fifth anniversary dinner of Survival recently at North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall.

With receipt of the grant, the organization will be able to continue much of its work with troubled area youth, but must strive, stressed Hassey "to improve our state and local funding base which still makes up the other 40 to 50 per cent of our total budget".

The dinner, which attracted a large number of organizational and political leaders from the area, served to highlight many of the accomplishments of the agency from its shaky beginning in 1970 to its strong performance in the last two years. Forty-seven current volunteers in many of the agency's activities were also honored and presented certificates of appreciation by the President of the Board of Directors, Ted Pina, and honorary president, retired Police Captain Frank Vallier.

In addition to the evening's main speaker, Judge Albert Kramer, presiding justice of Quincy District Court, and remarks by Hassey, Pina, and Vallier, the audience also heard a proclamation declaring the week of May 19 as Survival Week by Mayor Walter J. Hannon, Herb Fontaine of WJDA and a member of the Board of Directors of Survival was emcee.

Judge Kramer pointed to the changing needs of the courts and the importance of community-based treatment centers such as Survival as viable alternatives to incarceration. He stressed rehabilitation as a wise course of action for young offenders as against detention.

Captain Vallier related to some of the early days of the agency and the efforts of the late Dr. Charles Djerf and Joseph Whiteman to bring the treatment program for young drug abusers into Quincy. He mentioned how out of earlier difficulties, a great deal of acceptance and community understanding has been helping the program in recent years.

Pina, also the Milton Youth Coordinator, spoke on the expansion of Survival's services to the entire South Shore and how towns other than Quincy have been seeing how some of their youth needs and problems can better be served by an agency which is not located directly in their own community.

Hassey pointed to the commitment of the many persons at the dinner who have dedicated themselves to helping others. However, he was cautious as to the extent of how far the grant would go.

"Just as we do not and cannot operate in a vacuum in the South Shore community, neither can we 'survive' without financial support," he said. "With great cuts impending in human services at the state and local level, programs such as Survival must continue to fight for their very existence. And it is not merely a fight for our jobs, security, and the like, but it is a battle for many young persons in the area who are confused and do not always know where to turn."

Among the other head table guests were Norfolk County Dist. Atty. George Burke, School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon, former Quincy Mayor James McIntyre, retired Judge Gertrude Halloran, Mrs. Maude Taylor Johnson, a founder of the program, and Mrs. Lillian Whiteman, widow of the late Joseph Whiteman.

Volunteers receiving certificates included:

Cyd Barret, Tom Butler, Mary Devlin, Bernice Entin, Peter Fredrickson, Alberta Gentile, Rich Gopen, Dennis Haley, Alyce Kenney, Diane King, Marj Knowles, Larry Kurtzer, Al Leito, Carol Lamb, Cathy McHugh, Roberta Mullens, Lesley Maltman, Linda Perry, Diane Petrella, Tim Poole, Alyce Souden, Peggy Schultz, Alice Strausbaugh, Nicky Tirrell, Bill Tilden, Paula Williams and Nancy Votraie, all of Quincy.

Evelyn Finn, Nancy Arnold, Ruth Lumenh, Alan Lindsay and Christine Torsiglieri of Weymouth, Gerri Frank, Peter Kalitsis, Rosemarie Melegian, Barbara Reynolds, Linda Romano, Phyllis Spector and Gerald Shusterman of Randolph.

Phyllis Iannella, Joan Parkhurst and Mike Swanton of Braintree, Nina Gardner of Rockland, Lori Cole of Holbrook, Bob Brown and John Coffey of Milton, and Sandra Macaluso of Hyde Park.

LaRaia Sees 'Very Close Election'

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Another poll has been taken for mayoralty candidate Joseph LaRaia and he seems to like the results.

The poll reportedly cost $1,000—was taken by the same firm that conducted one for him several months ago—and sampled 500 Quincy voters.

The LaRaia camp—at this writing anyway—isn't putting out the results. But at the opening of the Quincy Historical Society's museum and library at Adams Academy Sunday, LaRaia was asked what the poll showed.

"It shows us close," he replied.

He indicated it showed Mayor Walter Hannon still leading, LaRaia still second, but gaining, and Grace Saphir third.

He said the results make him "optimistic" and he added: "At the very worst, this is going to be a very close election."

SPEAKING OF LA RAIJA, he certainly has a dedicated supporter-worker in Eleanor Woodward, his finance chairman. She underwent back surgery at New England Baptist Hospital Monday and for several days before, lying in her hospital bed, was making telephone calls to Quincy selling $6 tickets for a fund-raising family style buffet to be held June 20, from 8 p.m. to midnight, at the Quincy Armory.

It was originally scheduled for the Fore River Clubhouse.

INSIDERS SAY Rep. William Delahunt will make it official around June 11: he's a candidate for city council at-large. It was reported here a couple of weeks ago that he was giving serious consideration to it.

SCHOOL COMMITTEEMAN John Sullivan really knows how to dress socially. Certainly when he's going to high school proms. At the Quincy High School prom he wore a blue and white tux and at North Quincy's a red and black one.

FRIENDS REPORT Peter O'Connell, president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association and an official of the O'Connell Brothers Construction Co., is giving thought to running for the school committee.

THOSE Forget-me-not flowers at the Senior Citizens Bicentennial Ball were donated by Paul Harold. The flower was voted the official city Bicentennial flower by the City Council at the request of the senior citizens clubs of Quincy.

A FORMER CITY official who has won many an election is telling close associates he may run for the Ward 2 council seat. But at this moment, anyway, he is not publicly saying so.

WELL, you'd have to say that Ken Runge, recently announced candidate for School Committee, has an eye-catching design for his campaign buttons: the "four R's"—reading, 'riting, 'rithmetic and Runge.

DORIS RICCIUTI, wife of Public Works Commissioner James Ricciuti, has nomination papers out for the School Committee but don't expect her to file them. She's going to devote her campaigning to re-electing Mayor Hannon.

SMILE DEPT: Jack Silverstein, the North Quincy druggist, says he knows a fellow who is a born executive. His father owns the business.

100 In Walk-a-thon Raise $2,285 For Heritage Trees

A total of $2,285 was turned in Saturday by 100 walkers in the first Quincy Heritage "tree walkathon".

The four top winners were each awarded a 10-speed bike from the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. The four are: Liane Swan, 35 Greenview St., Lisa Glynn, 106 West St., Timothy Cardwell, 76 President's Lane, and John Pickering, 25 Glendale Road.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon and representatives from the business and professional associations in Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy presented 22 other prizes including four radios, three instamatic cameras, four time watches and an electronic calculator.

The walk began at 8:30 a.m. at North Quincy High School and ended at 10:30 a.m. at St. John's where the prizes were awarded.

The walkathon commemorates the personal motto of Quincy-born John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States - "Plant Trees for the Future".

Money raised in the walk will be used to plant trees in the city.

The other 22 winners are:

Michael King, 16 Rawson Rd., Mary Crehan, 47 Ridgeway St., Mary Johnston, 46 Buckingham Rd., Angela Cristiani, 39 Sturtevant Rd., Sharon Tanswich, 128 Willard St., Lois Leonhardi, 123 Cedar St., Jennifer McCauley, 210 Manet Ave., Tina Kelly, 35 Schlager Ave., Billy Bourikas, 38 St. Ann's Rd.

Loretta Prendeville, 93 Summit Ave., Colleen Mahoney, 192 Rhoda St., Lisa Welby, 238 Marlboro St., Susan Smith, 22 Caledonia Ave., Nancy Higgins, 8 Captains Walk, Robert Mudge, 264 Furnace Brook Pkwy, Carole Davis, 67 Bartlett St., Jill Nelson, 221 Whitwell St., Joanne Crombie, 1276 Sea St., Tommy Pettengrew, 280 Water St., Lisa Stackhouse, 8 Channing St., Tyna Sidley, 392 Water St., Linda Mahoney.

Life styles change. Traditions and customs change. So does funeral service. Today, no two funerals are alike, because no two families are alike. Today a competent funeral director must provide a broader spectrum of services than ever before.

funeral service isn't what it used to be

Dr. Creedon Urges Graduates To Help Shape Nation's Course

The combined 1975 graduating senior classes totaled 1,195 students: 510 from North Quincy High School, 495 from Quincy High School and 190 from Quincy Vocational Technical School.

Approximately 800 graduating seniors will go on to further schooling, ranging from short apprentice or vocational courses to four-year baccalaureate programs. Of that number, over half have received a scholarship or achievement award.

Patricia Foley, president of the Class of 1975 at Quincy High School and at Quincy Vocational Technical School welcomed all those attending graduation exercises.

Paul Keeley, president of the senior class at North Quincy High School, introduced Mayor Walter J. Hannon who then extended greetings to those gathered at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Student speakers issued challenges to fellow classmates in separate addresses representing the three Quincy high schools. Cynthia A. Gunnison of Quincy Vocational Technical School spoke on "Vocational Education", Kathleen Keating of Quincy High School posed the question "A Day Or A Lifetime?" and Jane E. McGivray of North Quincy High School spoke on "A Bicentennial Graduation".

Graduates were presented by Dr. Creedon following a combined band selection under the direction of Anthony C. Ferrante.

The complete text of Dr. Creedon's graduation address follows:

"In speaking of the impact that social institutions have on the lives of individuals as well as on civilizations, Winston Churchill once remarked:

"We shape our buildings and then our buildings shape us."

"It occurs to me that all of us drawn together here this evening out of concern and love for our graduating seniors can identify with and understand Churchill's message.

"For just shy of two decades you as parents and loved ones, and we as teachers have been building. Our construction materials have been time and energy, skill and competence, concern and discipline, dedication and sacrifice, compassion and love. Our product is assembled here before us and we are proud.

"As educators our goal has been to help these young people to become self-fulfilling individuals, competent workers and good citizens in a world that is maximally effective for all. And, while we have suffered our set backs and agonized over our failures, I feel that all of us can take pride not only in our effort, but also our accomplishment.

"In a very significant way, this evening marks the beginning of a new construction period. With this commencement the graduates need to appreciate that for most of them their life pattern has been formed, their building - their individuality - has taken shape and that its final appearance now rests with each one of them. In leaving here this evening our graduating seniors need to appreciate that as we have labored and loved in shaping them, now they must start shaping the future, and thus us, as they begin to assume positions of responsibility in their chosen fields.

"A brief glance at a few of their accomplishments while seniors indicates that they are up to the challenge. Approximately 800 of the 1,200 of them will go on to further schooling, ranging from short apprentice or vocational courses to four year baccalaureate programs. Of that number, more than one-half have received a scholarship or achievement award. Each of these has been listed in a separately prepared booklet.

"In music our instrumental and vocal groups continue to distinguish themselves by performing on more than 150 occasions and taking honors wherever they appear or compete.

"In the theatre arts our young dramatists at Quincy High School staged productions of "Damn Yankees" and "An American Primitive", while North Quincy High School offered an original bicentennial production, "Shades of Red, White and Blue".

"At Quincy Vocational Technical School the Vica Club [Vocational and Industrial Clubs of America], saw re-birth and its student leaders participated in a national conference in Washington, D.C.

"Our Air Force ROTC unit has grown to number more than 100 cadets representing all three high schools.

"In athletics our young men and women while adjusting to competition in a new league and to expanded programs for girls went on to enter tournament play - baseball and soccer at North Quincy High School and tennis at Quincy High School. I could go on indefinitely citing the singular and group accomplishments of this graduating class but obviously time will not permit, so in closing, I would like to speak to the seniors for just one moment and offer but one thought.

"You are Americans and be proud of it. And, while our constitutional form of government guarantees to you the opportunity to grow and become what you must, it is incumbent upon you to realize that this nation's survival requires that it is in you that all of us must place our trust."

LaRaia Urges Residents To Be Active

City Councillor Joseph J. LaRaia has urged Wollaston residents to continue to play an active role in their neighborhood and their government.

Addressing residents at the home of William Huber, 149 Elmwood Ave., LaRaia cited the closing of a Wollaston adult book store as an example of what can be done through citizen input.

"You've shown what citizens can do," LaRaia, a candidate for mayor said, "I only hope you will remain active in the future."

He said another example of citizen involvement would be the way South Quincy residents emphasized the adverse environmental and financial effects of an MBTA station there.

"Without the citizens coming forward, we might have had a station there without fully appreciating its effect," LaRaia said.

And he said, it is the duty of public officials to listen to the input.

"If we don't rely on you, we're selling you short," he said. LaRaia also warned the residents that Wollaston Beach could become a "honky tonk area" if residents are not actively involved in its development.

He described the decision to combine the city's rubbish with the garbage as a "mandate by the mayor's office."

"Proper dialogue with the public occurred only after the decision was made," LaRaia said. "And this is a contradiction to my concept of government."

Quincy Bay Dredging Disposal Area Changed

A change in the ocean disposal site for 31,500 cubic yards of dredged material from Quincy Bay is announced by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Morgan R. Rees, Chief, Permits Branch, at Waltham, said the Mass. Department of Public Works, Division of Waterways, will dispose of the material in the Foul Area Dumping Grounds outside Boston Harbor rather than at the Boston Lightship Dumping Grounds. The newly designated disposal area is 9 1/2 nautical miles northeast of the site of the former Boston Lightship.

All other specifics of the permit application for dredging the approach channel and basin in front of Squantum and Wollaston Yacht Clubs remain the same, Rees said. The change in sites resulted from comments received following announcement of the application dated March 4.

ENC To Conduct Day Camp

Eastern Nazarene College for the second year will conduct a Day Camp program for boys and girls ages 8 to 11.

Purpose of the camp is to provide beginning skills and recreation in basketball, soccer, tennis, softball, volleyball, gym hockey, kick ball, crafts and archery. The new athletic facilities at the college will be made available for this program.

The skills can be developed at a maximum capacity due to a limited enrollment and adult staff. Further information about the camp can be obtained by calling Joe Rapalje at the college.

Wollaston Assn. Meeting Re-scheduled

The meeting of the Wollaston Community Association scheduled for Monday June 2, has been rescheduled to Wednesday June 4 at 7:30 p.m. at the Wollaston Legion Post. At the meeting plans for the Fourth of July Field Day will be finalized. Additional volunteers or interested citizens are invited to attend.

THE SEARCH

One snowy winter evening my sister went to the corner drug store. Twenty minutes after she had left it began to snow, very hard and get windy. My mom got worried about my sister. She told me to take the horse and sleigh and look for my sister.

Quickly I got my winter coat and hat. The door was hard to open because the wind was blowing against it.

I went into the barn and got the black and white horse. I hitched the horse to the red sleigh. I decided that I would cut through the spooky wood.

Riding through the dark woods, I could hear the echoing of the cold wind and feel the wetness of the cold snow as the flakes fell on my face.

As I came closer to the store I could see my sisters happy face smudge against the window. I stopped and tied up the horse and then I ran into the quiet store. I thanked lady at the store as did my sister. Then we were off for our sleigh ride home!

Students Speakers Challenge:

● Strive For Something Beyond Graduation

Graduation speakers representing Quincy's three high schools challenged fellow students to uphold Quincy's tradition of achievement, to strive for something beyond the mere day of graduation and to shatter the myth of the "trade school dummy".

Jane E. McGilvray of North Quincy High School spoke on "A Bicentennial Graduation", Kathleen Keating of Quincy High School posed the question, "A Day or A Lifetime?" and Cynthia Gunnison of Quincy Vocational Technical School spoke on "Vocational Education".

The complete texts of their speeches follows:

A Day Or A Lifetime?

By KATHLEEN KEATING
Quincy High School

"I would like to welcome you to this remembrance of our education which we call graduation. It is not here that we have graduated. We have progressively changed and graduated through the past twelve years. It is a continual process, it does not even stop today.

"For the past twelve years we have attended school. This ceremony depicts that fact, but it is not concerned about whether or not we have actually had twelve years of education. Whether we attended school for attendance alone or for education is what we must decide. Unjustly, this ceremony commemorates both. If it is only attendance that this ceremony represents for us, then it is just as meaningless as a kindergarten graduation.

"If the graduating ceremony has survived hundreds of years, there must be some importance to it. The only importance, I believe, that the traditional graduation holds is for the parents to witness the symbolic completion of their child's high school years.

● Uphold Tradition Of Achievement

"The graduating ceremony is for our parents—it's their ceremony. They have brought us up with many hopes and desires. They now see us accomplishing one of their goals. It is our parent's graduation from the years of struggle of putting us through school. This ceremony is to honor the parents of the graduates because it is they who feel the pride of a job well done.

"Today I do not feel pride for myself in this ceremony. I felt pride and failure in my everyday work and studies. My goal isn't to be given a ceremony at the end of twelve years of school, it was to do what I could each day. I did not live with the thought that I had to make it through the year: I wake up with the thought that I have to make it through the day. Yet today, I do feel happiness and pride for my parents because they have completed their goal, formally and traditionally, today.

"This ceremony is a physical symbol for our parents. They will look back on today and say, "My child graduated on this day". We have not graduated today. This change did not occur within one day but through the many years prior to today. We must warn our successors—your children—to beware of this false conception of the graduating ceremony. If we become too involved with the ceremony of graduation, if we merely sit and wait for it to come around, then we miss the significance of the ceremony—our education.

"If we have just sat back and awaited this moment for the past twelve years, then we have not essentially graduated and this ritual reflects the emptiness of the past twelve years.

"If each day is given the significance and importance which this one day is, then maybe there would be more students concerned with learning rather than getting out, and more parents concerned with the substance of education behind the ceremony rather than the insignificance of the ceremony itself."

● Shatter 'Trade School Dummy' Myth

KATHLEEN KEATING
Quincy High School

Vocational Education

By CYNTHIA GUNNISON
Quincy Vo-Tech High School

"Many people ask the question "What is Vocational Education?" It seems that there are so few people who really know what this is.

"Years ago this education was classified as a "Trade School". This was where all the "dummies" who couldn't make it in their academic courses went. There are still some people today who have the same feeling.

"But it's not true. I know, I went this route. I've been there and worked there. This education has given me the opportunity to decide early, my future, and what it will be like.

"Vocational Education is the developing, in a student, of a marketable skill to be used upon entering the world of work.

"The difference between this type of education as opposed to a high school education, is the advantage of combining academic and skilled areas. Another advantage is that you can also deal with instructors who are able to bring in their work experiences.

"There are many reasons why a student may take up this type of education. They may be influenced by parents or a relative in a certain trade area. A guidance counselor or a friend may influence them as well. It could be that the student didn't feel that he or she would be as satisfied with an all academic course. The most important reason may be the necessity for obtaining a marketable skill, as soon as possible.

"Having done that, the most important question any senior in any school would ask is "Where will I go from here?". Coming from the Vocational-Technical School you know because you have a skill. We now have the opportunity to take this skill and capitalize on it.

"However, even now the doors of education are not closed. Some of us may feel higher education will be essential. Many graduates go to school every year, while others find a job in the community.

"In doing our job, as best we can, we gain self-respect, the respect of our fellow workers and perform an important function in the community.

"If we use our education the best we know how, maybe the old theory of "trade school" dummies will go out of peoples minds. It's now up to the graduating class of '75" and the years yet to come to show people this and say "I'm from Quincy Vocational-Technical School and I am proud to have had the opportunity to go there!"

A Bicentennial Graduation

By JANE E. MCGILVRAY
North Quincy High School

"As our nation prepares for its bicentennial celebration, the city of Quincy will undergo many changes. These alterations will generate a new enthusiasm in all of us as we reminisce about the great heritage of our city.

"Quincy, most renowned for its home of two presidents, is a city of much honor and respect. The accomplishments and great minds which our city has produced are tremendous attributes to ourselves and to the country. Let us first appreciate the established industries of Quincy.

"Quincy became internationally known as a shipbuilding center during the 18th century. During this era, Quincy citizens with initiative, courage and skill created the fastest ships afloat. During World War I and II the nation again looked to the Fore River Shipyard for the construction of cruisers, battleships and submarines.

"From those times through the present, Quincy Shipbuilders continue to uphold a reputation of the best workmanship and greatest in modernity of design and architecture.

"In addition to shipbuilding, quarrying, another of Quincy's early industries, also remains active. Years ago, great boulders lined the hills of West Quincy. The stone hewn from the side of these quarries became most desirable because of its solidarity and consistency impervious to weather.

"As the popularity of Quincy granite spread, mobilization of this precious stone remained rudimentary. It was not until the proposed erection of the Bunker Hill Monument site in Charlestown that transportation of the granite became feasible. Few people are aware of the important part that Quincy played in the awakening of a new era in American transportation. In order to convey the stone from West Quincy, the country's first commercial railroad was established. Soon the granite was transported throughout the country and even today, Quincy granite constitutes many of the most notable structures in our nation.

"Yet Quincy is much more than hills of granite, a shipbuilding metropolis or a city of railroad tracks. Quincy is people.

Our city has produced many internationally famous persons most of whom stood as we today, to receive their Quincy diplomas. From graduation they continued to fulfill their ultimate dreams.

"In the entertainment world we are all familiar with individuals such as Ruth Gordon, Bill Dana and Billy DeWolfe - all products of the Quincy schools. It is also interesting that several businesses, for example, Grossman Enterprises and Howard Johnson's, were founded by Quincy residents. Even Dunkin Donuts and Howdy's made their debut in the Quincy area with the help of local citizenry.

"In other fields we note with pride persons such as:

John Doughty Receives Degree At Graham Junior

John J. Doughty of 100 Grand View Ave., Wollaston, has graduated from Graham Junior College, Boston.

He received the Associates in Science degree from the School of Communications with a major in Television Production.

Professor Robert Burns Woodward, a 1933 graduate of the Quincy school system awarded the 1965 Nobel prize in chemistry; Alice Bach Gould, top ranking historian; Willard Francis Crocker, elected to Canada's Tennis Hall of Fame and Charles Francis Adams who learned to sail on Quincy Bay and went on to become a superb international yachtsman.

"The individuals I have mentioned are but a few from a list which is endless. Sitting on the dias with us today are also Quincy residents of high accomplishment - our Mayor, Superintendent of Schools, principals and members of the school committee, only to name a few.

"As we receive our diplomas today, we all face a challenge that has been upheld by this city and its residents. Our parents and ancestors worked diligently to provide the city of Quincy and the entire world with high standards of achievement and excellence. All of this and much more has been bestowed upon us. Each member of the 1975 graduating class will be expected to make his or her own personal contribution in the finest Quincy tradition. I believe we can do it."

Morrisette, Wollaston Open Season Sunday

The Zone 6 American Legion baseball season gets under way Sunday with two games, Hingham at Morrisette [Adams Field at 2 p.m.] and Wollaston at Canton at 2.

Monday at 6 Quincy will play at Weymouth, Tuesday it will be Morrisette at Wollaston [8 o'clock under lights at Adams], and Wednesday Hingham will be at Quincy [Adams 8 o'clock], Morrisette at Braintree and Weymouth at Canton at 6.

Cohasset is a newcomer to the league this season and won't play its first game until June 15. Morrisette, the perennial Zone 6 champion, will be trying to regain the zone title, which it has won 18 times, after being edged by Weymouth two years ago and losing out to Braintree last summer.

Morrisette is again coached by Ray Cattaneo with Billy Corcoran and Connie Carozzi as assistants.

Cattaneo again has many of the top players from Quincy and North Quincy High schools and Abp. Williams.

Many of his players made the state schoolboy tourney this year, Tim Clifford, John Lawlor, Dennis McGuire, Steve McKinnon, Frank Micelli and Jack Rabel with North Quincy, Paul Messina, Mike McBride, Dave Perdios, Jim Roberts and Brian Corcoran with Abp. Williams and Chuck LoPresti with Sacred Heart of Weymouth.

Cattaneo is strong in pitching with Clifford, named the top pitcher in the Suburban League; Mark Dwyer, also an infielder, from Quincy High and Mass. Bay Community College; Lawlor, also a fine third baseman from North Quincy; McBride and Corcoran, fine Williams hurlers, and LoPresti, also a fine outfielder from Sacred Heart.

McKinnon led the Suburban League in batting with a .510 average and he and Mike MacKenzie from Quincy High are two of the finest schoolboy catchers in the area.

For infielders there are Dwyer, Lawlor, Rabel, Messina, who led Williams in batting; Perdios, Joe Glynn and Jim Maze from Sterling Junior High. In the outfield will be Mike DePolo, Quincy High and U. of Mass.; McGuire, who can also pitch if needed; Micelli, LoPresti and Paul Jackmauh from Thayer Academy.

"We have a fine group of players with many back from last year's team and I think we should do well," Cattaneo said. "We have some fine hitters, pitchers and defensive players."

Tom Malvesti is team manager, Frank Osborne the veteran scorer, Dan DiFedeico trainer and Gus Russo athletic officer.

Bob Jordan, manager a year ago, has taken over the coaching reins at Wollaston, which returned to the baseball wars last year after more than 15 years away. Jerry O'Leary is back as coach at Quincy Post.

All midweek games at Adams Field will again be played under the lights at 8 o'clock. Sunday and holiday games will start at 2 o'clock and midweek games in other towns at 6 o'clock.

● Baseball
North 'Cinderella' Team Runs Into Midnight

It took Coach Charlie Bunker six years but his North Quincy baseball team finally qualified for the state tournament and earned the title of "Cinderella" team with an excellent showing.

After winning six games in a row to qualify before being edged by Suburban League champion Waltham, 5-4, in the final game of the regular season, the Raiders topped Medford of the Greater Boston League, 10-6, in their first tournament game last Friday, but dropped a 10-inning 3-2 heartbreaker Saturday to Northwood's Bay State League champions and one of the top-seeded Class A teams.

The loss was especially disappointing because North, which played seven-inning games in the Suburban League, had a 2-0 lead going into the eighth inning.

John Lawlor started on the mound for North and, after pitching outstanding ball, told Bunker he was too tired to go any further and Bunker used Mike Kelly, who had seen virtually no varsity action. Kelly made one bad pitch and in the eighth inning Bill Breen hit a two-run homer over the 320-foot left field fence to tie the score.

It would have been a routine fly at Adams Field. When Kelly walked the first batter in the 10th, ace Tim Clifford relieved. A surprise two-strike bunt put men on first and second and pitcher Larry Brown, who held North to two hits, singled in the winning run. Dennis McGuire's throw from center field was a strike and Breen beat the throw by a hair.

"This was one of the finest schoolboy games I've been a part of and Brown is the best pitcher any of my teams has faced," Bunker said. "I'm very proud of my players for their fine comeback [10 wins in their last 12 games] and for their wonderful showing in the tournament. I have never been associated with a finer group of boys."

Bunker loses most of his players but expects big things from the junior varsity players who, under Coach Lou Ioanilli, had another standout year with a 16-3 record.

In their tournament opener the Raiders scored five runs in the second inning and rolled up a 10-3 lead. Bunker rested Clifford, but when reliever Pete Fallon was hit hard, Clifford returned to the mound.

Jack Rabel had three hits and Cooper Jordan and Bob Stack two each. Clifford had 13 strikeouts, his high for the season.

● Track
Raiders 3rd In E-Mass
Class B Championships

North Quincy's track team, which enjoyed its finest season in many years, had another good day last Saturday as it placed third in the Eastern Mass. Class B championships and had several qualifiers for next Saturday's all-state meet at Andover.

The Eastern Mass. qualifiers will compete against the Western and Central Mass. entries for the state title.

Lou Tozzi's Raiders scored 52 points in Class B. Quincy had 10 points in the Class A race.

In last week's class finals North's Mark Canavan won the half mile in 1:58.6. Bart Petracca ran another fine mile to place second, Brian Doherty was second and Matty Constantino sixth in the 220, the mile relay team finished second and the 440 relay team third.

Qualifying previously for Saturday's all-state meet were Brian Doherty in the long jump, Mike Nee and Pete Hemphill in the javelin and Artie Barrett in the two-mile.

Quincy's lone qualifier for Saturday's meet was Charlie Gaziano, who won the Class A javelin.

Qualifiers Saturday will compete in the New England meet on June 14, also at Andover.

Babe Ruth 13-Year Olds Shift To FR Field

Because Adams Field is being used for Eastern Mass. schoolboy tournament games, the Quincy 13-Year Old Babe Ruth League games scheduled there Saturday and Sunday have been moved to Fore River Field.

In the games in question, the Patriots will play the Red Sox Saturday and the Celtics and Bruins will clash Sunday. Both games at Fore River will start at 10 a.m.

Other weekend games in the new league will be Celtics vs. Lobsters Saturday and Patriots vs. Lobsters Sunday at Merrymount at 10.

opposing the building of the South Quincy Station. Making formal statements at the hearing were Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin, Rep. Joseph Brett, Rep. Thomas Brownell, Rep. Robert Cerasoli whose half-hour testimony drew heckles and boos from labor representatives in the crowd, and City Councillors James A. Sheets and Joseph LaRaia.

Also speaking against the station were Grace Saphir, candidate for mayor, and Daniel Raymond, candidate for Ward 2 City Councillor.

Mrs. Metayer said she was "absolutely flabbergasted" at the hearing proceedings and "discourtesy" displayed toward opponents of the Station. She insisted the number of proponents versus opponents can be overemphasized.

"Anyone can play the numbers game", she said this week. "I was very disturbed at the importation of a group of people standing at the back of the hall. They booed and heckled at every opponent of the station but kept very still while proponents were speaking."

Mrs. Metayer said she plans to invite all interested Quincy officials to accompany her to Washington, D.C. to meet with Fred Herrer, administrator for Urban Mass. Transportation Association, [UMTA]. Saying she would back a present effort by Braintree selectmen to hold a public hearing in that town, Mrs. Metayer said:

"I will support 100 per cent efforts to have a hearing. Proponents should speak on one evening and opponents on another to permit UMTA to consider the legitimacy and the value of claims and testimony."

During her testimony Mrs. Metayer questioned the legality of the proposed South Quincy Station. Quoting from a section of the Federal U.S. Code of Planning Requests and Funds, she said:

"No highway project may be constructed in any urban area of 50,000 population or more unless the responsible political officials of such urban area in which the project is located have been consulted and their views considered with respect to the corridor, the locality and design of the project."

Mrs. Metayer then said, "The only responsible political official who has been contacted is the Mayor of Quincy."

She also noted federal government regulations require consideration of alternate sites for a proposed highway project.

"This has not been done with the South Quincy site. All alternatives are on the same site, located only yards from one another."

Quincy Delegation Splits As

$112 Million Tax Package Defeated

By RON IACOBUCCI

STATE HOUSE - At a marathon session that went past midnight Monday, the House voted to defeat 131-95 the $112 million tax package.

The tax package was reported out by a conference committee of Senate and House leadership and consisted of:

A five cent increase in the 16 cent cigarette tax.

Elimination of the $1 exemption under the 5 per cent Massachusetts meals tax, except for primary and secondary school lunches and hot lunches for the elderly.

A 20 percent surcharge on liquor taxes.

A 10 percent tax on all professional sports tickets, dues to private clubs, movie, theater, circus and entertainment tickets.

An increase in the hotel and motel room occupancy tax to 10 per cent.

A new 2 cent a gallon tax on aviation fuel.

The Quincy legislative delegation was split on this issue with Reps. Brett and Delahunt voting in favor of the tax package and Reps. Cerasoli and Brownell voting against.

On Tuesday, reconsideration was defeated and the tax package was sent back to a second conference committee for further study.

In another matter, last week the House voted 125-107 to order to a third reading a bill that would raise the drinking age to 19. The entire Quincy delegation, Reps. Brett, Brownell, Cerasoli and Delahunt voted in favor of the bill.

How Would You Get $345 Million?

Chamber Conducting Poll On How New Taxes Should Be Raised

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce is conducting a survey among Quincy Sun readers to determine how they would raise an added $345 million in tax revenues believed needed to finance the 1976 state budget.

Last week, Governor Michael S. Dukakis signed a $110 million tax package passed by both the House and Senate. It will be effective July 1.

But according to Eric Swider, executive vice-president of the Chamber, the package will still need $345 million to pay off the proposed $450 million bond issue for the past state debts.

Listed below is a chart of current and proposed taxes and their unit yield. Swider explained:

"For instance, our current three per cent sales tax yields the state about $285 million annually. An increase of one per cent would produce $95 million in new revenue."

In preparing the chart's unit yields, the Chamber used the combined source of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation and the Secretariat of Administration and Finance.

The unit yields are approximate, Swider noted, and reflect what might happen in an average year.

Some taxes listed would be brand new ones, such as an entertainment or real estate sales tax.

Swider noted the Constitutional Convention has approved a 1976 voter referendum of the graduated income tax but said this potential cannot be considered for this year's budget since such a tax is currently unconstitutional.

To send in your suggestions, fill out the coupon below and mail it to The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St., Quincy.

Swider said compiled survey information will be made public and also become part of testimony before appropriate legislative hearings.

He said the Chamber plans to send results of the survey to Gov. Dukakis and members of the Taxation Committee. Swider said:

"We want to make sure the views of South Shore residents are reflected to the appropriate officials who will be making the decisions."

New MDC Commissioner Gives

St. Moritz Improvements 'Top Priority'

Planned improvements in the St. Moritz area have been given "top priority" by new MDC Commissioner William J. Byrne Jr.

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets told The Quincy Sun he was notified by Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin a directive was issued to all appropriate MDC agencies indicating work orders for the St. Moritz area should receive top consideration.

Both Sheets and Tobin have been working for the past year to secure these improvements. Sheets said:

"It appears that dates for the accomplishment of various projects will be established shortly."

Projects to be undertaken include the paving of the roadway between Chickatabot Rd. the accepted section of Bunker Hill Lane and the area around the horseshoe courts; cleaning of the St. Moritz pond; grading the area around the Curry Ballfield; blocking the roadway going into the ballfield area from Willard St. to prevent automobiles from destroying the grass and play areas; and studying the feasibility of improving the area now used by the campfire girls.

Sheets noted a fencing contract has already been awarded for the ballfield.

Does date owe boy a kiss?

By PAT And MARILYN DAVIS
Dear Pat and Marilyn:
 We are going to let you settle this argument. The students in my chemistry class are disagreeing about what is proper on a date. The guys feel that they aren't out of line to expect a kiss from the girl after spending money on gas, food, and entertainment. After all, we have asked the girl out, provided her with company, and shown her a nice evening. We are not asking too much. The girls say that they don't owe us a thing. They tell us that a kiss is not payment. It is something given from affection. What's the big deal?

The Guys in S 12
Dear Guys:
 My ballot is cast with the girls. Young men should not expect to be paid at the end of an evening for a job well done. A date isn't a toll bridge — you don't collect at the end of the journey.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
 I am bored with dumb classes. My mother insists that I take the college prep classes and they are worthless to me. Who speaks French? Most subjects have little to do with my future. My parents tell me that I need a trade or college, and I just can't see that a piece of paper is all that important. I want to be a cocktail waitress when I turn 21. In the meantime I can work a dinner shift in the restaurant. The girls get fantastic tips.

The fights at home are getting worse and worse. No one will give an inch. My parents have a big university all picked out. All I want is to quit school, get a job and my own apartment.

California Cutie

Dear Cutie:
 I've a compromise for you. For your parents, stick to the college course. For yourself, get a job as waitress NOW. It may not be nearly as glamorous as you think. It is hard work. In the meantime, keep up your grades. You may change your mind.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
 My mother is always criticizing me — and always in front of my friends. She will announce that my room is filthy and then go on and on about my disrespect. I've talked with my dad and he tells me to talk to Mom. I have talked with her and she always says that she doesn't criticize me in front of everyone. I really don't think that she knows what she does. How can I stop her? Even my friends have asked me how I can stand it.

Put Down Dear Pat Down:
 I think you and your parents need to see a family counselor. Somewhere the communication has been broken. If your mother is putting you down in the manner you say, there is something more to the problem than appears on the surface.

Today's Women

Two Million Weddings

'Rounds Of Gold' To Bind Eternal Love

This year more than two million weddings will take place, and even against the backdrop of changing lifestyles of young men and women, 99.6% of all brides will receive wedding rings. An equal number of grooms will wear "rounds of gold," as wedding rings were described by poets of yesteryear.

The origin of the gold wedding ring is almost lost in antiquity . . . to get his woman the caveman literally captured a girl by binding her ankles and wrists with rope. Only after he was certain she would not run away did he make her a finger ring of grass to symbolize the rope retainers. Grass eventually gave way to more permanent rings of flint, leather and ivory and, later, to iron, silver and gold.

Early church paintings show the Virgin Mary receiving a gold ring set with an "adamant" (early name for diamonds) from Joseph. It wasn't until the English Reformation that the bride received two rings—one at engagement and the second at the wedding ceremony.

In America, until 1890, wedding rings were mostly plain gold. In 1850, following the California Gold Rush, young Brooklynite John R. Wood began making plain gold wedding rings. Later, influenced by the ornateness of the Victorian period in the 1890's, his wedding ring designs began to feature diamonds and intricate florals and foliage, and geometric carvings.

Today, the 125 year old company, makers of ArtCarved diamond engagement and wedding rings, offers many ring styles, most with matching sets for bride and groom. Among these are diamond wedding rings, antique rings, dimensional and contemporary rings, including carved floral and geometric styles, and plain, florentine and textured rings.

Diamonds set in gold were prized as betrothal rings in the 15th century, while 19th century brides treasured plain gold wedding bands. Popular today are diamond wedding rings as well as those carved with flowers and geometric designs, like these five 14-karat gold ArtCarved wedding rings.

ArtCarved offers these buying tips:

- Select a jeweler who carries guaranteed name brand wedding rings.
- Select rings of 14-karat white or yellow gold, marked "14K" for luster, strength, hardness and resistance to wear.

- Order wedding rings four to six weeks before the wedding. This insures enough time for sizing.
- Personalize your rings and include wedding date. Plan to buy your fiancée's wedding ring, and he, yours.
- Rule of thumb: spend one week's salary for each ring to ensure quality that will last beyond your 50th anniversary.

STITCHING WITCHERY

Keep Wide-Legged Pants Out Of Your Gears

By BETTY W. KINSER
 Copley News Service
 All you bike likers take note . . . here is how to keep those wide-legged pants out of your gears:

Measure around your leg over the pants (snug, but not tight). Add four inches. Cut a length of fancy, heavy-weight wide braid trim to this total measurement. (Choose something that will not snag.)

On each end, fold two inches to the inside; stitch securely in place. Cut strips of Velcro and attach to each end of the braid, placing one piece on top, the other on the underneath side so the ends will overlap when fastened.

Wrap this pretty braid band around your pant leg before hopping on your bike. Safely first and all that. (From Elaine Smith, Missoula)

QUICK STITCH: Run short of nylons for your puff quilt? Mrs. Lillian Berglund suggests visiting your Salvation Army store where you can buy bags of old nylons for pennies.

'SHORT' SKIRTS
 On June 11, 1910, the Printers' Association of America decided to campaign against portrayal on billboards of women's skirts, which were only a trifle above the ground.

Demolition Of Adams Academy Urged

The Quincy Veterans' Memorial Committee recommended that the Adams Academy be demolished and the site be used for the proposed new City Hall.

Other sites proposed for the city hall were the Coddington School property and the Hancock Cemetery land.

Q.H.S. PRINCIPAL RESIGNS

The School Committee this week received notice of the retirement of Quincy High School principal Ernest Collins.

Collins had reached the mandatory retirement age. He had served as principal for a third of a century.

Dr. Paul Gossard, superintendent of schools, said that he would make recommendations shortly for a successor to Collins.

KENDRICK CRITICIZES STREETS PROGRAM

City Council president John Kendrick [a potential candidate for Mayor] criticized the street reconstruction program of the city administration.

He argued that the city should not spend large sums of money for the re-building of Washington and Hancock Sts. He noted that after the war the Eastern Mass. Street Railway Company would rip up the street car lines on these streets and replace them with buses.

"What's the sense of doing extensive permanent construction jobs on these two streets only to have them ripped up in a few years," Kendrick said.

NUT ISLAND TREATMENT PLANT IMPROVEMENTS URGED

At a hearing at the State House Quincy officials and civic leaders urged expenditure of $18 million for the construction of a sewage treatment plant for sludge at Nut Island.

Arthur Weston, chief engineer of the state department of public health said that plans for the plant were all prepared; all that was needed now was the appropriation from the legislature.

The Quincy leaders also went on record against the proposed extension of time on the Boston Harbor pollution project.

BOY SCOUTS BACK PAPER DRIVE

All 48 troops of the Quincy Community Fund's Boy Scout organization were busy helping Quincy organizations prepare waste paper for the big war emergency collection.

Chairman of the Quincy Salvage Committee, Clarence Edwards, said that a survey showed that Quincy housewives were responding to President Truman's personal appeal and were saving every scrap of waste paper for the emergency drive. Quincy's quota in the drive was 250 tons.

Edwards announced that the tin can collection would be made next week.

HERITAGE SPECIAL

John Quincy Adams' Daughter At Original Abigail Adams Cairn Ceremonies

By GORDON F. NELSON

On Jan. 27, 1896, the Adams Chapter of Quincy Society of the Daughters of the Revolution was organized, with Mrs. Nelson V. Titus of Squantum appointed as Regent.

One of the many plans of the Adams Chapter was the erection of a memorial, June 17, 1896, to Mrs. Abigail Adams on the commanding height of Penn's Hill, Quincy. Learning that the Quincy Historical Society was also contemplating a similar memorial, Mrs. Titus consulted with Charles Francis Adams, president of the Historical Society, to see if he thought it would be discourteous to erect a cairn independent of them.

On May 22, 1896, the Adams Chapter received a letter from the Quincy Historical Society informing them that they had voted to erect a cairn, but would cooperate with the Adams Chapter in this endeavor.

June 17, 1896 was a clear day, and from Penn's Hill the guests could see, in the distance, the islands in the bay and the great Bunker Hill Monument in Charlestown. They listened to the speeches of the dignitaries present and watched the laying of the corner-stone of the Abigail Adams cairn.

The corner-stone, of Quincy granite, was made from a sleeper of the railway built in 1826 that carried the granite from the Quincy quarries to the Neponset River, and then taken to Charlestown for the construction of the Bunker Hill Monument.

The silver trowel used by Miss Abigail Adams, daughter of John Quincy Adams, for the corner-stone ceremony was made especially for this occasion, and was then presented to Miss Adams as a souvenir.

Many stones of historical significance were built into the cairn. Various societies and individuals contributed stones taken from places such as: Concord and Lexington battlefields; North Bridge, Salem; Dorchester Heights; foot of the Washington Elm; the home of Abigail Adams, ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN on Penn's Hill where Abigail Adams and son, John Quincy Adams, watched the smoke from the battle of Bunker Hill 100 years before was dedicated with corner stone laying June 17, 1896.

Weymouth, and many other historical spots.

On a bronze tablet, the following inscription was given by Charles F. Adams, the younger:-

"From this spot, with her son John Quincy Adams, then a boy of seven by her side, Abigail Adams watched the smoke of burning Charlestown while listening to the guns of Bunker Hill, Saturday June 17, 1775."

The success of this memorable occasion was due entirely to the efforts of Mrs. Nelson V. Titus, Regent of the Adams Chapter.

The Chapter voted that the cairn which was built on city property be presented to the City of Quincy. Mrs. Titus sent the following letter on October 10, 1896.

His Honor the Mayor and Council of the City of Quincy.

Gentlemen:

At a special meeting of the Adams Chapter of Quincy Society of the Daughters of the Revolution, held September 21, 1896, it was voted. "That the cairn upon Penn's Hill, Quincy, erected by this society June 17, 1896 in honor of Mrs. Abigail Adams be presented to the City of Quincy."

In accordance with this vote I hereby tender this memorial for the acceptance of the City of Quincy with the hope that it may ever be preserved for the patriotic instruction and benefit of future generations.

*Very truly yours,
Lillie B. Titus, Regent

200th Anniversary

Penn's Hill Re-enactment June 17

On June 17, 1776, Abigail Adams disturbed by the constant roar of cannons, climbed the neighboring Penns Hill with her son John Quincy Adams and watched the Battle of Bunker Hill.

In 1826 this event was commemorated by the Daughters of the American Revolution with the erection of the Abigail Adams Cairn.

This year will mark the 200th anniversary of Abigail Adams visit to Penn's Hill, and will be commemorated by Quincy Heritage and various women groups of Quincy with a re-enactment ceremony on June 17th at the Abigail Adams Cairn.

The re-enactment is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m., with a walk from the Adams Birthplaces to the Abigail Adams Cairn. At the Cairn, Alicia Coletti, a member of Mayor Hannon's Commission on the Status of Women will preside as emcee.

Honored guests will be Mrs. Patricia Hannon, wife of Mayor Hannon, and Mrs. Margarita Bellotti, wife of Attorney General Francis Bellotti, followed by scenes from "American Primitive", a play based on the love letters of John and Abigail Adams.

The play will be performed by Quincy High School students Dana Neitich as Abigail and Wayne Gardiner as John Adams.

Linda Gordon, from the Quincy Women Club Juniors, and her son Brian will portray Abigail and John Quincy Adams.

The last activity of the re-enactment will be a tree planting ceremony by the Adams School PTA in memory of the Adams family, and in honor of the Adams School and community.

Groups participating in the organization of the re-enactment are The Quincy Women Club Juniors, Priscilla Barkhouse, Virginia Aitken, and Marjorie Glaman, from the Quincy Junior Women's Center, Kathie Roberts, Joan Sullivan, Pam Spring; from the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women, Alicia Coletti, Jane Ford, Ann Aronson and Pat Toland.

From Quincy Heritage, Linda MacIsaac and Kerry Mahoney; from Adams School, Dr. Paterson, from the Quincy Historical Society, Helene Johnson and from the Quincy Schools Music Department, Gay Carbonneau.

The event will be followed by a luncheon provided by the Carlton House for various participants.

Hannon Organizing Youth Volunteers To Work For City

Organization of a special corps of seventh and eighth graders to do volunteer work for the city this Summer is announced by Mayor Walter Hannon.

On June 16, Mayor Hannon will meet with students at all five of the city's junior high schools to discuss the program with them. Seventh and eighth graders will be invited by the Mayor to register.

"There are many jobs in our neighborhoods which young people can do this Summer," said the Mayor. "I've talked with many of them and they want to get involved. They want to do something for their city."

A drawing will be held at City Hall June 23, with 25 girls and 25 boys chosen from those who have enrolled for the new "Quincy Youth Volunteers." They will serve during July. A similar selection of 50 young people will take place for the month of August. "We're asking our young people to volunteer four hours a day for four weeks to help the city," Hannon said.

The Mayor will meet with the young people before they begin work for an orientation session. The program, under the direction of Commissioner Richard Koch of the Department of Natural Resources, will involve grass trimming, raking and clean up work in the various neighborhoods. Adult supervisors will be working directly with the young people, who will be presented with "Quincy Youth Volunteer" tee shirts.

In planning the program with Mayor Hannon, Raymond Cataneo of the Park Department

Tobin Would Restore Special Tax Exemptions

Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin plans to amend a section of a House bill which would, if passed, eliminate real estate tax exemptions for senior citizens, widows, disabled veterans and the blind.

Tobin said elimination of the tax benefits would affect nearly 4,000 homes and families in Quincy alone.

The House Taxation Committee wrote a re-draft of House Bill 5316, striking out Chapter 59, Section 5 of the General Laws, eliminating the real estate tax exemption. Tobin said if the bill receives favorable action in the House, he will introduce an amendment to the bill, restoring the tax benefits to senior citizens, widows, disabled veterans and the blind.

In a letter to Senator Frederic W. Schlosstein Jr., senate taxation committee chairman, and Rep. Vincent Piro, house taxation committee chairman, Tobin urged the men to reconsider their position on the re-draft of the bill. He said:

"I do not believe that with the economy in a downward slope that this is the time for the Massachusetts legislature to be enacting laws which would adversely affect the senior citizens, widows, disabled veterans and the blind in our Commonwealth. It would seem to me that these are the people who would be in the most need of help."

'Coping' Consumer Topic

At Quincy Savings June 24

The Quincy Savings Bank Consumer Affairs Service will present a panel discussion on "Coping" Tuesday June 24.

The program will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the Quincy Room at the bank's main office, 1200 Hancock St., Quincy.

Seating capacity is limited to 100. Anyone wishing to attend the program may contact Mrs. Judith Mallock, consumer consultant at Quincy Savings Bank.

All registrations must be received by Wednesday, June 18.

said that 100 young people could be a major help because the limited number of city personnel cannot meet all the needs, especially during the Summer months.

Following the drawing of names on June 23, the young people chosen will be notified by the Mayor of their selection as the first members of "Quincy Youth Volunteers".

A cookout is planned for each group at the conclusion of their month-long service.

See 50-to-100% Sales Increase

Old Colony Stereo Opens New Store

James Roberts, owner of Old Colony Stereo, expects a 50 to 100 percent increase in sales within a year at his newest store location at 1639 Hancock St., Quincy.

Last month, Roberts re-located his West Quincy store to downtown after Downtown Improvement Program Vacancy Coordinator Patrick Fitzgerald interested Roberts in the unoccupied site. Attending the Grand Opening was Mayor Walter J. Hannon.

Speaking of the new location,

Roberts said:

"Because of the increased visibility, the pedestrian traffic and the availability of parking in Quincy Center, I expect to see a 50 to 100 percent increase in sales within the first year."

Old Colony Stereo sells a wide range of stereo systems and components including Pioneer, Kerwood and Marant. The store also carries tape recorders, radio, electronic calculators and stereo equipment for automobiles.

According to Roberts, the store maintains the only complete audio service shop in the area which repairs major brands of stereo equipment. He said:

"It is our goal to bring the best quality electronic equipment to people on the South Shore and provide them with lower prices, the best service and the most knowledgeable sales help."

Old Colony Stereo is also located on Rte. 53 in Hanover and on Rte. 3A in Cohasset.

Ryan, Elliot Exclusive Agent For State St. South

The State Street Bank and Trust Company has appointed Ryan, Elliott and Company, Inc. as the exclusive leasing agent for its State Street South development in North Quincy. State Street South, located on 80 acres, is a unique business environment. Only 10 minutes from downtown Boston, the complex offers free parking and immediate access to the MBTA. Modern design features include a one-acre landscaped courtyard, curtain walls of tinted glass, and a glass enclosed walkway connecting the four wings of the 740,000 square foot building.

The building was occupied by its major tenant, the State Street Bank, in mid-1973, and since that date, several leases have been negotiated with additional tenants. Kemper Insurance Company has constructed a 130,000 square foot New England Regional Headquarters building in the complex.

Arthur F. Cook, Jr., Ryan, Elliott project manager, said that his firm was confident that most of the remaining 150,000 square feet would be committed within a year. The complex is minutes from the financial district.

Bellotti Alerts QJC Graduates Against Privacy Invasion

Atty. General Francis X. Bellotti warned Quincy Junior College graduates a now-developing "dossier mentality" will eventually "suppress free expression and criticism" if left to burgeon unchecked.

In remarks delivered Sunday at Quincy Vocational Technical School the Quincy resident told the 268 graduates - 10 of them patrolmen:

"The invasion of privacy may very well be the most important issue of the next ten years...We are well into the age of data banks, both public and private. We are rapidly developing a dossier mentality that, if unchecked, will finally suppress free expression and criticism.

"People will become more concerned with what will appear permanently in their dossiers than in living normal lives, uninhibited by fear."

Listing classifications and documents kept by various government agencies, Bellotti noted:

- An "adverse information" file kept by the department of Housing and Urban Development.
- A "subversive persons" list kept by the federal civil service.
- A list of "malcontents" and "activists" maintained by the Secret Service.
- Existence of 920 federal data banks in the U.S.
- An attempt to put "a spy in your pocket" by inserting and changing special ink in pens to pinpoint the time when a document was written.

Bellotti said: "General surveillance is becoming a way of life...Erroneous and harmful information, once into the vast, integrated system of computers and data banks, may become irretrievable, and we may never even know it is there."

To help to check this rampant surveillance and invasion of an individual's privacy, Bellotti pointed to the graduates to uphold "a commitment to fairness" and a pursuit of individual excellence.

Urging graduates not to withdraw from the democratic process, using governmental dishonesty and "the Watergate mentality" as excuses for non-participation, Bellotti said:

"If you and all graduates abandon the struggle for excellence and fairness...the threads of a democracy...then at the very important moment in history, the direction and purposes of government will be left to the power brokers. Individual liberties will continue to erode and we will have arrived at 1984."

Putting the nation's survival into the hands of the graduates, Bellotti said:

"A democracy is built upon not only the rights but also the duties of its individual citizens...We have the strength and the resources to not only survive but to open up entirely new and wonderful horizons. I hope we have the commitment."

The 3 p.m. graduation ceremonies began with a procession performed by the combined high school bands and conducted by Michael Cahill, Quincy High School band director.

Rabbi David J. Jacobs of the Temple Beth El, Quincy, offered the invocation and benediction.

Extending greetings to the graduates, their families and friends were Mayor Walter J. Hannon, former Senator-Mayor James R. McIntyre, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Community College Association, and Dr. Edward F. Pierce, president of Quincy Junior College.

Save Now, Spend Later Still Makes Good Sense

By Philip J. Lawrence
President

Colonial Federal Savings

And Loan Association
of Quincy, Holbrook and Wareham
8-6 Weekdays 8-7:30 Thursdays

Those of us who for years have been exhorting consumers to "Save Now, Buy Later" had had the feeling we were crying in the wilderness.

We demonstrated the practicality of this method of money management by showing how a product, say a color television set, could be purchased for $468 when saved for over three years and then purchased as against buying it now for $700 and paying for it over a subsequent three-year period.

But the childish "gimme" attitude of many Americans has prevailed throughout the years since World War II. It was fed by the urgent advice of entrepreneurs to buy-now-pay-later and travel-today-pay-tomorrow. Business firms began to believe in the concept and expanded their operations by indebting themselves to the hilt. And of course government provided the fatherly example by saddling future generations with a dangerously mounting national debt. Its solution to today's economic crisis is to further encumber tomorrow's income.

Obviously, this financial insanity cannot prevail forever. Most families realize that when they consistently live beyond their incomes, the time will come when the sheriff is at their door and they are bankrupt. The same is true of businesses and, eventually, of governments.

We have no quarrel with credit. Its use in this country has been responsible for the remarkable development of the U.S. economy and what we proudly refer to as our standard of living. But temperance in the use of credit is as necessary as it is in the consumption of food and drink. We have become piggyish and we're going to have to pay the price.

The least painful way of doing this is to return to the erstwhile American practice of saving now and spending later. This will enable us as consumers to live within our means. It will make available to borrowers who can demonstrate their integrity the funds needed to keep enterprises going - whether they be housing, manufacturing, small business, or any other venture contributing to the gross national product. It will increase the supply of money and taper off the demand, thereby reducing interest rates. It will curb spending and the excessive use of credit.

There is nothing wrong with the philosophy of "Save Now, Spend Later". There never was.

Ruth Gordon Confides:

'Today Is Just The Way I Meant It To Be...

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

A small, invitation-only group of reporters and friends were gathered in a third-floor private suite in Boston's Ritz Carlton, awaiting the arrival of Quincy-born actress and author Ruth Gordon.

In Quincy just two months ago to celebrate her hometown's 350th anniversary, Miss Gordon flew to mark another, though younger, birthday - the year-long run of "Harold and Maude" at the Allston Cinema.

Suddenly the petite and witty woman walked through the door. An impish grin stretching wide across her face, Miss Gordon breezed up to the first guest, offered her hand in greeting and crooned, "Guess who I am?"

That is Ruth Gordon.

At a distance, the 77-year-old actress could be mistaken for a school girl. She stands under five feet tall. Dressed in a navy, white and yellow plaid skirt and a simple navy cardigan sweater buttoned to the neck, Miss Gordon sipped on a Coke - straight Coke - and mused, "Well, I'm on the job, you know."

Miss Gordon began chatting with note-taking reporters, about "Harold and Maude" in which she plays the 80-year-old lover of 20-year-old Bud Cort.

Though reaction to the film was at first mixed, "Harold and Maude" has played four years in Paris and a stage version of it has been made. The film is in its second year in Detroit and into its third in Minneapolis. Describing audiences as "riveted to the screen", Miss Gordon said:

"A freak-out picture wouldn't have lasted that long. A movie with a run like that has to have strength, feeling, courage and sensibility. "Harold and Maude" speaks to you and that's what the artist meant to do."

As a Quincy High School student, Miss Gordon, born Ruth Gordon Jones, met with parental opposition to her acting dreams. She remembered:

"My mother wanted me to marry and my father wanted me to become a physical culture instructor. But I said I couldn't do it. After that, they did everything in their bloomin' power to help me."

Miss Gordon celebrated 17 birthdays in Wollaston at 14 Elmwood Ave., now the Elmwood Nursing Home at the corner of Elmwood Ave. and Arlington St. And Mrs. Kay LeBeau, the former Kathleen Follett - Ruth Gordon Jones' closest friend and special guest at last Wednesday's luncheon - shared many of those birthdays.

This writer and Mrs. LeBeau rode the 'T' together from Quincy Center to the Ritz Carlton. And for Mrs. LeBeau who still lives in Quincy it was reminiscing time about her childhood best friend Ruth Gordon.

Mrs. LeBeau, a year younger than Miss Gordon, recalled Ruth's mother as an accomplished seamstress.

"Ruth was the best-dressed girl at Quincy High," she said.

At times, though, the girls would sew shirtwaists on their own and then walk to Boston to spend a day shopping.

Although Mrs. LeBeau admits she doesn't remember making shirtwaist dresses, she said Ruth related the sewing story during a recent TV interview. Mrs. LeBeau said:

"Ruth had an excellent memory. Excellent. If she says it happened, it happened!"

The Way I Knew It Would Be ...'

Three years ago, Mrs. LeBeau flew to Hollywood to appear in a "This Is Your Life" tribute to Miss Gordon. Though she had lines to deliver from a prepared script, Mrs. LeBeau said her performance was upstaged by Miss Gordon's. Giggling with remembrance of the moment, Mrs. LeBeau said:

"Ruth took out half my lines, she talked so much!"

When Miss Gordon was a young girl of 15, muses began whispering to her the course of her fate. Experiencing - perhaps a bit prematurely - the pangs of 'what am I going to do with my life?' Miss Gordon described herself as "discouraged, worried and frustrated," wondering, "Who is going to pay me something for doing something at the end of the week?"

Recreating her moment of inspiration, Miss Gordon said:

"It was at the Colonial Theatre in Boston. My muses talked to me. Joan of Arc had hers and I had mine. I was discouraged, worried, frustrated when I went into that theatre. I saw "The Pink Lady" at a matinee and was inspired by the performance of Hazel Dawn...I took off into the horse latitudes and haven't come down yet. I knew then, in 1912, I wanted to go on the stage."

Miss Gordon began her theatrical career by enrolling in the American Academy of Dramatic Arts after graduation from the notorious "Worst Class" of 1914, the class dubbed so by a despondent teacher who noted none of the graduates made the honor roll.

Ironically, Miss Gordon's success as a stage and film actress and as an author later belied that "Worst Class" label. Others went on to success stories, too.

Her first appearance of importance came in 1915, playing the part of Nibbs in "Peter Pan" staged in New York's Empire Theatre.

On Broadway she earned her reputation on performances such as Lola Pratt in Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen", as Nora in "The Doll's House", in "Serena Blandish", "The Country Wife", "A Church Mouse", and as Mrs. Levi in Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker".

TIMES TO REMEMBER - Wollaston-born stage actress Ruth Gordon shares memories of her hometown with Quincy Sun reporter Mary Ann Duggan. In 1939, Miss Gordon made her talking-film debut as Mary Todd in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois". She followed with screen appearances in "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet", "Edge of Darkness", and "Two-Faced Woman".

After a lapse of years, Miss Gordon returned to Hollywood in the 1960's for a cameo role in "The Loved One" and a starring part in "Inside Daisy Clover".

In 1967 her appearance in "Rosemary's Baby" earned Miss Gordon an Academy Award as Best Supporting Actress.

Yet with that litany of accomplishment, Miss Gordon calls the success of "Harold and Maude" in Boston "the last tableau of the allegory."

A cake bearing the symbolic single birthday candle was ushered into the Ritz Carlton suite to a round of applause. After performing her first-slice cake-cutting duties, Miss Gordon stood to address those helping to mark the first birthday of "Harold and Maude" in Boston. She said:

"I'm not against success, I'm for it. Success in Boston sums it all up. In many careers, there is a gap between anticipation - what you wanted to do, what you meant to do - and how it comes out - the realization. Hardly ever do they come together."

Slowing down dramatically, her voice dropping to a whisper still filled with feeling, Miss Gordon continued: "Today, for me in Boston, it's JUST the way I meant it to be, the way I KNEW it would be, in 1912.

"Success anywhere is glorious, but to bring it all home to Boston where I grew up as a young child and a young lady, it's like an allegory - the last tableau of the allegory."

But Miss Gordon will add even more pages to her allegory as she returns to her hometown this month for back-to-back appearances.

Tuesday, June 24 marks the 61st reunion of the famed 1914 "Worst Class" of Quincy High School and Miss Gordon will be there to help classmates celebrate and reminisce.

The next day Miss Gordon will stage a one-woman benefit performance for the Quincy Historical Society to be held at 8:30 p.m. in the Eastern Nazarene College Auditorium. A limited audience of 350 will be able to attend.

Speaking of her June 25 engagement in Quincy, Miss Gordon said:

"I wasn't able to finish my speech at the 350th anniversary celebration for Quincy, so I'm coming back to do just that."

Merrymount Assn. Alarmed At Rising Quincy Bay Bacteria Count

In a letter to city and state officials, the Merrymount Association expressed extreme concern with the rising coliform bacteria counts found in Merrymount beaches and in Quincy Bay.

The letter was sent by Vice-President Robert K. Mitchell of Quincy Shore Drive.

Coliform bacteria is present in water contaminated by untreated human and animal waste. In 1974, the state's maximum acceptable level for coliform was 1000. In 1975, the State Water Pollution Control lowered the level to 700.

Mitchell said the two readings currently available of Merrymount Beaches' water show counts of 200 and 700, the latter being sufficient to close the beaches. He said the only available explanation for the sharp increase in counts is a sharp increase in the water temperatures in Quincy Bay because of the warmer weather. Pollution levels at Merrymount are the highest in Quincy, but coliform counts in the entire Bay area are approximately three times last year's readings.

Mitchell said the Merrymount Association, even though they were aware of the long range plans to improve the MDC facility at Nut Island, are still concerned that no immediate solution has been proposed.

Other officers of the Association are Dr. E. James Iorio, President; Mrs. Regina Whalen, recording secretary; Mrs. Dianne Rochelle, corresponding secretary; and John Kelly, treasurer.

Davis Would Re-instate Residency Requirement For Part Time Jobs

School Committeeman Harold Davis is drafting legislation to re-instate a residency requirement for certain part-time jobs in Quincy and other cities and towns.

Davis, the School Committee's representative on the Quincy Park and Recreation Board, said Rep. Joseph Brett has agreed to file such legislation on his behalf if the Civil Service Division does not reconsider its decision to open summer recreation instructor positions to non-Quincy residents.

A candidate for city councillor-at-large, Davis said his proposed legislation would impose a residency requirement on part-time positions of 10 weeks or less which paid a weekly salary of $100 or less.

Davis said some nine non-Quincy residents have passed the Civil Service exam and have been asked to fill summer recreation positions.

In a letter to Edward W. Powers, director of the Massachusetts Civil Service Division, Davis expressed his opposition to the new non-resident policy. He said:

"These positions on the city's playgrounds and in other recreational activities are paid for entirely by the taxpayers of the City of Quincy...It seems unfair to allow the residents of communities with a limited program to fill job slots in other communities where substantial funds have been devoted to that purpose."

Davis also said he felt the duties of a recreation leader on a

Quincy playground would be best performed by a resident having full knowledge of the city and its people. He asked:

"In an emergency, would a non-Quincy resident know how to get to Quincy City Hospital? Considerable staff time will be needed to familiarize the non-residents with the area in which they will serve."

A Quincy resident, too, would demonstrate more enthusiasm for his job, said Davis, viewing it as a chance to help improve his city rather than a mere method to earn money.

Noting the city's present high unemployment rate, Davis said: "In a city with 15 per cent unemployment and a real scarcity of summer jobs, it is obviously difficult to explain this new policy."

Francis McCauley To Seek School Committee 2nd Term

Quincy School Committee member Francis X. McCauley announces his candidacy for re-election to a second term.

In announcing his candidacy, McCauley said: "During the past four years, I have been an active School Committee member. I have visited each one of Quincy's 32 schools to observe first hand the education of Quincy's young people. During my term of office I have successfully sponsored School Committee resolutions and rules changes which opened School Committee budget sessions to the public and have given the School Committee more information and greater control over school spending procedures.

"I have also supported equal pay for equal work provisions, increased athletic programs for girls and project LINC which brings high school students in contact with the business and governmental community.

A life long resident of Quincy, McCauley is a graduate of Boston College High School, the Bentley College of Accounting and Finance and the Indiana University School of Banking. He is the President-Treasurer of the Presidential Cooperative Bank in Quincy.

In addition to his service on the School Committee, McCauley served four years in the City Council and a five year term on the Board of the Quincy Housing Authority. He lives with his wife and five children at 210 Manet Ave., Houghs Neck.

4 More Take Out Nomination Papers

Four more candidates have taken out nomination papers for the city elections this fall, bringing to 22 the total number of candidates now circulating nomination petitions.

The four are: Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets of 926 Furnace Brook Parkway, seeking re-election to a second term.

Announced Ward 2 candidate Daniel Raymondi of 88 Elm St. School Committeeman Francis X. McCauley of 210

Manet Ave., seeking re-election to that office, and bringing the total number of School Committee candidates to eight.

George Trubiano of 203 Atlantic St., former mayoralty candidate, took out nomination papers for city councillor-at-large bringing the total number of candidates for that office to five.

Two candidates have returned nomination papers. They are Sabina Kavanagh Stenberg and Steven E. O'Meara, both councillor-at-large candidates.

Delahunt Bill Eases Notary Requirement For Absentee Voters

Rep. William D. Delahunt's legislation to amend notary requirements for absentee voters has been signed by Gov. Michael S. Dukakis following approval by both the House and Senate.

Delahunt, member of the Legislative Committee on Election Laws, said the bill eliminates the necessity for a physically disabled person to cast his vote before a notary public.

Delahunt said the inconvenience and cost of this requirement caused "a significant number" of registered Quincy voters living in nursing homes not to vote at all.

The legislation calls for the city clerk to maintain a list of permanently disabled voters who would not be required to file certification of their disability other than the initial application placing them on the list.

The bill also allows students within and outside the state to request a registrar or assistant registrar at his or her college to verify the student's absentee ballot.

Speaking as a member of the Election Laws Committee, Delahunt said:

"It is our obligation to encourage the exercise of franchise to insure a strong and viable democracy and to eliminate those obstacles that prevent individuals from participating in the political life of a community."

North's Petracca, Canavan In N.E. Track Championships

North Quincy's best track season in many years will officially end Saturday when two of its premier runners, miler Bert Petracca and half miler Mark Canavan compete in the New England championships at Andover.

This pair and the school's mile relay team were the Raiders' only scorers in last Saturday's state championship meet, also held at Andover.

Lou Tozzi's North team finished fifth among the more than 70 teams with 20 points, while Quincy had six points.

Petracca broke his own school record in the mile with a 4:15.9 effort, finishing second to Bud Stronach of Tewksbury. The winning time was 4:15.3.

Canavan ran a fine race to finish second in the half mile. The winner, Billy Martin of Catholic Memorial, set a state record with a timing of 1:52.2. Canavan's time was 1:55.6.

The mile relay team of Petracca, Canavan, John Mackey and Jerry MacKenzie finished fourth but set a new school record of 3:28.9.

Two other North competitors turned in fine performances, as Brian Doherty reached the semifinals of the 220 and Mike Nee had his best toss of the year in the javelin, 179 feet, 2 inches, but failed to place.

Quincy's Charlie Gaziano gave the Presidents their only points with a third in the javelin.

In the girls' meet Jodi Silva of North Quincy placed third in the javelin.

Mark Jaehnig Wins Home Run Contest

Mark Jaehnig of Quincy won the South Shore Senior Babe Ruth League (16-18 year olds) home run contest "Go for the Wall" Saturday at Avon by hitting three of 10 out of the park. The pitcher and catcher from his own team were Spike Cooney and Ken O'Sullivan.

In first round competition the Quincy team finished third to South Boston Savings and Carmen's Post also from South Boston. During the playoff competition Quincy pulled ahead with fine pitching and hitting.

The next phases of the contest will be taped for television from Leominster on June 1. The state championships will be televised live from Fenway Park and will see the two best teams from the Leominster playoffs.

Quincy YMCA Open Basketball Season Underway

The Quincy YMCA Open Basketball League, featuring some of the top semi-pro teams in the state, is offering outstanding basketball on Monday and Wednesday nights to South Shore fans.

Quincy Rugby Club Winds Up Undeclared

The Quincy Rugby Club finished its spring season undefeated when it bombed the U. of Mass., 14-0, at Amherst.

The win gave Quincy a 7-0-1 record, the first time in the team's three-year history it has achieved an unbeaten season.

Kevin Hanley and Lou Trubiano scored early to give Quincy an 8-0 lead which lasted until late in the game when Billy Carroll stopped a U. Mass drive by streaking 80 yards for the final goal. Colin Riley added a conversion kick for the final 14-0 score.

The Quincy squad is made up of Co-Capt. A Long Tough Battle Ahead But Sox Could Do It

By TOM SULLIVAN Quincy Sun Writer

At the start of the baseball season the Red Sox were picked by most to finish third behind the Orioles and Yankees, who apparently had strengthened themselves considerably during the winter while the Sox virtually stood pat.

After about nine weeks of play the Sox face a battle but, from all appearances, are not an automatic third place finisher behind the O's and Yanks.

Despite its additions, Baltimore has been struggling badly and New York also was having troubles until recently when it put on a surge which had reached eight wins in a row at this writing. And, as has been the case the last two years, the other teams don't want to seem to win the Eastern Division crown.

In fact, despite some glaring pitching problems and other weaknesses, the Red Sox seem to have as much chance as anyone else of winning the division title.

The Sox may well have the American League Rookie of the Year in Fred Lynn and may have solved their designated hitter problem with Jim Rice. The comebacking Tony Conigliaro also has done fairly well in the DH role.

Lynn is living up to the expectations of Quincy's Sam Mele, special assignment scout for the Sox. Early last year Sam told this writer there was little he could teach Rice as far as hitting was concerned, but to watch Lynn.

"Rice is getting most of the press notices but I think Lynn is an even better prospect," Mele said at the time. "I think he will be a starting outfielder for the Sox next year."

Lynn has been starting most games in center field, is hitting well and playing fine ball in the field.

One question for Manager Darrell Johnson: Why do you bench Lynn and Bernie Carbo against southpaw pitchers and continue to use Carl Yastrzemski, who is almost useless, except for rare occasions, against lefties?

Johnson should star pinchhitting for Yaz against southpaws.

Carbo is off to another good start at bat, just as he was the past few years and he seems to be trying to prove he deserved the raise he asked for and lost in arbitration.

Defensively Boston hasn't done badly, but Rico Petrocelli covers little ground at third base and Rick Burleson, a real hustler who always gives 100 percent, doesn't have the range a good shortstop should have. But everyone has been playing good ball in the field.

Bob Montgomery has filled in well behind the plate but, although he has hit well, he still is not a good defensive catcher and his arm is not strong. The Sox miss Carlton Fisk, whose return is still a question mark.

It appears the Sox, who at this writing had a two-game lead, could stay at or near the top in the division, but we feel that the Orioles will start clicking as the Yanks have done and it should be another close and interesting division race.

Hotshots Sweep TARO Softball Doubleheader

Bruce Forsythe and Paul Colletti collected six hits each in leading the Palmer Pub Hotshots to a doubleheader sweep in the TARO softball league.

The Hotshots defeated DAV, 13-12, and M. A. D., 11-10, in both wins. The Pub came from behind with runs in the ninth inning. Rover Homan pitched both wins with Forsythe adding two home runs and had 11 runs batted in.

In the TARO Basketball League the Hotshots walloped Mean Machine of Norwell, 109-68, Sunday.

The Pub was led by Kenny Boyd with 27 points and 18 rebounds. Gene DeLoatch had 23 points and eight assists, Mack Harper had 19 points and 17 rebounds and Bob Pike 14 points. All of the players scored.

The Hotshots, in addition to playing in the TARO League, are members of the strong Quincy YMCA Open League, which plays Mondays at Eastern Nazarene College and Wednesdays at the Quincy Salvation Army Center

N.Q. Kickers Win 6th Straight

The North Quincy Kickers, led by Jose Carballido, remained undefeated in the Southeast Division of the Boston Area Soccer League with a 6-0 win over Quincy.

North quickly took control of the game in the first half with two goals by Carballido and one by John Penella. North added three more in the second half with two more goals by Carballido and one by John Lawson.

Bob Mewis of North scored his first goal in three years but it was voided by an offside call. It was goalie Gary Nankin's sixth shutout of the season.

Bill Donovan, Dan Finn, Kevin O'Neil, Jimmy McGinley and Dave Nesti turned in fine performances.

Carballido soon will be leaving for his home in Mexico after some sparkling performances for the Kickers.

YMCA Learn To Swim Week Opens June 23

The Quincy YMCA will launch its annual five-day "Learn-To-Swim" program Monday June 23 with enrollment open to non-members between the ages of three and 14.

Using the most modern teaching techniques, the "Y" course enables most people to swim 15 feet safely after five days. The course usually spurs the student to continue with more advanced instruction.

A certificate is awarded upon completion of the course.

The YMCA notes recent statistics show drowning as the third leading cause of accidental death in the U.S. with two-thirds of the victims not knowing how to swim.

The class schedule follows.

Boys and girls aged eight to 14 can enroll in any of seven courses held at 8:30 a.m. [co-ed]; 9:05 a.m. [boys]; 9:40 a.m. [girls]; 10:50 a.m. [girls]; 11:25 a.m. [boys]; 1:30 p.m. [co-ed]; and 2:30 p.m. [co-ed].

Youngsters aged three to seven can enroll in any of five classes at 10:15 a.m., 1 p.m., 2 p.m., 3 p.m. and 3:35 p.m. Enrollments are limited.

Hannon Tells Graduates They Have To Be 'Tough'

Mayor Walter J. Hannon told the city's graduating seniors last Wednesday the next few years would test their "toughness".

In a speech delivered at the combined commencement of the city's three high schools, Hannon told the graduates:

"You can get into school, maybe not the one you really want, but you can get in - if you are really tough enough.

"The opportunity is there to train yourself for a skill or trade - if you are tough enough.

"And to the women of this class, the doors of opportunity are opening up for you in a greater degree than ever before, and the possibilities of advancement in all of the professions are there for you - if you are tough enough."

Hannon, calling today's average graduate "smarter, wiser, calmer, shrewder and tougher" than some predecessors, told the young Quincy men and women to "look at life as a great challenge."

"You should be optimistic but also realistic," he told the graduates. "You are going to find that the next few years are going to be a test for you.

"It is going to be tough for many of you to find employment. It's not going to be easy for many of you to get into college, and if you are going to find the 'good life', you will have to work harder than ever before."

Hannon, addressing the graduates at Veterans Memorial Stadium, told the class they, like all the generations before them, are equal to the challenges of life. He said:

"We have met all of the challenges through many years of war and peace. We have come through depressions and tough times. There is no reason why you, a new generation, cannot do the same. We expect it of you."

HONORED - Norfolk County Bar Association roasted its seventh "Man Of The Year" and honored outgoing and incoming presidents at its annual dinner meeting at the Neighborhood Club. 34-Bed Ward Closed For Renovations

By DEIRDRE SULLIVAN

S-4 in the West Wing of Quincy City Hospital was closed down Monday for complete renovations.

The ward is scheduled to re-open after Labor Day. All patient rooms, bathrooms, and the nurses station will be redone.

This is the third major renovation project the hospital has undertaken in three years. M-6 in the West Wing of the hospital was completely renovated and air-conditioned two years ago as was S-5 last year.

The renovations to be undertaken in S-4 will include installation of air conditioning, new ceilings and lighting, and new bathrooms. New draperies will also be put up. All of the patient furniture in the 34-bed ward as well as all of the patient furniture in S-5 and M-6 will be sandblasted and repainted with coats of baked enamel.

The estimated cost of $14,144 to refinish the furniture in the West Wing will be absorbed by the Women's Auxiliary of the hospital. The installation of air-conditioning is expected to cost approximately $20,000. Much of the renovation work will be done by hospital personnel, hospital authorities noted.

Once renovations in S-4 are completed, the entire West Wing of the hospital will be air-conditioned.

Powers Seeks Building Setback Requirement

Ward 5 Councillor Warren Powers has filed an order to revise Quincy's building setback requirements, establishing a minimum of 15 feet of frontage space.

In some zoning categories, no setback requirement exists, Powers noted, allowing construction of buildings to the street line, and creating "hazardous conditions at street intersections by blocking the visibility of traffic."

In a letter to Mayor Walter J. Hannon, asking for his support, Powers said:

"I do not consider this a suitable type of development for the city of Quincy in these modern times."

Powers said a 15 foot minimum setback provision would not only solve the visibility problem but would also provide an area for planting "to enhance the setting of any new construction."

Cerasoli Urges Immediate Installation Of Point Lights

Rep. Robert Cerasoli has urged immediate installation of a planned pedestrian crossing light in front of St. Joseph's Church, Washington St., Quincy Point.

In a letter to state Public Works Commissioner John Carroll, Cerasoli said preliminary plans for the light have been approved by the Department of Public Works.

He also said Quincy agreed to assume ownership and maintenance costs of both this proposed light and one at the corner of Washington and Chubbuck Sts.

Cerasoli, asking Carroll to inform him of the status of these projects, said: "After long months of waiting, I hope these lights will become a reality soon."

Proposed Zoning Amendments

Planning Board To Hold 10 Public Hearings June 24

Quincy Planning Board will hold a series of 10 consecutive public hearings Tuesday, June 24 to consider proposed amendments to the city's zoning ordinance.

The hearings will begin at 7 p.m. in City Council Chambers.

The first three hearings will deal with changes in parking and loading requirements and will last approximately 15 minutes.

The hearing scheduled to begin at 7:20 will be on a proposed change in Article III, Section 32 of the zoning districts.

The 7:30 p.m. hearing will deal with a proposal requiring a 15 foot minimum front yard dimension in Business A and Business C districts.

The 7:35 p.m. hearing will discuss a proposed zoning change from Residence C to Residence B on the land located easterly and southerly of Granite St., southerly of School St., northerly of Brook Rd and northeasterly of Booth St.

The next hearing, scheduled to begin at 7:40 p.m., will deal with a proposed zoning change from Residence C to Residence B on land located on the southeasterly side of Willard St. from No. 746 to No. 838 including the land on the southerly side of St. Moritz Ave. and the land on the northerly and southerly sides of Thistle Rd.

The 7:45 p.m. hearing will discuss a proposal clarifying the definition and use of "parking area".

The 7:55 p.m. hearing will deal with a zoning change from Planned Unit Development to Planned Unit Development 1 on the land located northerly and westerly of the Myles Standish School on a portion of the former Squantum Naval Air Station.

The 8 p.m. hearing will discuss the adding of a new zoning district, Planned Unit Development 1, for comprehensive development of large land parcels. This hearing will also discuss the imposition of an eight story height limit in such zoning districts.

To Curb Vandalism

Filling Of Badger's Quarry To Begin Within 3 Weeks

Pumping and filling of Badger's Quarry will begin "within two-and-one-half to three weeks" according to Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets.

The City Council passed Monday - under an emergency preamble - an order allowing only Badger's Quarry to be filled with clean demolition material, thus waiving a city ordinance prohibiting the deposit within city limits, of materials collected in other communities.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon declared the quarry an emergency area at the request of Sheets who received Saturday a petition bearing the names of some 300 area residents requesting action to curb disturbances and vandalism by hundreds of youths who gather at the quarry.

The Council also passed an order to amend the Quarry's Industrial A zoning which does not allow filling operations. A variance must be obtained from the Board of Appeals by Peter Rusotto of Braintree, private owner of the quarry property, who has agreed to fill the quarry with the proposed demolition material if the project receives approval by Mayor Walter J. Hannon, the Quincy Conservation Commission and state officials.

Sheets said the Quarry will be filled "under the tightest controls" to halt vandalism, resident harassment, theft in neighborhood stores and to prevent a continued history of deaths at the quarry.

Sheets emphasized demolition material would not contain any garbage or refuse and said no more than 10 percent of each load of material would be wood. He said:

"These will be the tightest controls ever placed on a filling operation."

Sheets said, too, he will elect a seven-member citizens' committee to assist in overseeing the operation. To ensure enforcement of the tight controls, Sheets said he would elect those "most vocal and most critical of the landfill operation in the city."

The councillor will also [Cont'd on Page 19]

'Taxed Beyond Our Limits'

Finn Fears Crucial Police Ambulance Coverage Problem

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

The MDC will halt ambulance service in Quincy and other communities July 1, creating a situation which will "tax us beyond our limits," according to Quincy Police Chief Francis X. Finn.

Calling one of the department's two ambulances "in poor mechanical condition," Finn said he plans to recommend to Mayor Walter J. Hannon that the city buy a new ambulance.

But Hannon said any move for a new ambulance will have to wait until next year since a request this year for a new $27,000 vehicle was turned down.

To deal with the cut in service, Hannon said he and Finn are working on "contingency plans" with surrounding communities to ensure the aid of private ambulance services when needed, particularly in Milton and Randolph.

Pointing to a reason for the stoppage in ambulance service, Hannon said:

"The MDC's budget cuts were [Cont'd on Page 15]

No MDC Service Cutbacks At Wollaston Beach Promises Dukakis

Mayor Walter J. Hannon says he has received assurances from Governor Dukakis that in spite of previously announced MDC cutbacks, there would be no reduction in services along Wollaston Beach.

At the State House this past Friday to attend a Massachusetts Mayors' Association meeting with Dukakis, Mayor Hannon said that he was assured by the governor that present levels in lifeguard personnel, beach cleanup and police patrols would be maintained throughout the summer.

He said he was pleased with the positive response by Dukakis to concerns expressed by himself and other city officials about problems which have existed at Wollaston Beach for a number of years.

MDC officials have been meeting with the mayor in recent months in an attempt to step up law enforcement and eliminate blight at the beach.

In a meeting this past week with MDC Police Supt. Lawrence Carpenter, Hannon and Quincy Police Chief Francis X. Finn discussed plans for re-opening the old MDC police substation on Quincy Shore Drive, and results of the recent crackdown on speeding.

Hannon praised efforts by the MDC police in controlling speeding along the boulevard in recent weeks.

He noted that during the month of May, 518 citations were issued for a number of traffic violations.

"This may serve as a warning to speeders that we will not allow a dangerous situation to continue for another year," Hannon said.

Stricter enforcement measures will also be taken in the areas of teenage drinking and motorcycle gangs, he added.

Payment Sought By June 27

*1.5 Million In Unpaid City Taxes

City Tax Collector-Treasurer Robert E. Foy urges all Quincy tax payers to pay all unpaid tax bills by Friday June 27.

All monies received on or before June 27, are used in the computation of next year's tax rate. The monies received are used as a subtraction from next year's tax rate. All unpaid taxes must be added to next year's tax rate. All real estate and personal property taxes are passed due and are now subject to an 8 percent interest charge.

Although over 96 percent of the real estate and personal property taxes for the year ending June 30, have been paid, there are still $1,500,000 remaining in unpaid taxes. Part payments are accepted in all real estate and personal property taxes.

The Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles has issued more than 30,000 1975 excise tax bills so far this year to Quincy residents. All receipts, from excise, real estate and personal property taxes received by the city by June 27, will benefit all the tax payers of the city, Foy noted.

After July 1, the Tax Collector's Office will start legal proceedings to lien all unpaid real estate taxes.

Present Over $100 In Toys To Hospital As 'Thank You'

By DEIRDRE SULLIVAN
Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brodie of School St., Whitman made a special trip to Quincy City Hospital the other day.

Laden down with more than $100 worth of toys, they presented them to Assistant Director Richard Newcomb, as a token of their appreciation for the care their daughter, Mary, received as a patient last January.

The toys, currently undergoing sterilization, will be used in Hunting-3, the pediatrics ward in the hospital.

Brodie, a foreman for the New England Telephone Company, said that it was just his way of saying thanks to Quincy City Hospital which "has been so good" to his family over the years. Mary, their only child was a patient in pediatrics for a week in January when Mrs. Brodie decided that she and her husband would like to do something for the other children in the ward.

"Kids just can't do much in the hospital. They're sick. We just wanted to help make it a little easier on them," Mrs. Brodie said.

Mrs. Brodie noted the "fine care" she has received at Quincy City Hospital. Both she and her daughter were born there and have been treated exclusively by the hospital. "It is the best hospital in the area," she noted. "It really gives fine care."

"That's why we gave the toys. We wanted to say thanks."

McCauley Wants To Refine QJC Accounting Procedures

School Committeeman Francis X. McCauley planned to propose three additions to the School Committee Rules at Wednesday's regular School Committee meeting in order to refine accounting procedures at Quincy Junior College.

Two proposals deal with the budget at Quincy Junior College; the other deals with a fiscal report to be prepared by School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon for the School Committee.

According to School Committee procedure, additions to the organization's rules must be tabled two weeks before possible action. Proposals will be acted upon at the June 25 meeting.

The first proposal states the College's budget of estimated receipts for a fiscal year will include only the amount of state and federal funds actually allocated to the college.

The second proposal states the college's expenses for a fiscal year must include all items directly attributable to the operation and maintenance of the college.

The third proposed addition to the School Committee rules requests Dr. Creedon to prepare for the School Committee a complete report on the operation of the Junior College for the previous fiscal year.

This report would include but would not be limited to a comparison of budgetary versus actual receipts and expenditures, enrollment at the college, number of degrees and certificates granted and the amount of federal and state aid received by students.

McCauley said these additions to the School Committee rules would provide "a better and more intelligent picture of where income and expenses at the Junior College are and where they are going."

Closing Out 45-Year School Career

Today's Children More Aware Of World Events, Says Miss Sawyer

By MARY ANN DUGGAN
Miss Merle C. Sawyer of Quincy will end this month a 45-year career as an educator, counselor and principal in the Quincy public schools.

North.
Miss Sawyer left North Quincy High to become assistant principal at the Squantum School, serving there seven years.

Involved in education since her first position at the Montclair School in 1930 to her present principalship at Mass Fields School, Miss Sawyer has witnessed a dramatic change in the educational approach in Quincy. Comparing youngsters then and youngsters now, Miss Sawyer observed:

"Children nowadays are more aware of what is happening in the world, much more curious and questioning. A lot of this is due to the change in approach in education.

"It is perhaps not as important that youngsters know the answers today. It is just as important that the children be curious and ask questions and not mimic back the information they have been given. The approach is to make them life-long self-learners, to teach them how they can find the answers by seeking information from people, books and observation."

A teacher of first and sixth grades at the Montclair School until 1935, Miss Sawyer served as a guidance counselor and teacher at North Quincy High School until October 1942. She taught math, social studies and junior business courses at

In 1949, she was named principal of both the Coddington and Merrymount Schools. There five years, Miss Sawyer then made her last transfer to Mass Fields School where she has headed the school since 1955.

Miss Sawyer was honored last week at an Open House held at the Spangenberg Parlor on the Eastern Nazarene College Campus. School officials, the Mass Fields School PTO and friends of Miss Sawyer attended the celebration marking her 45 years of service to Quincy's youth.

The PTO presented Miss Sawyer with a marble etching of Mass Fields School.

Though a teacher of both elementary and high school students, Miss Sawyer admits a preference.

"I must confess my first love is in the elementary school. It's my kind of place."

And Miss Sawyer has made a habit of watching the progress of her school children as they advance through the Quincy School System.

"One of my biggest thrills," she said, "is reading in the paper or seeing at graduation a youngster I knew in elementary school who had been a little rambunctious and seeing he or she assume roles of leadership or be given awards."

Born and raised in Springfield, Miss Sawyer attended Springfield elementary and secondary schools. A graduate of Bridgewater State College, Miss Sawyer received her master's degree in education at Boston University.

Retired as secretary of the Massachusetts Association of Supervisors and Curriculum Development, Miss Sawyer is president of both the Massachusetts Elementary Principals Association and the South Shore Principals Association.

She is also a member of National Education Association, Massachusetts Teachers' Association and the Quincy Education Association.

Summing up her personal student-teacher relationship with Quincy students throughout the years, Miss Sawyer said:

"I hope that during my whole career, I realized that children were persons as well as pupils. They should be handled as individuals and persons."

Miss Sawyer said her immediate plans are "to wind up the school year."

But she said travel plans for the summer include a trip to Hawaii.

Quincy To Receive $983,000 Community Development Grant

Congressman James A. Burke announces, Quincy will receive $983,000 as its share of community development funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The grant, which was authorized by legislation passed by Congress last year, will assist in the rehabilitation of housing, repair of major public works, acquisition and development of parks and other recreational facilities, and in the provision of various social services.

This is the first payment under the new Block Grant concept, which replaces the practice of issuing grants for specific programs. The Block Grant concept allows the individual communities more flexibility in determining how their federal funds will be spent.

STRICTLY PERSONAL
Let parents solve their problems

By PAT and MARILYN DAVIS
 Copley News Service

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
 My mother is 34 and very pretty. My father is 37 and a very nice person. Two years ago my mother asked my father for a divorce. He asked her to wait a little while and see how things worked out. Right now she is having an affair with the same man she was seeing two years ago. My dad knows about this because we have discussed this with each other. My mother told me that my father would die if he knew.

My mother works in a restaurant and meets many people. I am 15 and worried.

Don't Know What To Do Dear Don't Know:

This is a problem for your parents. They are the ones involved and only they can solve the problem. Tell them both that you DO NOT want to be middleman and that you will not discuss this with either of them again.

And, Mom and Dad, what's your excuse for putting such a burden on your 15-year-old daughter. Grow up!

Dear Pat and Marilyn:

I have been dating Jenny for six months. I thought I knew her but now I am beginning to wonder. Here's what really threw me. Jenny suggested that we go to a very expensive restaurant Saturday night before the show. I told her that we would go to this place at a later date because I simply did not have the money at this point. Jenny said she understood and that we would split the check.

I know about women's lib and all that jazz, but I cannot see allowing a girl to pay half the expenses. What do you think?

Dear Jack:
 It was Jenny's suggestion so why not?

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
 I will be a junior in college next year and I make myself miserable trying to get high grades. I realize that being competitive is great but I overdo it.

If I receive an average grade, my spirits drop to zero. I feel miserable and depressed. How can I overcome this problem?

Dear Ann:
 No one can always be No. 1 on the "Hit Parade." You can defeat your own purpose with too much tension. Success and satisfaction are positive results of achievement but overemphasis on grades is not positive action. If you can't solve this yourself, consult your counselor for help.

Windows pose a challenge

By BARBARA HARTUNG
 Copley News Service

Q. We have just moved into a condominium and I am trying to select a window treatment for the dining room. The window looks out onto other high-rise apartments and toward the ocean. The exposure is a western one and in the afternoon I need considerable light control. We also need privacy at night. I would like something more exciting than plain draperies and sheers. What could I use that would have some personality? — N.M.

A. Windows such as you describe certainly are a challenge for apartment dwellers. Designer Eleanor Cash solved the problem by using a simple white window shade which she combined with vivid emerald curtains tied back at each end.

She had the edge of the shade cut in a sawtooth design which was then trimmed in green and blue braid, the color scheme of the room. The shade's pull was an antique key tassel, matching a tassel on an old commode used in the room.

Walls were a brilliant blue and green foil. Dining chairs were white French provincial with green fluting and the table was a glass-topped, chrome-based design.

Q. My husband and I have a fairly large dining and living room combination and we want a warm, colorful and comfortable atmosphere since we spend most of our time in this one room. The walls are off-white and our furniture is Spanish with a crushed velvet sofa and love-seat. One wall has large windows with the draperies extending from one end of the wall to the other.

The fireplace is wood paneled with a wall plaque of crossed swords belonging to the English days. We also have two conquistador lamps. We just bought a tapestry with the subject matter a bull fight.

I think we goofed but is there any way we can combine these periods of time by getting other things and still achieve our goal or do you suggest we get rid of the wall plaque, the lamps and the tapestry and start all over again? — M.G.W.

A. I don't think it is the period you need to have consistent in your accessories. Rather, I feel it is more a matter of quality and, of course, the things you truly like. If you have bought something for your home that you do not like later, you have little choice but to eliminate it. I would not buy more things trying to make it fit because it never will if you don't like it.

Accessories for the home and wall decorations in particular are highly personal and should represent things you especially like. Simply by liking a number of things, they often have a compatibility even if they represent widely differing periods in history. With the wall plaques, the Spanish lamps and the tapestry, you may have too much going on. Perhaps a simpler tapestry or plainer lamps would be better choices. I would start with the things you really like and build on those.

STITCHING WITCHERY Scraps can make a neck pillow

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

Beginning at center back, stitch one edge of elastic to fabric, stretching elastic to fit fabric as you sew. A narrow zigzag stitch works best, but it can be done with a straight stitch.

You will need to work slowly so nothing slips out from under the presser foot. Finish waistband according to pattern instructions.

A wedding gift no one will forget: A few months before the wedding give each of the bride's friends and relatives a 12-inch preshrunk muslin block, stretch embroidery thread and a needle. Ask them to embroider onto the block a scene or design memorable of some event in the bride's life. Put the blocks together for a quilt top; line with a permanent press sheet.

CRIB SAFETY

It is estimated that some 200 infants die each year and another 40,000 are injured in accidents involving cribs. If you are buying a new crib, here are some things to look for: Buy a crib with as narrow a space as possible between the slats. Be sure that the mattress you buy fits the crib very snugly. This will prevent baby from wedging its head between the mattress and crib. If you can fit more than two fingers between the mattress and crib, the mattress is too small. Buy a crib with a latch or lock for the drop side that can't be easily tripped by baby. Most accidents occur when infants fall when climbing out of their cribs. So buy one with as large a distance between the top of the rail and the mattress support. Check the crib's metal parts and edges of crib frame for sharp or rough edges. Buy bumper pads and make sure they run around the entire crib and that tie or snap in place.

Local Fund Drive To Aid Worcester Tornado Victims

A fund drive was organized in Quincy this week to aid the victims of the Worcester tornado.

Mayor David McIntosh kicked off the campaign, declaring, "The people of Quincy will come through this cause as they have always come through in the past. The people in the storm ravaged part of the state need cash, they need it bad, and they need it quickly."

McIntosh was awaiting word from Lt. Gov. Sumner Whittier, head of the Worcester relief committee, as to when the state's fund drive would officially begin.

The Merchants' Division of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce announced its intention to underwrite $40,000 in loans for the stricken Worcester area.

Meanwhile, the sign division of the Public Works Department was busy preparing signs and placing them on parking meters in Quincy Sq. The signs asked citizens to contribute to the fund drive by dropping a dime in the meter. [The dimes would not activate the meter, but rather would be segregated from the pennies and nickles when the meter collections were made.]

Besides raising money for the tornado victims, Quincy residents were also busy collecting personal items belonging to Worcester residents which were scattered as far as Quincy and the South Shore. Marriage certificates, diplomas, etc., were being gathered up for return to their owners.

LAST BUILDINGS AT CLEVERLY COURT RAZED

The final three buildings at the Cleverly Court Housing Project in Quincy Point were razed by the Quincy Housing Authority.

Thus was ended the authority's war time temporary housing operations, which had extended almost eight years.

Last year, nine of the original barrack-type buildings in the two temporary housing projects were razed. The final phase of demolition was held up until the last remaining buildings were relocated.

FIGHT FOR PURCHASE OF SQUAW ROCK CONTINUES

At a hearing before the Boston City Council, Quincy's Mayor David McIntosh labeled the Boston Finance Committee's report on the sale of Squaw Rock, "a nasty document based on a dog-in-the-manger attitude."

Boston Councillor Gabriel Piemonte said that he would never vote for the sale as it now stood. He called for a new appraisal of the property and safeguards for the City of Boston.

AUXILIARY POLICE CITE MRS. ERICKSON

The Quincy Auxiliary Police named Mrs. Antoinette Erickson of Rockview Rd., "Chief of the Coffee Pourers".

Mrs. Erickson was cited for her service of coffee to the auxiliary policemen who patrolled the quarry area near her house.

The citation was presented by Newell Beam, president of the Quincy Auxiliary Police Association and by Lt. Marie Potter, the city's only auxiliary woman officer.

Project Line Commends Planning, Engineering Departments

Quincy Project LINC has presented two certificates of recognition to city departments for their participation in the program.

Representing the Quincy School Department for School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon, and the Director of Project LINC, Michael Hurley, was William Sullivan. Sullivan presented the certificates to the Department of Planning and Community Development and the Engineering Department.

Project LINC - Learning In The Community - is a three year old program for grades 6-12. Its purpose is to develop the potential of the community to provide learning experiences for students. The program is structured to ensure that learning takes place, by preparing students before they visit the site.

Part of this preparation is accomplished through specially prepared "LINC Paks". These contain diagnostic tests, pre-site, on-site and post-site learning activities, and evaluative materials.

Students participate by identifying potential sites. Selected sites are analyzed for the learning potential they offer, and a LINC Pak is developed by the Assistant to the Director of the project, and the Curriculum Organizer, in co-operation with the classroom teacher. Goals and objectives for the student, in addition to learning activities to be performed, are set forth.

In presenting the certificates, Sullivan said, "We want you to know how very much we appreciate your efforts in helping our students throughout the year. The only way possible to show our appreciation would be to present you with certificates of recognition."

Approximately 15 youngsters involved in the program visited the Engineering Department.

"We showed them construction plans, engineering or design plans, photogrammetric plans which show aerial CERTIFICATES OF RECOGNITION were recently awarded to the city's planning and engineering departments for their participation in Quincy Public School Project LINC [Learning In The Community]. photographs and assessor's plans which give information regarding streets, lots, dimensions and existing buildings," said City Engineer Edward A. Leone. In addition, engineers described their work, talked about construction and presented maps of Quincy dating back to 1795.

Another group visited the Department of Planning and Community development. They spoke to Assistant Planner Daniel Driscoll, about health planning, and to Planning Assistant Richard H. Meade, about the open space program and flood plans.

"I described the acquisitions of several sites in the open space program, and we talked about techniques of making an area more attractive with the addition of trees and benches. We also discussed the recently passed flood plain zoning ordinance and the Federal Flood Insurance Program," said Meade.

Other sites which have been used in the "LINC experience" include the Quincy Police Department, the District Court of Quincy, the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office, local banks, businesses, and many others.

The project began in 1972 and relied solely on federal funds that year. During it's years of existence, it has received a total of $118,192, under the Title 3 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1966.

City Launches Anti-Litter, Anti-Vandalism Campaign

Quincy has launched its annual anti-litter, anti-vandalism campaign, asking the help of the city's youth in keeping parks, playgrounds, and beaches litter-free and vandal-free throughout the summer.

Quincy's Park Department will provide extra litter barrels at parks, playground and beach areas.

The Department has already conducted an in-school educational campaign, talking to some 14,000 youngsters in 32 public and parochial schools, ranging in age from six to 14.

Representatives from the Park Department explained thousands of dollars in materials and labor are expended for repairs to vandalized parks and playgrounds each year in Quincy. This money, they explained, could be used to buy new and additional playground equipment, to install more basketball and tennis courts and to add or improve lighting at outdoor facilities.

The Department also outlined conservation guidelines, asking youth:

- Not to cut bark on trees and bushes or swing on young trees.

- Not to pick flowers without permission, or to walk on flowers or bushes.

- Give newly-planted grass a chance to grow.
- Walk on sidewalks and around corners, not across them.

A City ordinance calls for a fine of not more than $50 on a person breaking, smashing or destroying a bottle, glass or other sharp instrument on any park, parkland or other property under the jurisdiction of the Park Department, including public places, streets and where the public has a right to access.

LaRaia Forces' Goal: 15,000 Names

By HENRY BOSWORTH

The Joseph LaRaia campaign camp reportedly is busy building a strength display with nomination papers.

Sources report that 395 workers are out knocking on doors gathering names on nomination papers. The reported goal: 15,000 by July 15.

One LaRaia top lieutenant says "we've already passed the half-way mark."

Only 50 certified voters names are needed to validate LaRaia as a mayoralty contender.

So why the big power play?

"It's not just a display of strength," says the source. "We are knocking on every door in Quincy - both registered voter and non-registered.

"Maybe we can get some of the non-registered to register. We are also getting first hand from residents what they believe to be the issues.

"This also gives us a chance to find out our weaknesses. And it also gives us the opportunity to recruit some more campaign workers."

ALTHOUGH THE Joseph LaRaia mayoralty camp indicates the latest poll taken for him shows him gaining on incumbent Walter Hannon, other sources insist it 'tain't so. They say the results "aren't that great".

WELL, the Ward 2 City Council seat apparently is not going unchallenged after all. John Isaac of Shaw St., Quincy Point, has taken out nomination papers. He's listed as a plumber—the same occupation as former Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa.

Isaac is the first to step forward to challenge School Committeeman Daniel Raymondi for the right to sit in the seat being vacated by Sheriff Clifford Marshall.

WILLIAM DELAHUNT's announcement this week he will seek one of the three City Council at-large seats was forecast here. And reports here that Paul Harold will get into the at-large race will soon be confirmed. Harold already has bumper stickers in circulation and a campaign kick-off social for him is planned for Thursday, June 26 from 8 p.m. to midnight at the North Quincy Knights of Columbus. Tickets $2.50.

INCIDENTALLY, candidates thinking of getting into this year's election ring, have until 5 p.m., Aug. 14 to obtain nomination papers at the City Hall Election Department. And have until 5 p.m. Aug. 19 to file them.

AND, for registered voters who may be wondering, this year's preliminary [primary] election is set for Tuesday, Sept. 23 and the final for Tuesday, Nov. 4. [And a Merry Christmas to you, too!]

PAUL RICCA, head of Quincy's CETA program is back to work after being sidelined a few weeks with a bad back. He threw his back out with a sneeze.

A DANCE for school committee candidate Jan Rich will be held July 18 at the Fore River Clubhouse. Thomas Cavanaugh is ticket chairman.

LOOK ALIKES: Dr. Sid Cutler, the Quincy dentist, and Phil Silvers.

SMILE DEPT: Jack Silverstein, the North Quincy druggist, says as far as a patiiy is concerned, he's neither for nor against it.

Gasoline as we know it may soon be at the price level of a good paperback.

Cutting a budget is okay, so long as it doesn't hurt anybody, and Governor Dukakis just can't seem to find that "anybody".

Along with the just-released convict and Vietnam refugees, the 1975 graduate may well ask, "Where do we go from here?"

The spy racket is dirty stuff, but then we're dealing with dirty enemies.

Israel and Egypt are smarter than supposed; they're making good progress without Dr. Kissinger.

Those who apply themselves too closely to little things become incapable of great things.

THE SHOW MUST GO ON, even without the stars-and so it did at re-enactment ceremonies at the Abigail Adams cairn Tuesday. Abigail and John Adams missed their ceremony and a chance to see a rerun of smoke rising from the Battle at Bunker Hill, because of rain. The weather cleared and improvised ceremonies were held. Rev. John Graham (left) and Rep. Joseph Brett listen as Hobart Holly, Quincy Historical Society President speaks. Members of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women, also listen.

The 24th annual Koch Club Flag Day parade took place Saturday, beginning with a parade at 10 a.m. with some 1,200 flag carrying youngsters and other marchers stepping off from the Hancock Parking area, down McGrath Highway, Elm St., Hancock St., and Southern Artery to Veterans' Memorial Stadium where flag raising ceremonies took place.

The parade's theme was "Quincy On Parade In A Salute To Our Flag And Our 350th Anniversary".

Though sponsored by the Koch Club, groups hailing from throughout the South Shore area participated with a marching unit or color guard.

During the parade some 500 children waved miniature American flags donated by the QCBPA.

Major General George S. Patton, current commander of Army Readiness Region I at Fort Devens, served as grand marshal in the parade.

Patton, the youngest of three children of the famed World War II Gen. George S. Patton, led the first division of the four-division parade.

During the march, Patton placed wreaths on the tombs of John Adams and John Quincy Adams at the United First Parish Church while Koch Club youths placed a wreath at a plaque honoring the late President John F. Kennedy. The plaque is located in the John F. Kennedy Health Center.

Following the ceremonies, the 187th Infantry Brigade conducted an Open House at the Army Reserve Center, 100 Southern Artery, to commemorate the 200th birthday of the U.S. Army. Mayor Walter J. Hannon conferred honorary citizenship certificates upon both Gen. Patton and Brigadier Gen. Leo L. Golash, Jr.

During the afternoon, free ice cream was served to children attending and the latest in army equipment was on display.

Life styles change. Traditions and customs change. So does funeral service. Today, no two funerals are alike, because no two families are alike. Today a competent funeral director must provide a broader spectrum of services than ever before.

funeral service isn't what it used to be

It's a challenge. Funeral directors affiliated with National Selected Morticians meet this challenge with a wide selection in a broad range of prices so each family may choose what best meets its needs. As members of NSM in this area, we helped bring it about. We believe in matching the service to the need. It helps make us someone to count on, every time.

ALONG THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL

Delahunt Announces Candidacy For City Council At - Large

Rep William D. Delahunt announces he will be a candidate for a City Council at-large seat in this year's city election.

Delahunt who some months back had been the subject of much speculation as to whether he might run for mayor, said in his statement he had considered a mayoralty bid.

But, he said, he decided against it due to legislative responsibilities and the upcoming reduction in the size of the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

Delahunt served as Ward 5 City Councillor from 1971 to 1973. He was chairman of the Park and Recreation Committee and the Council's Committee on Drug Abuse during these years.

Delahunt, a Democrat, is now in his second term as a state representative. He is 33 and a life-long resident of Quincy. He is married to the former Katharina Hermani and the father of two daughters, Kirstin Anna, 2, and Kara Marie, six months.

In his announcement, Delahunt said:

"In 1976 the Massachusetts House of Representatives will begin the difficult task of state wide redistricting to conform to the constitutional amendment overwhelmingly passed by the voters this past November, to reduce the membership of the House from 240 to 160."

"As a senior member of the committee charged with this sensitive responsibility, I feel that it is incumbent upon me to remain in the legislature to protect Quincy's vital interests. While Quincy presently has four state representatives, it is foreseeable that redistricting could reduce the City's representative delegation to two members unless we have a strong voice in the final redistricting plan. Pressures on the City from Boston to the north and neighboring towns to the east and west will be immense as the communities will attempt to carve up Quincy in order to maintain their present representatives. This would be extremely detrimental to Quincy in the long-term, and I shall do everything possible to prevent this development.

"Therefore, while it is true that I have given serious consideration to the office of Mayor, I have concluded that I can best serve the interests of the City of Quincy by remaining in the legislature rather than seeking that municipal office which carries full-time responsibility."

Delahunt continued: "However, I am especially concerned about the direction of our local government for the next several years, and wish to participate in those important decisions which will affect the future course of this great city. I have, therefore, decided to become a candidate for the office of Councillor-At-Large."

Delahunt said his combined experience as a former ward councillor and state representative would serve as an excellent background for dealing with problems confronting the City of Quincy.

Delahunt listed revaluation, unemployment, and property tax relief as major issues of his campaign.

Delahunt graduated from Thayer Academy (cum laude) and Middlebury College with an AB in political science. He received his Doctor of Jurisprudence from Boston College Law School and a post graduate of Jurisprudence from Boston College Law School and a post graduate certificate of study from the Dante Alighieri Institute in Rome, Italy.

A second term representative, Delahunt is a member of the Election Laws Committee and the Rules Committee. He was also appointed as assistant Majority Leader this past January. He was instrumental in the passage of several major campaign reform measures during his legislative career. Common Cause of Massachusetts, an independent citizen watchdog agency, recently singled out Delahunt for his efforts in the area of campaign reform and publicly praised him as one of the outstanding legislators in this regard in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

In October, 1974, Delahunt received an award citing him as the "Outstanding legislator of the Year" from Massachusetts Citizens for Life as a result of his work in behalf of legislation he co-sponsored with this organization.

Delahunt also drafted legislation allowing Norfolk County to purchase the Wollaston Golf Course as an alternative to development of the 92 acres. Plans to develop this site as a multi-purpose recreational area are proceeding.

As chairman of the legislative commission on medical research, his work in this area was the subject of a three-part series in a national publication.

Delahunt also drafted and co-sponsored the ordinance which served as the basis for the creation of Freedom Park bordering Upland Rd. near Quincy Center, and he recently announced a state grant of $15,000 for development of this site.

Patricia Toland Candidate For School Committee

Mrs. Patricia Toland of 82 Cedar St., Wollaston, announces her candidacy for Quincy School Committee.

Mrs. Toland, wife of John Toland, Jr., and mother of four, issued the following statement:

"As a woman and mother, I can bring a new dimension to the School Committee because of a unique perspective and a long standing interest in the education of the children of Quincy. While working to establish a Parent Advisory Council at the Furnace Brook School, I was impressed by the need for improved communication between home and school."

"As a former elementary school teacher for 11 years and now the mother of four children, I have had the advantage of seeing the educational process from both sides of the desk.

"As a concerned taxpayer, I want to assure the maximum return on the heavy investment in education made by the citizens of Quincy.

"As a member of the League of Women Voters of Quincy for the past eight years, I have served as treasurer, vice-president, and chairwoman of Fiscal Policy, Voter Service, and Legislative Action. Most recently, I was actively involved in the League's study of the Quincy School System. Two of the recommendations resulting from this study were a concentrated emphasis on basic skills and improved guidance at the elementary level. I strongly support these recommendations and will work towards their implementation.

"I have also participated as a member of a Relevancy Forum designed to allow for citizen input into curriculum planning, under the auspices of the Quincy Public Schools.

"As chairwoman of the Education Task Force of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women, I am acutely aware of the compelling needs of girls as well as boys in our educational system. I believe that the primary goal of education is the development of each person's capabilities to the fullest extent possible. Anything less is a waste of our most precious human resource - our children."

LaRaia Warns Against 'Erosion Of Home Rule'

Mayorality candidate Joseph J. LaRaia says the recent civil service directive to force municipalities to hire non-residents for local recreation jobs is another step toward the "erosion of the home rule concept."

"The home rule concept was developed to give citizens control of their local governments," Councillor LaRaia said, "but this order by the civil service director takes much of this local control away.

"And at the same time, the state has failed to uphold its own responsibilities such as cleaning up the pollution in Quincy Bay."

LaRaia spoke to members of the Torre Dei Passeri Social Club at the club's Washington St. headquarters.

On other issues, LaRaia criticized the money management of the present administration.

"The administration has gone too far with the borrowing market," he said referring to the city's use of the bond market to fund various projects.

LaRaia also emphasized his "open door approach to government" as being the only approach public officials should take.

"People are suspicious of their public officials and they have the right to be suspicious with all we read in the newspapers," he said.

In another area, LaRaia said he was encouraged by the hot meal program for the elderly in the city, but that he would like to see the program expanded.

Mullaney Sees Trend Back To Education 'Basics'

A house party was held for J. Thomas Mullaney, a candidate for School Committee at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis McIsaac, Young St., North Quincy.

Mullaney said: "Five years ago when I first began to attend Quincy School Committee meetings I was acutely conscious of the fact that the educational philosophies of the committee and the school department seriously conflicted with the desires of a great many parents.

"Generally speaking the school committee and the school department were committed to modern educational concepts such as the open learning environment, individualization, and more freedom to the students.

"The parents, largely products of traditional educational systems, were looking for more emphasis on basic skills, control and accountability by the schools and stricter discipline. They were skeptical of many of the newer educational techniques.

"While still a serious problem today I feel significant strides have been made in reconciling school policy with the wishes of the parents in many instances.

"In Quincy and throughout the nation the trend is back to basics. This is a healthy situation. We must determine what newer methods are worthwhile and somehow blend them with the time tested older method."

Finn Fears Crucial Police Ambulance Coverage Problem

tremendous. They had to cut services somewhere."

The year-old ambulance now used on calls has clocked 40,000 miles on some 2,700 runs, said Finn. The MDC ambulance used to assist Quincy police officers in transporting injured persons to the hospital.

MDC Commissioner William J. Byrne Jr., told The Quincy Sun all 37 towns and cities encompassed by the MDC ambulance service has been notified of the halt of service and said some "have downright refused" to provide added service, claiming their police departments simply cannot handle the added burden.

Finn said "a policy decision" by former MDC Commissioner John W. Sears put the MDC "out of the transportation business."

The area served in Quincy by the MDC covered Wollaston Beach, along Quincy Shore Drive, Furnace Brook Parkway at Nut Island Sewerage Plant, and the St. Moritz Rink in West Quincy. Finn said the Quincy ambulance crew served as "the primary transporter of seriously injured persons" in these areas, being assisted by the MDC in transporting to the hospital those less seriously injured.

Finn said he was particularly concerned with the anticipated added burden of service on Chickatabot Rd, Randolph Ave., and other streets in the Blue Hills area, and the area near the Southeast Expressway. Finn said:

"Randolph Ave., is seven miles away from our main ambulance. That some of these areas will be so far away from the ambulance is a major concern to me."

He added: "It is my opinion we are at a stage that, in serving the citizens of Quincy, we should be purchasing another ambulance."

He continued: "This halt in service is going to be an added burden on an already very busy Quincy Police ambulance crew...I feel it is going to tax us beyond our limits."

A recently passed ambulance law effective July 1 will require one-third of the ambulance crew police officers to receive 81 hours of special training as an "emergency medical technician." By July 1, 1976, two-thirds of the men must have this training and by July 1, 1977 the entire ambulance complement must acquire the training. Funding for this added training is footed by individual communities with no state aid foreseen.

According to Lt. Arthur Shea, administrative assistant, a total of five Quincy Police officers manning the ambulance have completed this required training. He said relief men and alternates will also undergo training at a later date.

Chief Finn said he understood the MDC has no plans to train its police officers in accordance with the new regulations.

In a letter to Mayor Hannon, Finn said:

"I have serious questions as to how we can respond to that section of the roadway which borders Randolph out on Canton Ave., and that section of the roadways which borders Milton and Braintree on Rte. 128. These are a long distance from Quincy even though they are considered to be geographically a part of our city."

Although Finn mentioned the possibility of requesting state aid to help shoulder the cost of added training and possible new equipment, Hannon said:

"The state is broke. We wouldn't get any aid."

Hannon said the state handed down a package of strict ambulance requirements and rules but did not include any funding. He said:

"Cities and towns cannot absorb the rules, regulations and laws passed."

Get Together With N.H. Pen Pals

Wollaston youngsters corresponding with New Hampshire second graders met their pen pals at a recent gathering held at the Wollaston School.

Twenty-three Wollaston School second and third graders taught by Pamela Hunter and 26 Danville, N.H. Elementary School second graders taught by Lucy Mauger faithfully wrote to each other on alternating weeks and also sent cards on Christmas, Valentine's Day, Easter and St. Patrick's Day.

The idea for pen pal correspondence sprouted when the two school teachers met at a summer workshop at Curry College last year. In September the teachers matched each student with a pen pal and the letters began.

The culmination of the eight-month correspondence came when all students met at Wollaston School. The pen pals lunched together and played games together throughout the afternoon.

The gathering was originally planned for Safford Park but rain forced the group to move indoors.

At the end of the day, Miss Hunter's students gathered together to sing "Thank-you very much!" to Miss Mauger's class. Then, each youngster gave a special hand-made present to his or her pen pal. The girls received a pin and the boys a tie bar.

Second and third grade pen pals at the Wollaston School were: Stacey Verrico, Chris Baughman, Steven Boutlier,

Quantum Community Assn. Opposes Residential Construction At Old Naval Air Site

The Quantum Community Association has voted to "adamantly oppose" residential construction on the old Squantum Naval Air Station site.

During a recent meeting, the association discussed Ward 6 Councillor Dennis Harrington's proposed amendment to limit planned development at the site to a maximum of eight stories.

In a letter to Harrington, the association expressed its preference for a four-story limit at the site.

The association also opposes "under any circumstances" development of wetland and bird sanctuary areas at the site and prefers - as its "number one recommendation" - site development as a park and recreation area.

If the site were to be developed, the association said it would favor "light industrial development".

Squantum School Students Take Field Trip To Concord

The fourth grade classes of Squantum elementary school recently went on a field trip to Concord and Lexington under the direction of Mrs. Lois Brandes, Miss Elaine Lemelin, and Mrs. Rita McKenna.

The children had done extensive study prior to the trip, and went to Concord dressed in clothes of the colonial period which they made themselves.

Upon their return, they made plans to use the information obtained at the battle sites in Concord and Lexington for presentation in a school Bicentennial program in June, which will be directed by Miss Ruth Haggerty, principal.

More Important Than Schools

Location, Cost Major Concern Of Transferred Home Seeker

Employees and executives whose jobs have taken them to new communities no longer regard schools as the most important consideration in choosing where to buy a home.

Instead, said Peggy Hall, director of relocation for Jack Conway and Co., today's transferee places primary importance on a home's general location and dollar considerations.

"This shift in transferee-buyers' priorities was determined in a spring survey of a cross-section of the membership of RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service," she said. "By contrast, in a similar survey two years ago, schools ranked first in importance, followed by location, price, and resale value."

Jack Conway Realtors is the local representative of RELO, whose nearly 800 member-firms assist families in selling and buying homes as they move to and from more than 8,000 cities and towns in the U.S. and overseas served by RELO members.

In the latest survey, RELO real estate brokers were asked to evaluate the importance of the following factors in home purchases, according to their experience with transferee-customers: resale value, price, interest rate, down payment, schools, location, railroad or expressway commuting time and guaranteed sale of old home.

When results were tabulated, a ranking of first was assessed one point; second, two; third, three, etc. Location, with the lowest total points, was deemed most important to transferees, closely followed by price, then by schools and resale value. Interest rate, down payment, guaranteed sale and commuting time trailed, in that order.

A third of responding RELO members ranked location first and another third saw price as their transferees' primary concern. Another 28 percent, each, listed location and price as being second in importance. Location nosed out price, overall, because of a slightly greater number of rankings in third, fourth, and fifth place among the eight matters of transferee concern.

Schools, likewise, virtually tied with resale value for the show position because a larger percentage of brokers observed this concern to be of third, fourth and fifth importance. Resale value was deemed most important by 18% and of second importance by 13%, while schools were listed first and second by 9% and 15% respectively.

"Home ownership has always been one of the best possible hedges against inflation," Hall said. "The shift toward a home's value and other investment considerations indicated by survey results appears to be a reaction to today's general economic climate. Good schools for their children continue to be of great importance in transferees' thinking, but not quite as important as they were two years ago."

RELO membership is surveyed quarterly to determine not only real estate market trends but the attitudes of transferees whom RELO has served.

"As members exchange not only referrals of prospective buyers who are moving to new RELO communities but also an indication of their thinking, we are enabled to do a better job of serving the important segment of the populace that is on the move every year," Hall pointed out.

Weymouth Savings Bank Introduces Girl Friday

Weymouth Savings Bank is introducing Girl Friday, a new dimension 24-hour banking service, announces George H. Thompson, president.

Girl Friday is an automated teller on duty every minute of the day and night at Weymouth Savings Bank's main office, 47 Washington St., Weymouth Landing.

Customers can now do most of their banking business anytime, day or night - even on Sundays.

For example, they can use Girl Friday to make:

- Withdrawals from savings or N.O.W. checking accounts.

- Deposits of any amounts into savings or N.O.W. checking accounts.

- Mortgage or consumer loan payments.

And, for each of those transactions Girl Friday provides a receipt.

These services are available through Girl Friday during regular banking hours if teller lines inside the bank are too long. Or, anytime after regular hours.

All a customer needs is a Girl Friday ID card to activate the Girl Friday automated teller located outside the bank. Transactions can then be made quickly and conveniently without stepping into the bank at all.

The applications for Girl Friday cards are available now at Weymouth Savings main office, 47 Washington St. and its two full-service branches at 295 Washington St. and 383 Bridge St.

To celebrate the opening of our Girl Friday automated teller, Weymouth Savings Bank is offering the opportunity to win free gifts. There is no obligation, all you have to do is visit Weymouth Savings Bank and demonstrate Girl Friday. Fill out registration form and you may win an Admiral Color TV, two Raleigh boys or girls 10-speed bicycles, two sets of Bicentennial Pewter Plates plus 100 bicycle safety flags.

"I am extremely pleased to introduce Girl Friday," said Thompson. "At Weymouth Savings we have always tried to give the best possible service to each of our customers. With Girl Friday we have added an entirely new dimension to our ability to serve our customer better."

"The automated teller concept is a tremendous step forward in modern banking techniques. Our Girl Friday system has been carefully designed and thoroughly tested for both efficiency and accuracy. It has also been designed and engineered to provide all possible safeguards for our customers."

"We are proud to pioneer this new banking service in our area because it helps maintain our leadership in customer service. And that's what Weymouth Savings Bank is all about."

Over 300 7th, 8th Graders Sign Up As Youth Volunteers

Over 300 seventh and eighth grade students have registered for the "Quincy Youth Volunteers" program sponsored by Mayor Walter J. Hannon.

The program, designed to assist in clean-up efforts in the city's neighborhoods, will take place during July and August.

This week Mayor Hannon is talking with students at the city's five junior high schools.

As a result of the Mayor's visits to the schools, 98 students registered at Sterling Junior High, 101 at Atlantic Junior High, 55 at Quincy Point and 50 at Central Junior High.

The Mayor will meet with Broadmeadows pupils on Thursday of this week. Another meeting is scheduled for more students at Central Junior High also.

"I'm delighted with the response," said Mayor Hannon. "By the end of the week, we should have more than 500 young people enrolled. After talking with the students, I'm positive this volunteer program will be a great success."

On Friday, June 20, at 7:30 p.m. at City Hall, a drawing will be held with 50 young people being chosen for the month of July and an additional 50 for August. There will be an equal number of boys and girls. With five junior high schools, 10 students will come from each school.

The Mayor noted that the names of alternates will also be drawn.

Under the direction of Ray Cattaneo of the Park Department, who also met with the students this week, the "Quincy Youth Volunteers" will be supervised by young adults.

Chamber Survey Continues

Taxation Of Non-Essentials Suggested

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce is continuing its survey among Quincy Sun readers, asking citizens to draw up feasible tax packages to raise $450 million in new revenues annually.

The $450 million includes $110 to finance a bond to pay off the state's debts and $340 million to offset the 1976 anticipated deficit.

Last week, Gov. Michael Dukakis signed a $450 million bond issue to pay off the state's $497.4 million fiscal 1975 deficit.

The week before, he signed a $110 million tax bill to finance the bond. The taxes will be effective July 1 and include:

- A one per cent increase in gasoline tax.
- A three per cent increase in meals tax.
- A five per cent increase in cigarette tax.
- A 20 per cent liquor tax surcharge.

Eric Swider, executive director of the Chamber, explained:

"For instance, our current three per cent sales tax yields the state about $285 million annually. An increase of one per cent would produce $95 million in new revenue."

In preparing that chart's unit yields, the Chamber used the combined source of the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation and the Secretariat of Administration and Finance. The unit yields are approximate, Swider noted, and reflect what might happen in an average year.

Some taxes listed would be brand new ones, such as an entertainment or real estate sales tax.

Suggestions received thus far by Quincy Sun readers include taxation of non-essential food like candy, gum, carbonated soft drinks, cake, pie and ice cream. This reader also suggested taxation of luxury items such as furs, leather goods, as well as liquor and cigarettes.

Another reader said added tax on gasoline would be "a hardship" to people depending on automobiles for transportation to work. The reader suggested instead an increased sales tax of one per cent and an increased tax on sports events and liquor.

Swider said compiled survey information - including surveys from the Chamber membership - will be made public and also become a part of testimony before appropriate legislative hearings.

He said the Chamber plans to send results of the survey to Gov. Dukakis and members of the taxation committee to indicate the views of South Shore residents and businessmen.

Quincy YMCA Wins E-Mass. Volleyball Title

The Quincy YMCA volleyball team captured the Eastern Massachusetts Volleyball Championship by defeating and eliminating Cambridge, Lawrence and Woburn.

Quincy took two straight from Woburn and Lawrence for the right to face Cambridge. This contest ended in a draw with both teams tasting victory once.

The best two-out-of-three followed with the "Y" taking the first game 15-11, in this game the team was led by the tenacious defense of Herbie Aikins who blocked shot after shot and set up many defensive plays for the squad. Billy Rendle was the offensive punch with several untouchable spikes.

Game two was all Cambridge as their awesome offense took over and blitzed the Quincy netters, 15-12. The only bright spot in this match was the consistency of Kenny Caldwell in his sets.

Quincy shook off the defeat for the third and final game and bolstered an awesome attack.

The final was 15-7 as team Captain Jim Rendle and Keith Meyers tallied the points while Mike Hindes did the setting for two prolific scorers.

Rendle pointed out one of the reasons for their success on the very hot and muggy court was their bench strength which consisted of Al Freeman, Bill Galarmeaux and Jack Welch.

This caps the season for Quincy except for a couple of tournaments in New York during the summer.

O'Malley In Final Amateur Appearance June 30

Danny Boy O'Malley, young amateur heavyweight boxer from North Quincy, will make his last amateur appearance Monday, June 30, when he fights on the AAU card at Lynn's Harbor House.

O'Malley then will turn pro. The 21-year older is managed by Nick DiCredico of Somerville and trained by Johnny Dunn, veteran Boston trainer.

The 6-1, 190-pound O'Malley played football and baseball at North Quincy High and he has won 18 of his 23 amateur bouts. He has shown considerable improvement since being taken over by DiCredico and Dunn.

He trains at Boston's New Garden gym and has earned the nickname "The Fighting Green Machine".

March Of Dimes

Walk-a-thon June 28

A free afternoon of fun and recreation is being offered to those who participate in the March of Dimes Super Summer Walk, June 28, starting at 9 a.m. at Faxon Field, Quincy.

The 10-mile walk-a-thon will end at Paragon Park, Nantasket, where all walkers can spend the rest of the afternoon. All rides, except the Indy 500, are free all day for those who walk.

Money raised helps support March of Dimes research and medical service programs, in addition to educational activities and community service projects.

Tom Cairns, former North Quincy High standout, was the 6-8 postman on the South Community College-Fairbury Campus basketball team of Fairbury, Nevada, and was among those honored recently at the annual sports banquet.

Cairns was tied for second place in scoring with an average of 11.6 points a game, was second in rebounding and also second in free throws, hitting on 75 percent of his free throws. He is a second-year letterman.

Coach Gary Bargaen called his 1974-75 team "one of the best teams defensively" and rated the team's fast break and the quickness of his players for the team's success.

The big wins for the Bombers were the Scottie Invitational Tournament at Highland, Kansas, and the Eastern Sub-Regional Tournament which qualified the team for the Regional Tournament in Casper, Wyoming.

12 From Quincy Qualify For State Special Olympics

Fifteen competitors from Quincy, accompanied by Quincy Recreation Dept. staff members and volunteers, took part in the Norfolk County Special Olympics recently at Dedham High School Field.

Events included softball throw, standing long jump, high jump, 50-yard dash, 220 and 440 yard relay.

Ceremonies opened with the representative towns and cities marching into the stadium in team formation and the meet was officially under way with the traditional lighting of the Olympic torch.

Twelve of the 15 Quincy entrants qualified for the state Olympics in June.

In the long jump in various age divisions, Tim DiCroce, Mario D'Angelo, David Higgins, Mimi Landey, Mary O'Brien, Hugh Cameron, Cynthia Mitchell and Sioban Nolan, with a fine leap of 7 feet one inch, all took firsts and Joey Howe placed second.

In the 50-yard dash Mary O'Brien, Virginia Hoar, Nolan, Linda Provost, Bobby Bouton, DiCroce and D'Angelo took firsts. Tim and Mario challenged each other and finished in a dead heat in seven seconds flat. Frank Toutlof, Landey, Russell Harret and Richard O'Brien took third places.

In the softball throw Hoar, Harret, Mitchell and Provost, with a fantastic throw of 99 feet 9 inches, placed first. Richard O'Brien, Bouton and Higgins took second and Toutlof and Howe placed third.

In the high jump Cameron was a winner.

In the relay the men's team, DiCroce, D'Angelo, Toutlof and Cameron was second. The women's team of O'Brien, Nolan, Hoar and Provost placed third.

Jamie Doherty Valuable Tufts Basketball '6th Man'

Jamie Doherty, a sophomore from Quincy, who returned from a November automobile accident to become a valuable "sixth man" on Tufts basketball team, has been awarded a varsity letter for basketball.

A 6-3 forward, Doherty scored 112 points while appearing in 17 games this season, for a 6.6 average. Season highlights included a 20-point effort in a 92-91 loss to Clark and 14 points in a 74-63 upset win over Williams.

Jamie also ranked second on the team in free throw accuracy, hitting 12 of 14 attempts for an .857 percentage.

"The auto accident ruined Jamie's chances as a starter, but he came back and played very well in spots," Coach Robert Johnson said. "We're expecting big things from him next season."

Jamie received a "pinched lung" in a Nov. 20 auto accident and missed the Jumbos first three games. Following the winter break, he returned to action Jan. 18 at Bates and appeared in every game in 1975. Tufts finished with a 9-11 record.

A former GBL all-star and basketball captain at North Quincy High, Jamie is the son of Mrs. Ann C. Doherty, of 117 Greene St., Wollaston.

Karhu, Donovan Win Class Titles In Horseshoe Tourney

Quincy's Toivo Karhu and Brian Donovan of Braintree won class honors in the 1975 Shore Amateur horseshoe tournament held recently at the St. Moritz Club in Quincy.

Karhu went undefeated in five games to win the Class A championship. Karhu was number one seed by virtue of the highest score in the qualifying round. Michael Conroy of Quincy was second seed. Both players were undefeated going into the final game. Both were averaging 26 ringers.

After three boxes in which neither player could manage a ringer, Karhu began to find the pin consistently and ran away with the game and Class A title, 36-7. Conroy had the satisfaction of finishing in the runnerup spot and having high ringer game for the tournament, 42, with 12 ringers out of 28 tosses.

Donovan's win in Class B was on the spectacular side. After the regulation five games he was tied for top spot with Frank DiCroce of Braintree and Henry Oberlander of Pembroke. Brian won his first playoff game, 21-12, over DiCroce.

In his second game, with Oberlander, he was trailing, 5-17. But suddenly Brian came alive. He dropped on one unanswered ringer to close the gap slightly. He followed it up with a double, and also unanswered, and the score became 14-17. Oberlander picked up a point in the next box, but Brian then finished the game with two ringers and a point for a 21-18 win and Class B honors.

Twenty-seven men entered the tournament, which was restricted to non-members of the St. Moritz Club. Each entrant pitched 50 shoes, counting all points, and the 12 high scorers moved into the finals—the top six scorers in Class A and the next six in Class B. Each class pitched a round robin schedule of five 35-point games, wins and losses determining the standings. Playoff games were abbreviated to 21 points. Championship and Runnerup trophies for each class were donated by club members.

Remick's squeezed by Rotary, 5-4, in another eight-inning affair. Rotary was enjoying a 3-2 lead going into the sixth inning. DiNardo had a home run and John Costigan and Tom Hennessey had driven in the other runs with singles.

Remick's starting pitcher, Jim Ferrera, retired Rotary in the bottom of the sixth to send the game into overtime. After a scoreless seventh, Remick's launched the winning rally with the bases empty and two outs.

John Todd beat out an infield hit and Lowell again came through with a big hit, a triple to left, to make the score 4-3. Lowell scored the winning run on a wild pitch.

Track Club Registration Scheduled

The Quincy Track Club will hold registration Tuesday and Wednesday from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Registration fee is $2 and all males and females from 9 to 90 are welcome.

"We hope this summer to have many more men and women 40 and over join up," said Lou Tozzi, who directs the club's weekly meets.

The Track Club's mile relay team Sunday won the New England AAU championship at Arlington. The team comprised three of Tozzi's North Quincy High runners, Bart Petracca, Mark Canavan and John Mackey, and a former North star, Geoff Hennessey, now at Northeastern. Quincy's time was 3:31.4 and among the teams Quincy defeated was the established Greater Boston Track Club.

Canavan ran a 1:57.2 half mile and Petracca a 4:20.6 mile but the best each could do was sixth. Each had run in the schoolboy New England championships the day before.

Canavan won the New England Schoolboy title in the half mile with a timing of 1:56.2. Billy Martin of Catholic Memorial, who edged Canavan for the state championship, was missing, but Canavan defeated a classy field.

Petracca ran a fine 4:17.9 mile and finished a close third in the New Englands.

"I was delighted with the performances of both Canavan and Petracca," Tozzi said. "I was very pleased to see Mark win a New England title. Petracca is only a junior and just watch him next year."

North Quincy finished sixth among the more than 65 teams.

Morrisette Starts Fast, Wollaston, Quincy Slow

Morrisette Legion's baseball team, seeking its 19th Zone 6 championship, is off to a good start with a 4-0 record and last night [Wednesday] sought its fifth in a row at Canton.

Morrisette, which will host the Northeast Regional tournament in August, will face Quincy Monday at 8 under the lights at Adams Field and next Wednesday will play at Hingham.

Wollaston and Quincy are off to slow starts and each is seeking its first win of the season. Last night Quincy hosted Cohasset, tonight [Thursday] Wollaston plays at Hingham at 6, Friday Wollaston is home to Weymouth at 8 under the Adams Field lights, Monday Quincy meets Morrisette, Tuesday Wollaston entertains Canton at 8 under the lights at Adams, Wednesday Weymouth is at Quincy, again under the lights at Adams, and next Thursday Wollaston plays at Cohasset.

Monday night under the lights Ray Cattaneo's Morrisette team exploded for a 14-0 win over Zone 6 newcomer Cohasset, as Mark Dwyer pitched a five-hitter, struck out 11 and didn't walk a batter.

Morrisette's 12-hit attack was led by Joe Glynn with two long doubles and a single, Steve McKinnon and Mike DePolo with two hits apiece.

Wollaston gave defending champion Braintree a battle until late in the game when Braintree erupted for an 8-4 win.

Sunday Morrisette won its biggest game, a 3-2 squeaker over Weymouth, which is co-favorite along with Braintree and Morrisette.

Tim Clifford, winning his second in a row, held Weymouth to five hits, struck out seven and walked five.

John Lawlor won the game with a home run in the eighth inning. Morrisette had scored twice in the fourth inning on a walk to Dwyer, a triple by DePolo and Lawlor's single.

Quincy and Canton staged a 12-inning marathon under the lights at Adams before Canton pulled out a 6-2 win.

In its previous game Morrisette had defeated Wollaston, 5-0, as Lawlor pitched a no-hitter. He struck out five and walked four.

DePolo and Frank Miceli had two hits apiece to spark Morrisette's attack.

In its season's opener Morrisette topped Hingham, 5-3, with Clifford pitching a five-hitter. Morrisette collected 10 hits off Jeff Pinkus, who was drafted by the Pittsburgh Pirates and this week reported to them for assignment to a farm team.

Clifford struck out 15, a high for him this year [he had 13 strikeouts in a North Quincy High game this spring] and he walked four. DePolo had three hits and drove in two runs, McKinnon had three hits and drove in a run, Jim Roberts had two hits and drove in a run, and Glynn also drove in a run with a first inning double. DePolo and Roberts also had doubles.

Quincy was the victim of a high-powered Hingham attack and bowed, 12-0, as Quincy was held to five hits while Hingham had 12, including a three-run homer and two other hits by pitcher Mike Schwob.

Quincy Coach Gerry O'Leary had good words for the pitching of 16-year old Dave Raftery, pitching his first year of Legion ball. He also praised Don Paluzzi for his hitting. He didn't play high school ball but came through with two hits.

Wollaston is in its second season after returning to the baseball wars following an absence of 15 years and, despite two losses in a row, Coach Bob Jordan expects the team to vastly improve on last year's 3-18 record.

"Last year we had just one experienced high school player and this year we have 12," Jordan said.

Pitching looks like a strong point with Jim Ferris, Mike Kelly and Peter Fallon all having high school varsity experience. Chuck McLain and Nick Anastos round out the pitching staff.

Bill Driscoll and Ray Widman are at first base, Tom McBride and Walter McGinley at second, Cooper Jordan and Chris Carr at shortstop and Rich Marino and Al Cangemi at third.

In the outfield are Rich Magnarelli, Jack Hatfield, Paul Stack, John DiRico and Ferris when he is not pitching.

Paul Ferris is the number one catcher with Hatfield backing him up.

Bill Roberts is the business manager and he and Jordan thank the post officers and other members for their 100 percent support to the team.

Fido, man's best friend, gets his name from the Latin word for "faithful": fidus.

Cranch School Youngsters Welcome Vietnamese Youngsters To U.S.

Twenty-two third graders at Cranch School recently penned letters of welcome to two Vietnamese boys adopted by a Newton couple.

Thumbing through a newspaper, third-grade teacher Kathy Hawley spotted a picture of David and Robert Lazare with their new parents Dr. and Mrs. Aaron Lazare. The boys, aged 10 and nine respectively, approximate the age of third graders and Miss Hawley broached the idea of correspondence to her class.

The students worked on the writing project a total of four days, with Miss Hawley first explaining the Vietnamese youngsters were coming to the U.S. because they needed a home.

Miss Hawley also devoted time to reviewing the history of the Viet Nam War with the children.

The students then composed their letters of welcome and mailed them to David and Robert.

Now awaiting replies from the Lazare children, the third graders hope to continue their correspondence. A sampling of the letters follows:

Dear David and Robert,
Welcome to the United States. How do you like your new parents and your new house? If I knew you, me and you would be good friends. I could teach you how to play kick ball and we could ride bikes together.

Your friend,
Danny Morris

Dear Robert and David,
Welcome to the United States. I hope you like your new home and all the things you can do, like go to the museum and play baseball. I hope you like your new parents.

Your friend,
Terri Horion

Dear Robert and David,
Welcome to United States. How was your plane ride from Viet Nam? How's your new parents? Are you doing well in school? Do you know any American games? In school we play kickball, basket ball, kick and catch and sometimes softball.

Your friend,
Patrick MacDonald

Dear Robert and David,
Welcome to the United States. I hope you find a lot of friends here. I hope your new home is fun too. Have a fun day today.

Your friend,

Hannon Appoints 10 To Freedom Park Committee

Mayor Walter J. Hannon has appointed 10 civic and municipal leaders to a Freedom Park Committee to assist in implementing the preliminary planning stages of the bicentennial park.

Named to the committee were:

Senator Arthur H. Tobin; Rep. Thomas F. Brownell; Ward 3 Councillor John J. Lydon Jr.; Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti; National Resources Commissioner Richard J. Koch; Richard Meade, Department of Planning and Community Development; Rev. John D. Banks, Bethany Congregational Church and Freedom Park Association; Dr.

Donald C. MacLeod; Mrs. Joseph B. Hanlon, Wollaston Garden Club, and Mrs. Dorothy C. Campbell, president Women's Clubs of Quincy.

Hannon said the committee will work closely with the architect, Weinmayer Associates, to implement the first phase of the project which is scheduled to begin in July.

He said he was pleased to be able to involve in the project citizens who have promoted the concept of the park since its inception, and who have worked very hard toward its realization.

"I believe the park will be a valuable addition to the Historic Trail in the city," Mayor Hannon said. "It will not only serve as a scenic pathway between the Adams National Historic site and the Adams Academy, but will also provide a natural passive recreation site to countless numbers of visitors to our city."

Appropriations necessary for construction of the park were made possible through a $15,000 matching grant from the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission.

The park project has been endorsed and supported by local civic groups, the Quincy City Council, the Quincy Historical Society, and representatives of the National Park Service. It will be maintained under the direction of the Department of Natural Resources of the city.

SHE THROWS -- Paula Morrison shows the form which enabled her recently to pitch a one-hitter

SHE SWINGS—The only girl playing in the Quincy Junior League, Paula Morrison, takes a healthy cut at the ball

Paula Morrison: She's A Double Threat In Junior Baseball

By TOM SULLIVAN

Seats' team in the Quincy Junior Baseball League recently received a one-hit pitching performance and the pitcher also doubled home two runs.

This ordinarily wouldn't raise any eyebrows but in this case the player in question is a girl.

Paula Morrison, a 12-year older and the only girl playing in the Junior League, was the author of the one-hitter, one of her two, pitching victories, and two of the runs in her 5-0 win over Burgin Platner came home on her double.

Paula, who plays first base when not pitching, was also the winning pitcher against Boston Gear but failed to finish that game.

"I think she is probably the best girl player in the state," Coach Bart O'Leary said. "She is a really fine player and just loves to play."

Paula, a sixth grader this year at the Snug Harbor School, will be welcomed with open arms when she enters junior high school in the fall.

A fierce competitor and the tallest player on her team, she has been playing since she was four years old with the Koch Club and with playground teams during the summer. The Koch Club enables hundreds of Quincy boys and girls to take part in sports.

She also plays basketball with the Snug Harbor recreation team, with the Koch Club and for St.

Boniface CYO team.

"At first it was difficult being the only girl in the league; but I get along fine with my teammates and I love to play baseball," said Paula.

Although her teammates get along with her all right, some of the opposing players are not too keen on her playing. Not many boys like to admit they were held hitless or defeated by a girl.

"The boys on the other teams tolerate her and respect her, but they would just as soon have all boys playing against them," said Paula's most ardent fan, her mother, Mrs. Meredith Morrison, of 16 Doyle Terrace, Germantown. "Before the game, the boys on the other teams ask, 'Which one is the girl?'"

A year ago Paula was an outstanding player with the Koch Club and with the Snug Harbor Recreation team.

Paula is not the only member of the family to have taken part in sports.

Her older brother, Lyle, another brother Jeffrey and sisters Brenda and Deborah all have been sports oriented.

Paula has not had an outstanding year at the plate but has come up with her share of hits, her biggest one being the two-run double against Burgin Platner.

More girls may be infiltrating the youth leagues in the future, but not many are expected to surpass Paula Morrison as a competitor.

It is no longer a man's world!

Beaches Could Be Closed

City Has 'Proof' MDC Dumping Raw Sewerage Into Quincy Bay Waters

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Quincy Health Commissioner Alfred Mahoney says he has "proof" raw sewerage has been dumped into Quincy Bay by both the Nut Island and Moon Island treatment plants operated by the MDC.

Meanwhile, inadequate manpower, insufficient chlorination, and partial plant operation were cited as reasons for what Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin called "the appalling pollution" in Quincy Bay.

City, state and MDC officials were scheduled to meet Wednesday afternoon in the office of Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti to seek an immediate summertime solution to the pollution problem in an attempt to avoid closing Quincy's shores during the peak recreational months.

Dr. Mahoney told The Quincy Sun he would be forced to close Quincy beaches if coliform counts in a wide area exceed the safe level of 700.

Two weeks ago, coliform counts soared as high as 84,000, Mahoney said.

Recent counts, however, ranged between 190 and 500.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon said he hoped Wednesday's meeting would lead to an immediate solution to the critical pollution problem in the Bay, saying:

"I'm concerned with June, July and August... We must keep the beaches open."

Ward 6 Councillor Dennis Harrington, chairman of the City Council's environmental control committee, and Ward 1 Councillor Leo J. Kelly, vice-chairman, both agreed immediate solutions must be determined. But Kelly

Registry - Chamber Agree

Many Changes To Improve Efficiency At Quincy Registry

The Registry of Motor Vehicles has agreed to initiate a host of procedural and physical changes to improve operation of the Quincy office.

In a three-and-one-half hour meeting Monday, Registrar Robert Panora and Quincy Office Supervisor Walter Marquis discussed with members of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and representatives of the insurance and automobile businesses operational criticisms of the Quincy office and to offer constructive suggestions to increase office efficiency.

Eric Swider, executive vice-president of the Chamber, called the meeting "very productive" and singled out the planned use of an information officer inside the Registry as "the greatest single contribution towards relieving the aggravation" at the Registry.

Also attending the meeting were Paul MacElaney, a director of the Chamber, and chairman of the meeting; George Reardon of President Chevrolet; George Foley of Foley Chrysler-Plymouth; George Riley of Riley and Rielly Insurance Agency; Leo Darr, of Quincy Motor-Co.; William Woods of Woods' South Shore Auto School; Nils Johnson of R. D. Chase; and Ned Platner and David Leitch of Burgin-Platner Insurance Co.

The meeting was a result of a suggestion made by Reardon to form a task force aimed at improving service at the Registry. A questionnaire was sent to 100 Chamber members in the automobile and insurance businesses, asking their opinions on the operation of the Quincy Registry. Swider said the auto and insurance businesses were sampled since both deal heavily with the Registry.

Dozens of suggestions were made during the meeting and Panora and Marquis have pledged to work to implement the suggestions. One suggestion—installation of two new counter windows—will take place within the next two weeks, said Swider, while the bulk of the improvements will materialize within a 30-day period.

Swider said the group will meet again in 90 days to assess the progress made at the Registry.

Problem areas singled out in the Chamber questionnaire centered on procedure, personnel and facilities.

During the meeting Panora, a former inspector at the old Quincy Registry office, pinpointed automobile certificates of title as a major cause of recent problems at the Registry. He noted the Quincy office handled some 250,000 transactions last year and said transaction volume increases 10 per cent annually.

He said although the Quincy office employs 19 clerks, four to five are absent daily.

The group agreed to adopt the following changes in the area of procedure at the Quincy office:

- Installation of an information officer during busy periods to indicate correct lines in which to stand and to make sure forms are properly filled out.

- Install a directory billboard

Sheets Seeks Improved Security At Parking Garage

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets has requested a meeting with the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the mayor's office to discuss possible improvement of security procedures at the Ross Parking Garage.

Sheets said he had received complaints regarding stolen cars and personal property from Ward 4 residents.

Sheets indicated the Chamber of Commerce was anxious to discuss possible improvements, and the mayor's office was in the process of arranging the meeting.

Sheets also introduced a resolve at the city council meeting Monday asking the council to recommend the procedures at the garage be examined, and improved if feasible.

Point Pedestrian Light To Be Installed By August

A pedestrian crossing light in front of St. Joseph's Church, Quincy Point is scheduled to be installed in late August.

Rep. Robert Cerasoli, who recently urged immediate installation of the proposed light, said he has received communication from state Public Works Commissioner John J. Carroll that bids on the project will be advertised before the end of June.

The project will also include upgrading of existing signals at Chubbuck St. to full actuation, said Cerasoli.

Responding to a letter from the representative, Carroll wrote:

"If the current schedule is adhered to, physical construction of the lights should be underway by late August this summer."

Named to the committee were:

Senator Arthur H. Tobin; Rep. Thomas F. Brownell; Ward 3 Councillor John J. Lydon Jr.; Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti; National Resources Commissioner Richard J. Koch; Richard Meade, Department of Planning and Community Development; Rev. John D. Banks, Bethany Congregational Church and Freedom Park Association; Dr.

Donald C. MacLeod; Mrs. Joseph B. Hanlon, Wollaston Garden Club, and Mrs. Dorothy C. Campbell, President Women's Clubs of Quincy.

Hannon said the committee will work closely with the architect, Weinmayer Associates, to implement the first phase of the project which is scheduled to begin in July.

He said he was pleased to be able to involve in the project citizens who have promoted the concept of the park since its inception, and who have worked very hard toward its realization.

"I believe the park will be a valuable addition to the Historic Trail in the city," Mayor Hannon said. "It will not only serve as a scenic pathway between the Adams National Historic site and the Adams Academy, but will also provide a natural passive recreation site to countless numbers of visitors to our city."

Appropriations necessary for construction of the park were made possible through a $15,000 matching grant from the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission.

The park project has been endorsed and supported by local civic groups, the Quincy City Council, the Quincy Historical Society, and representatives of the National Park Service. It will be maintained under the direction of the Department of Natural Resources of the city.

Beaches Could Be Closed

City Has 'Proof' MDC Dumping Raw Sewerage Into Quincy Bay Waters

By MARY ANN DUGGAN

Quincy Health Commissioner Alfred Mahoney says he has "proof" raw sewerage has been dumped into Quincy Bay by both the Nut Island and Moon Island treatment plants operated by the MDC.

Meanwhile, inadequate manpower, insufficient chlorination, and partial plant operation were cited as reasons for what Senator-City Council President Arthur H. Tobin called "the appalling pollution" in Quincy Bay.

City, state and MDC officials were scheduled to meet Wednesday afternoon in the office of Atty. Gen. Francis X. Bellotti to seek an immediate summertime solution to the pollution problem in an attempt to avoid closing Quincy's shores during the peak recreational months.

Dr. Mahoney told The Quincy Sun he would be forced to close Quincy beaches if coliform counts in a wide area exceed the safe level of 700.

Two weeks ago, coliform counts soared as high as 84,000, Mahoney said.

Recent counts, however, ranged between 190 and 500.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon said he hoped Wednesday's meeting would lead to an immediate solution to the critical pollution problem in the Bay, saying:

"I'm concerned with June, July and August...We must keep the beaches open."

Ward 6 Councillor Dennis Harrington, chairman of the City Council's environmental control committee, and Ward 1 Councillor Leo J. Kelly, vice-chairman, both agreed immediate solutions must be determined. But Kelly

Registry - Chamber Agree

Many Changes To Improve Efficiency At Quincy Registry

The Registry of Motor Vehicles has agreed to initiate a host of procedural and physical changes to improve operation of the Quincy office.

In a three-and-one-half hour meeting Monday, Registrar Robert Panora and Quincy Office Supervisor Walter Marquis discussed with members of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and representatives of the insurance and automobile businesses operational criticisms of the Quincy office and to offer constructive suggestions to increase office efficiency.

Eric Swider, executive vice-president of the Chamber, called the meeting "very productive" and singled out the planned use of an information officer inside the Registry as "the greatest single contribution towards relieving the aggravation" at the Registry.

Also attending the meeting were Paul MacElaney, a director of the Chamber, and chairman of the meeting; George Reardon of President Chevrolet; George Foley of Foley Chrysler-Plymouth; George Riley of Riley and Rielly Insurance Agency; Leo Dart of Quincy Motor-Co.; William Woods of Woods' South Shore Auto School; Nils Johnson of R. D. Chase; and Ned Platner and David Leitch of Burgin-Platner Insurance Co.

The meeting was a result of a suggestion made by Reardon to form a task force aimed at improving service at the Registry. A questionnaire was sent to 100 Chamber members in the automobile and insurance businesses, asking their opinions on the operation of the Quincy Registry. Swider said the auto and insurance businesses were sampled since both deal heavily with the Registry.

Dozens of suggestions were made during the meeting and Panora and Marquis have pledged to work to implement the suggestions. One suggestion - installation of two new counter windows - will take place within the next two weeks, said Swider, while the bulk of the improvements will materialize within a 30-day period.

Swider said the group will meet again in 90 days to assess the progress made at the Registry.

Problem areas singled out in the Chamber questionnaire centered on procedure, personnel and facilities.

During the meeting Panora, a former inspector at the old Quincy Registry office, pinpointed automobile certificates of title as a major cause of recent problems at the Registry. He noted the Quincy office handled some 250,000 transactions last year and said transaction volume increases 10 per cent annually.

He said although the Quincy office employs 19 clerks, four to five are absent daily.

The group agreed to adopt the following changes in the area of procedure at the Quincy office:

- Installation of an information officer during busy periods to indicate correct lines in which to stand and to make sure forms are properly filled out.

- Install a directory billboard

Sheets Seeks Improved Security At Parking Garage

Ward 4 Councillor James A. Sheets has requested a meeting with the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the mayor's office to discuss possible improvement of security procedures at the Ross Parking Garage.

Sheets said he had received complaints regarding stolen cars and personal property from Ward 4 residents.

Sheets indicated the Chamber of Commerce was anxious to discuss possible improvements, and the mayor's office was in the process of arranging the meeting. Sheets also introduced a resolve at the city council meeting Monday asking the council to recommend the procedures at the garage be examined, and improved if feasible.

Point Pedestrian Light To Be Installed By August

A pedestrian crossing light in front of St. Joseph's Church, Quincy Point is scheduled to be installed in late August.

Rep. Robert Cerasoli, who recently urged immediate installation of the proposed light, said he has received communication from state Public Works Commissioner John J. Carroll that bids on the project will be advertised before the end of June.

The project will also include upgrading of existing signals at Chubbuck St. to full actuation, said Cerasoli.

Responding to a letter from the representative, Carroll wrote:

"If the current schedule is adhered to, physical construction of the lights should be underway by late August this summer."

Paula Morrison: She's A Double Threat In Junior Baseball

By TOM SULLIVAN

Sears' team in the Quincy Junior Baseball League recently received a one-hit pitching performance and the pitcher also doubled home two runs.

This ordinarily wouldn't raise any eyebrows but in this case the player in question is a girl.

Paula Morrison, a 12-year older and the only girl playing in the Junior League, was the author of the one-hitter, one of her two pitching victories, and two of the runs in her 5-0 win over Burgin Platner came home on her double.

Paula, who plays first base when not pitching, was also the winning pitcher against Boston Gear but failed to finish that game.

"I think she is probably the best girl player in the state," Coach Bart O'Leary said. "She is a really fine player and just loves to play."

Paula, a sixth grader this year at the Snug Harbor School, will be welcomed with open arms when she enters junior high school in the fall.

A fierce competitor and the tallest player on her team, she has been playing since she was four years old with the Koch Club and with playground teams during the summer. The Koch Club enables hundreds of Quincy boys and girls to take part in sports.

She also plays basketball with the Snug Harbor recreation team, with the Koch Club and for St.

Boniface CYO team.

"At first it was difficult being the only girl in the league; but I get along fine with my teammates and I love to play baseball," said Paula.

Although her teammates get along with her all right, some of the opposing players are not too keen on her playing. Not many boys like to admit they were held hitless or defeated by a girl.

"The boys on the other teams tolerate her and respect her, but they would just as soon have all boys playing against them," said Paula's most ardent fan, her mother, Mrs. Meredith Morrison, of 16 Doyle Terrace, Germantown. "Before the game the boys on the other teams ask, 'Which one is the girl?'"

A year ago Paula was an outstanding player with the Koch Club and with the Snug Harbor Recreation team.

Paula is not the only member of the family to have taken part in sports.

Her older brother, Lyle, another brother Jeffrey and sisters Brenda and Deborah all have been sports oriented.

Paula has not had an outstanding year at the plate but has come up with her share of hits, her biggest one being the two-run double against Burgin Platner.

More girls may be infiltrating the youth leagues in the future, but not many are expected to surpass Paula Morrison as a competitor.

It is no longer a man's world!

2 Quincy Men Appointed To Economic Development Committee

Two Quincy men will serve on an economic development committee formed from within the Norfolk County Development and Tourist Council.

William A. O'Connell, vice-president of the Quincy Historical Society, and Dale A. Pedersen, marketing officer at the South Shore National Bank, will be part of a seven-man committee formed to provide economic assistance for all 28 communities within Norfolk County.

Primary duties of the newly-formed committee will be to improve Norfolk County's economy in the following ways:

- Attract new business and industry into the County.

- Help existing businesses expand and grow.
- Improve the quality of life and environment.

- Encourage businessmen's activity in the Development Council to make it grow and become more effective.

Edward W. Owens, Jr., president of the Council, said the organization can provide financial aid to the business community through Chapter 18, Acts of 1972 and can also offer professional advice through Chambers of Commerce, educational and financial institutions and state and government agencies.

He said, too, the Council can assist businesses in bidding for government contracts and export business, can help find suitable land from the Computerized Industrial Land Inventory, and can encourage positive legislation.

Senior citizens wishing to participate in "Mayor Walter J. Hannon's Operation Discount" are reminded they must obtain a blue Council on Aging identification card.

The program, open to Quincy residents 60 years of age and older, began earlier this month with a distribution of pamphlets to eligible Quincy residents.

The ID card can be obtained at the Council on Aging office, 1120 Hancock St., the JFK Health Center, or through the mail by phoning the Council on Aging office.

"I hope the senior citizens of Quincy will enjoy your booklet and we will be looking forward

Cathy Miele Stars At Lincoln-Hancock Dedication

One of the hits of the recent Lincoln-Hancock Community School dedication was the performance of six-year-old Cathy Miele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Miele of 39 Branch St., South Quincy.

Cathy, a first-grader at Lincoln-Hancock, was chosen by teachers to accept the official bicentennial flag presented to the school by Quincy Heritage Executive Director John Graham.

One woman who attended the two-hour dedication ceremony noted Cathy sat so quietly, waiting to make her speech, while all around her, people fanned themselves and fidgeted in the heat of the Sunday afternoon.

When her turn came, Cathy delivered her speech flawlessly. She said:

"On behalf of the boys and girls and staff of the Lincoln-Hancock Community School, I accept this bicentennial flag."

Following the ceremonies, Cathy received congratulations and praise from Mayor Walter J. Hannon, School Supt. Dr. Lawrence Creedon and School Principal Morrie Hibbard.

MDC Awards $967,644 Contract For QSD Reconstruction

The MDC has awarded a $967,644 contract for reconstruction of Quincy Shore Drive and renovations at Caddy Park and in the Wollaston Beach area.

Northeastern Construction Co. of Framingham, low bidder on the project, is scheduled to begin work in August.

Announcement of the contract award was made at a recent meeting between MDC and Quincy officials including Senator-Gly Council President Arthur H. Tobin, Rep. Thomas F. Brownell, Mayor Walter J. Hannon's Executive Secretary Joseph Shea and City Councilors Leo J. Kelly, Dennis Harrington and Warren Powers.

Tobin said work along the Wollaston Beach area will include major traffic safety renovations. He said a raised grass median strip will be installed from the Greenberg Bridge to Fenno St. The roadway will be repaired and widened and a 10-foot pedestrian walk will be constructed. Tobin added a bicycle path will be built from Caddy Park to Fenno St.

Improvements at Caddy Park will include sod planting, new playground equipment and a wooden bridge, he said.

On behalf of the city of Quincy and its residents, Tobin thanked the MDC for its continued interest in the Quincy Shore Drive area. He said:

"These improvements will increase public safety, provide for a better traffic flow, create more recreational facilities and add to the beauty of the area."

Houghs Neck Sea Wall Checked For Deterioration

Quincy's Public Works Department is conducting an inspection of the sea wall behind the home of Abe Ruback of 724 Sea St., Houghs Neck, responding to Ruback's claim the wall is deteriorating.

Last year the wall was patched but Ruback, contacting the office of Rep. Thomas F. Brownell, says it is again in need of repair.

In a letter to Mayor Walter J. Hannon on behalf of Ruback, Brownell described the Houghs Neck community as "deeply concerned and apprehensive" over the sea wall's condition, fearing flooding during heavy rainstorms. Brownell said:

"The wall is now in desperate need of repair so that the area will not be flooded with the next storm. I would like to point out that the entire Hough's Neck section of Quincy could very well be cut off in the next storm if this wall is not properly taken care of."

Public Works Commissioner James J. Ricciuti said his department will investigate the condition of the sea wall and said:

"All repairs that are needed will be made."

Rep. Brownell suggested "major work" be done on the wall rather than "patching", saying the problem will simply recur again and again.

City Solicitor McCormick In 'Satisfactory' Condition

City Solicitor Richard McCormick, 41, was listed in "satisfactory" condition at Quincy City Hospital after being stricken Tuesday at a Licensing Board meeting in City Hall.

Dr. Alfred Mahoney, Health Commissioner who was also at the board meeting, administered oxygen to McCormick, after he complained to his secretary, Rita DjMattio, he wasn't feeling well. He was then taken to Quincy City Hospital and placed in the intensive care unit.

McCormick, who lives at 104 Gardiner St., West Quincy, was appointed city solicitor Nov. 10, 1972, after serving eight months as assistant city solicitor. McCormick has been reappointed to the office every year by the mayor.

Blinking Pedestrian Light For Furnace Brook School

Approval has been given to the installation of a blinking pedestrian actuated traffic light at the Furnace Brook Elementary School by MDC Commissioner William J. Byrne, reports City Councillor John J. Lydon Jr.

The traffic light approval came after effort by Senator Arthur Tobin, the MDC and Lydon to assist children in that area. The Furnace Brook area is a major winter recreation facility for the community and in the winter is used principally after school hours.

A precise date for the installation of this light has not been set but Lydon said he has been informed it is a priority item.

Daughter frets over dad's gifts

By PAT and MARILYN DAVIS
Dear Pat and Marilyn:
My mother passed away last year and my father has been dating a younger woman who works at his office. I do not dislike this woman, but I do feel she is going with my father only because of the gifts she has been receiving. For her birthday, he gave her a very expensive watch with diamonds. A couple of days ago Dad gave her a cluster diamond ring which must have cost $1,000. What do you think of this? Cindy

Dear Cindy:
I think it proves that diamonds really are a girl's best friend! If Dad is over 21, there isn't much you can do but voice your opinion. But don't expect anyone to hear you.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
Larry and I have been married three years. I am 29 and he is 25. Larry was married before and has two children. He spends every Saturday with these children and I feel like an outsider. Besides I want a child of my own because I feel that Larry will have more interest in our home. This may be wrong and I may be selfish. But do you think it would work?

Dear Left:

ing a child, this is one of the worst. Babies aren't something to be used to keep a husband home. Besides, it wouldn't work. You knew Larry had two children when you married him, so adjust to that fact and learn to live with it.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
My daughter piles on makeup like it is going out of style. She is only 16 and here's what she uses — mascara, lipstick, eye liner, lip gloss, blusher, makeup base, and several other things which I can't remember. What can I do? Mom

Dear Mom:
Makeup has been around almost as long as soap and water. Girls have always found ways to give mother nature a helping hand but your daughter seems to be overdoing it.

Why not suggest that she enroll in a charm class? They will teach her to make down NOT make up.

Dear Pat and Marilyn:
Denise and I went together for a year. We were engaged and had planned to get married in six months.

My best friend, Greg, was always very nice to Denise and often accompanied us bowling, to shows, swimming, etc. I just thought he liked both of us. Then Denise started breaking dates and our relationship suddenly changed. I asked her why and she said she just wanted to be free. Within two weeks she was dating my best friend. What can I do? Hurt

Dear Hurt:
Nothing. I know you feel betrayed by Greg and hurt by Denise. This is a natural reaction. Keep your social life active. You'll be surprised how quickly another pretty girl can mend a broken heart.

COOKING CORNER

Wine and fish make good dinner partners

By KAY JARVIS
When it's fish you are serving, chefs, anglers and epicures agree — wine and fish are most amiable partners.

A chilled dry white dinner wine is the catalyst for many a memorable dinner or luncheon built around seafood.

The recipe shown here uses fillets set in a sour cream flaky pastry, then sauced with a shrimp cream mixture.

The broth is most important. First, because plain boiled fish loses its flavor, second because the seasonings cook more slowly than the fish.

It is necessary to have the broth heated just below the boiling point and fully seasoned with the herbs before submerging the fish. Just a brief poaching cooks and flavors the fish without destroying its delicate texture.

SOLE IN PASTRY

- 1 1/2 pound fillet of sole
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons each chopped pimiento, parsley and green onion
- 1 (5 ounce) can small deveined shrimp
- Two-thirds cup sauterne
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 small stalk celery
- 1 green onion
- 1 sprig parsley
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 cup light cream
- 2 egg yolks, lightly beaten
- 1/2 cup cooked peas

Baked Pastry Shell
Season sole fillets with salt, using about 1/4 teaspoon. Sprinkle with pimiento, parsley, onion, and about half the shrimp. Roll up fillets, and fasten with wooden picks. Heat wine with water, celery, onion, parsley sprig and remaining 1/4 teaspoon salt in skillet with cover.

Place sole rolls in skillet, and poach gently about five minutes, just until cooked through. Meanwhile, prepare sauce. Melt butter and blend in cornstarch. Add cream and cook, stirring constantly, until sauce boils thoroughly and is thickened.

Stir a little of the sauce into egg yolks. Combine with remaining sauce, and cook over very low heat until sauce thickens again, stirring constantly. When fish is cooked, remove rolls and keep warm. Boil down poaching liquid rapidly, until 1/4 cup remains.

Strain, and add to sauce. Taste, and add more salt if needed. Add peas and remaining shrimp. Arrange fish rolls in pastry shell, and spoon sauce around them. Serve at once.

Pastry Shell: Cut 1 cup butter or margarine into 1 1/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour. Add 1/2 cup dairy sour cream, and mix well. Wrap in plastic film and refrigerate overnight. On lightly floured board, roll out to a circle about 8 1/2 inches in diameter. Trim edges neatly. Mark a second circle within this, about 6 1/2 inches in diameter, and cut with a small sharp knife.

Place larger circle, for rim of pastry shell, on baking sheet, and chill. Remove inner circle, and chill a few minutes again. Again roll this smaller circle, making an 8 1/2 inch circle for base.

Trim edges, and place circle on baking sheet. Moisten edges, and set the first pastry ring on top, with edges even. Brush top with 1 egg yolk, beaten with 1 teaspoon cream. Prick center of ring.

Bake in a 350-degree oven about 40 minutes, until well puffed and browned. Allow to cool slightly before removing to serving plate. Use two broad spatulas to lift the delicate pastry. Serves five to six.

STITCHING WITCHERY

Terry Towels Make Table Mats

Dear Mrs. Kinser:
Some of your readers might like the table mats I made. Cut terry kitchen towels in half crosswise and bind the edges with bias tape. They are very perky and don't need ironing! — Edith Kramer

Great idea, Edith. Be sure, Gals, to preshrunk everything before you start sewing or you will have "puckered" place mats. (I think these would be terrific for picnics.)

QUICK STITCH: Steam irons behave just fine as long as you treat them with respect. Even though there are some that claim to use tap water, others get along better with distilled. Put distilled water in a clean (VERY clean) soap bottle that has a spout at the top. Place the spout in the iron and gently squeeze. No spills.

OUR CHILDREN Accent positive in daughters

By DR. WILLARD ABRAHAM

Q. Our two daughters are so different, and that fact seems to create a problem. They are both teen-agers.

The older one is very popular, pretty, has a bubbly personality, and somehow fills a room with happiness just by walking in. Her sister (two years younger) is much more serious, perhaps even brighter, and quite studious. She has a few friends, carefully selected.

I find myself responding more to the older one. We laugh together, talk freely and really are very close friends. Lately the younger one is even more quiet, subdued and solitary than usual, and I'm afraid we're in for some problems. What do you suggest we do?

A. You might try to "accent the positive" by seeking the strengths in both of your girls. It may take a little more effort in your relationships with the younger one, because you obviously are partial to her older sister as you yourself seem to recognize.

Certain characteristics in people are attractive to each of us, but as parents we have to make a special effort not to show our favoritism. And yet, a sudden turnabout in your attitudes and conversations would probably be a mistake. Gradual creation of a better balance will take a little time.

Q. Please help me out with a difficult situation. I grew up in a home that was very "straight," to use the current term. My husband didn't

Now that our children are growing up, that difference has suddenly become important. To put it bluntly (although this is very hard for me to write about), he says that sex organs should be called by their correct names. I don't think they should even be referred to, or if they are, in my family we always had some acceptable labels to use.

Even if there were some possible kind of compromise, he wouldn't agree, so I just don't know what to do. I'd be so grateful for your recommendations.

A. Most experts in sex education these days agree with your husband. They suggest not making a big deal over the subject, but to use accurate terms in as matter-of-fact a manner as possible. They believe that the correct terminology is also the most "acceptable."

You may want to discuss this subject with your physician or your children's teachers. They can no doubt recommend some current materials in the field of sex education for you to read.

Q. Our son has a "sway back," and so does my husband, I never thought of it as a problem until recently. In the past few months my husband has complained of back pains, so I'm now concerned about both of them.

I know there are a lot of popular medicines for problems related to backaches, but I'm not sure that's the way to go. What do you think?

A. A doctor who specializes in the orthopedic area may be the person your husband should see. To avoid the possibility of similar problems, you might encourage him to take your son along. It may only be a matter of proper exercise, but an expert in that specific field is perhaps the right one to tell you.

MISGUIDED MISSILES

More than 50,000 Americans will lose the sight of one eye during the next 12 months. Most of these losses will be the result of accidents.

Fortunately, there is protection available and should be used when you are doing jobs in which you can EXPECT some danger to your eyes. For example: sanding or painting a ceiling or working under the car. Most hardware stores carry various types of plastic eye protectors that will shield against low velocity particles that may fall or blow into the eye.

But for the more dangerous hazards, caused by misguided missiles at a high velocity, that's a different story. These are jobs such as: hammering nails into concrete, operating a high-speed tool such as a grinding wheel, or a cold chisel. To prevent serious eye injury from high speed objects, you should always wear industrial strength, heavy-duty protective safety glasses. The lenses are strong enough to do the job.

District Court House Robbed

Burglars came into the halls of justice this week to take $350 from the safe in the Quincy District Courthouse.

Complaint slips were used as torches to light the work of cracking the safe in the clerk's office. The break was discovered by John Otto, assistant custodian.

Upon discovery, Otto called the police and various court officials: clerk Lawrence Lyons, chief probation officer Edward Avery; custodian Ted Hunt and court officers Amos Loring and Arthur Hultman.

Police expressed belief the job was that of professionals. And judging from the manner in which they operated, the robbers were familiar with the interior arrangement of the courthouse.

O'ROURKE PLAYGROUND DEDICATED

City officials joined local veterans in paying tribute to John J. O'Rourke, disabled veteran, at the dedication of the West Quincy playground in his honor.

The ceremonies were under the direction of Morrisette Legion Post, with the assistance of Councilors Arthur Drohan and George McDonald and members of the park board.

After the dedication, a score of bugle and drum corps from eastern Massachusetts competed for the $100 first prize, which was donated by Mayor McGrath, Quincy Lodge of Elks, Harmony Club, Councilors Drohan and William Edmonston and the Morrisette Post.

A baseball game between the Morrisette Post and the Neponset Wanderers followed the band competition.

COUNCILLOR HERBERT CALLS FOR AERIAL LADDER

Councillor Charles Herbert from North Quincy called upon the City Council to purchase an aerial ladder for the fire department.

Herbert's request came in the wake of a hanger fire at the Victory Plant, in which 14 Quincy firemen had to be rescued from the roof of the burning building by a Boston-fire department aerial ladder.

"We must not jeopardize lives to save money," Herbert said.

He noted that Quincy was no longer a small town and that modern equipment was needed. He pointed out that there was no piece of equipment in the city that could reach the roof of North Quincy High School.

MCGRATH ASKS FOR SALARY DONATION

Mayor McGrath this week called upon the city employees for further salary donations, in addition to the two weeks' salary contribution already made.

The Mayor said that the immediate economic future was bleak. The city's income was reduced, state contributions were below that of 1931, while at the same time welfare work in Quincy had increased.

He asked the city employees to help bear the burden while the city made necessary financial adjustments.

$18,000 Post

Lundin Appointed HN Project Director

Mayor Walter J. Hannon announces the appointment of Lars Norman Lundin, an architect, to the $18,000 directorship of the Houghs Neck Comprehensive Community Development Program.

The appointment was made on the recommendation of the five-member Houghs Neck Screening Committee, which reviewed over 100 applicants for the position.

Members of the committee included three Houghs Neck residents: Lois Murphy of 135 Sea Ave., Russell Sines of 1087 Sea St., and Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly.

Geoffrey A. Davidson, Director of the Department of Planning and Community Development and Joseph Shea, Executive Secretary to the Mayor, also served on the committee.

The committee recruited extensively for the position. Advertisements were placed in Quincy and Boston papers and a flyer was mailed to the 1,500 households in Houghs Neck. Advertisements were also posted at universities and two recent Community Development Conferences.

The screening committee met on numerous occasions to discuss procedures and standards, to interview prospective candidates and to formulate their report to the Mayor. Twenty-five applicants were interviewed and with several meetings seven of these people were interviewed twice.

"I am very impressed with the efforts made by the screening committee which resulted in their recommendation of Mr. Lundin," said Mayor Hannon. "The active involvement of community residents is what will make our neighborhood programs a success."

Councillor Kelly also noted that he was "especially pleased that a person who came from Houghs Neck was selected. Mr. Lundin's roots are in the community," he said.

Lundin is a registered architect with an extensive administrative and construction background as president of his own architectural firm. He has designed and built projects for schools, churches, industrial complexes, apartment buildings, condominium developments, medical facilities, shopping centers, public buildings, government installations and master plans for both Air Force installations and housing communities.

Lundin grew up in Houghs Neck and attended Quincy schools. Through the past 15 years he has prepared plans for remodeling and construction of housing for more than 200 families in Houghs Neck.

He studied Mechanical Engineering at Northeastern University and received a bachelor of architecture degree from the Rhode Island School of Design. In addition, he has taken several courses at both Harvard University and the California Institute of Technology.

"There is a definite need for a community improvement project in Houghs Neck," said Lundin. "It is long overdue and as a result the challenge is that much greater. I grew up in the Neck, and as a consequence know a lot of the families and problems we have all gone through."

"Hopefully with my professional background, a good community spirit, and a lot of involvement by interested citizens, we can all strive to make Houghs Neck a beautiful place to live."

Lundin's first steps will be to locate a site office and begin to gather and examine information on public works improvements and code deficiencies for the program, with neighborhood committees.

The comprehensive community development program which will be funded for three years, has two basic elements. One of these, home improvements, will involve the rehabilitation of housing through interior and exterior repairs.

A financial assistance program will be available to residents and eligibility requirements will be established by the project staff and by a loan committee made up of Houghs Neck residents.

The other element of the program includes major public works improvements. A total of $650,000 from both federal community development money and the recently passed $2 million bond issue has been allocated for these improvements. Work on streets, curbs, sidewalks, utilities, unaccepted streets, landscaping, parks and playgrounds are all eligible under public improvements.

"Both aspects of the program will have to be accomplished along parallel lines and hopefully we can start construction in the early fall," said Lundin.

One of the first steps will be to establish a community policy committee which will establish criteria for financial assistance, code enforcement procedures, and selection of public work project priorities. These policies will be an important instrument in setting guidelines to implement the program. The community policy committee will also provide the forum for maximum community involvement and communication of ideas.

"I hope to work very closely with all Houghs Neck residents and I don't want to limit the input of ideas and suggestions. If any individual or group wants to communicate an idea or solution, my door will always be open," Mr. Lundin added.

'Little Did They Realize...'

By HENRY BOSWORTH

Here's one of those "little did they realize" stories.

As friends and classmates at Quincy High School back in the late 1940's, they often walked by historic First Parish Church in Quincy Sq.

And, little did they realize, that some 27 years later both would be at that very church—one representing the governor of Massachusetts and the other representing the President of the United States.

Their names—if you haven't guessed: Arthur Tobin, City Council President and state senator and Henry Cassani, commanding officer of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

The occasion: the Presidential wreath-laying ceremony July 11 at 11:30 a.m. in honor of the 208th anniversary of the birth of President John Quincy Adams.

Both Tobin and Cassani will speak at ceremonies in front of the church. And Cassani will place a wreath from President Ford on the tomb of John Quincy Adams in the basement of the church.

The program is being sponsored by Quincy Heritage. A civic luncheon will follow in the church dining room with South Shore National Bank picking up the tab.

IT COULD BE a local case of "dirty tricks" or just someone who has it in for Mayor Walter Hannon.

Anyway, the other day, the mayor's office received a number of complaints from South Quincy residents complaining of phone calls they had received.

The caller—a man—had telephoned their homes, they said, and indicated he was calling from the mayor's office. The guy got off on the wrong foot with the women he called by asking, as his first question—their age.

They refused to talk to him and he got "pushy" and even "vulgar", the women complained. He didn't get very far with the men he called either.

Hannon's office in no way is blaming his two challengers, Joseph LaRaia or Grace Saphir.

But there is one mouthy individual around town for whom something like this would be par for the course. He's a political hanger-on and hanger-around. Then, again, it could be someone with a pet peeve or grudge.

But whoever he is, he ought to get lost—fast.

PRESIDENTIAL HOPEFUL Morris Udall, Democrat Congressman from Arizona, is scheduled to attend tonight's [Thursday's] campaign kickoff for City Council at-large candidate Paul Harold. The event will be held at the North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Udall is beginning a tour of Greater Boston. His name will appear on the Massachusetts' Presidential preference ballot in April, 1976. In 1967, Udall's brother, Stewart, then Secretary of the Interior, visited the Adams National Historic Site with Lady Bird Johnson.

Harold, who is national committeeman for the Massachusetts Young Democrats met Udall at the Democratic National Charter Convention in Kansas City last December.

Udall is the second current Presidential candidate to visit the City of Presidents. Last week, former Senator Fred Harris of Oklahoma spoke at a coffee hour at the home of John Doherty in West Quincy.

MARIO SALVATORE, assistant venerable of the Quincy Sons of Italy, is now president of the Hanover Mall Merchants Association. Salvatore, former Quincy businessman, is now manager of Almy's Department Store at Hanover.

HERE'S ONE: From the Quincy Rotary Club newsletter: Dick Darr and Lou Cassani, our automobile people, talking about the possibility of getting together and raffling off a Rotary Club.

THAT PRETTY NEW cocktail hostess at The Hollow is Janice Lamparelli, Miss Quincy Bay of 1974. She's working there for the summer until returning to Gordon College for her second year in the fall. She's majoring in elementary education.

SHORT STORY [with a happy ending]: A group of friends and neighbors were strolling along the beach in Germantown the other day when a husky, owned by Joan Willbridge ran up to them barking. He kept barking and darting back toward the water until they followed him.

And there, they found his playmate, a mongrel puppy about to drown. Noreen Stewart of Weymouth dashed into the water and rescued him.

SMILE DEPT: Bobby Welch, 12, of 26 Tyler St. and Kevin McSweeney, 11, of 67 Hollis Ave., both North Quincy, telephoned The Sun Monday to report they were going to try for a new record: to see how long they could spend in a pup tent. Their goal: 12 hours.

They called back—a couple of hours later—to report they were out of the tent. Why so soon? "Well," they explained, "we had to go to Nantasket." [Well, you know how hot Monday was.]

New Express Service

Next Day Mail Delivery Or Get Your Money Back

A new express mail service launched by the U.S. Post Office pledges a money-back guarantee of next-day delivery to postal customers.

Begun on an experimental basis, express mail delivery is available in Quincy and is also being expanded to include more and more major cities throughout the U.S.

Under "Option 5" of regular express mail delivery, a customer can mail a letter at the Quincy Post Office by 4 p.m. and be guaranteed delivery to the receiving post office by 10 a.m. the next day.

A more expensive service under this same option guarantees next-day hand-delivery to the addressee no later than 3 p.m.

Robert Shea, general foreman of delivery at the Boston branch of the post office, said it is the responsibility of the sender to inform the receiver to pick up the letter at the receiving post office. In addition, he said a receiver must sign for a hand-delivered letter in order to verify the time of receipt.

The sending post office will refund a customer's money if the letter or package fails to reach its destination on time, said Shea.

Shea said a letter or package weighing up to 40 pounds would be sent to Los Angeles for $4 via post office to post office express mail delivery. Post office to addressee delivery for the same letter or package would cost eight dollars, he said. Complete rate information is available at the Quincy Post office.

In addition to regular express mail service, post offices throughout the country are also offering programmed express mail service. Under this program, individuals, companies and professionals who mail frequently can contract with the post office for next-day delivery at specified times. Shea said doctors, for example, can use the service to mail X-rays to other physicians on a regular basis. The contract can be made for varying lengths of time and under four options: post office to post office, post office to airport, airport to post office, or airport to airport.

Arrangements for this service can be made through the Customer Service Department of the Boston Post Office.

Question Of Week

How Many Times Census Being Taken?

"How many times is the census being taken this year?" asked a caller who had already been visited by two census takers.

The volunteer operator replied that three census will be taken in 1975.

State law requires that a city or town census be taken each year, for the purpose of keeping the voting lists current. Questions asked include name, address, age, occupation, residence as of January 1, and children 17 or older.

The state also requires a census of all children aged 3 through 21 in order to gather school population statistics.

Finally, a special Massachusetts census is being taken this year, pursuant to the newly passed constitutional amendment cutting the size of the Legislature from 240 to 160 members. Redistricting the state will be based upon these 1975 census figures.

The first two are combined in some towns, through cooperative agreement between the Town Clerk and the school department, and it may be possible to use the town census figures for purposes of the special state census. But in many communities, you may expect a census taker to appear at your door on three separate occasions.

This question is one of many received by the League of Women Voters Voter Information Phone. Individuals with questions on government may call the VIPhone Monday through Friday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The number for the Boston area is 357-5880.

Thumbnail Thoughts

Mr. Dukakis may be excused if he develops a complex. Even his fellow Democrats are calling him names.

A "drug addict" in the 1800s was a lady who sneaked a smoke. Now the term covers a wider field.

Confusion reigns. First the governor says no new taxes will be necessary, and then he asks for $687-million worth.

Nominees for "hardest to convince" honors are those who still think that Richard Nixon did no wrong.

At the prices of today's shirts and ties, parents should be grateful their kids like to dress casually. And the schools permit it.

THE CAMPAIGN TRAIL

HORSE SENSE - Mrs. Grace Saphir arrived at City Hall via horse-drawn surrey Monday to pick up nomination papers for mayor, dramatizing her contention City Hall needs "more horse sense and less nonsense". Driver is Frank Moore of Bridgewater and footwoman is Moore's daughter Bonnie. (Miller Studio)

Stresses 'Horse Sense'

Grace Saphir Rides To City Hall In Horse And Buggy

Dramatizing a need for "horse-sense" in Quincy government, Mrs. Grace Saphir, rode to City Hall in a horse and buggy Monday to take out nomination papers for mayor.

Making her second bid for that office, Mrs. Saphir said she deplored "the machine gun approach" of Mayor Walter J. Hannon. She said Hannon has created in Quincy an "armed-camp image" by advocating controlled use of machine guns by the Quincy Police Department. She said:

"On the threshold of our nation's bicentennial, Quincy, once known as the city of presidents, is now known as the city where they feature machine guns to maintain order...Quincy needs more horse sense and less nonsense in City Hall."

Mrs. Saphir, a registered nurse and life-long Quincy resident, is the founder and president of Save Our Shores, an environmental group.

Paul Harold Council At-Large Candidate

Atty. Paul D. Harold of 31 Riverside Ave., Adams Shore will announce tonight [Thursday] his candidacy for City Councillor-at-large at a campaign kick-off at the North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall.

In a pre-release statement, Harold said, "I am running for Councillor-at-large for three major reasons, all dictated by my concern with the quality of government in Quincy.

"First of all, I believe I can make a positive contribution to our city, having been involved in government at all levels for the past seven years.

"Second, I am running because I believe I have something to offer the voters of Quincy - a choice. I am concerned with the attitude of some public officials in Quincy who turn up to listen to the people only every two years, at election time. I am concerned with the politics of influence peddling by some political factions, which is strangling our city.

"Power politics helps political cronyism, but does nothing for the average citizen, and that is the third reason I am running. I am concerned with the quality of public services in Quincy. Power politics leads to an abuse of the political process; and when a public official works only for himself and his pals, he is not representing the people he is sworn to serve.

"Most important about this campaign, I think, is that one man can make the difference. One man can stand up and speak for the people, without the backroom deals and without basing decisions on political expediency.

"One man can maintain his integrity, can co-operate in an above board manner with other officials, and can work to serve the people."

Harold, who is 26, is a graduate of Sacred Heart High School, Weymouth. He received his bachelor's degree in government from the University of Massachusetts - Amherst where he was on the Dean's List. He received a Juris Doctor degree from Suffolk University Law School. In addition, he studied public administration at the Johns Hopkins European Center in Bologna, Italy.

He served as an intern in the Washington office of Congressman James A. Burke, also worked in the Mayor's Office of Public Service in Boston and the Attorney General's Office of Consumer Protection.

He is a member of the Board of Curators of the Quincy Historical Society and the board of directors of the Adams Shore Community Association, the Quincy Citizens Association and the Germantown Heritage Society. He serves as chairman of the Quincy Good Government Forum and as National Committeeman for the Massachusetts Young Democrats.

Harold is a member of the Quincy and Massachusetts Bar Associations, the Montclair Men's Club, the North Quincy Knights of Columbus, the Democratic City Committee and is a sponsor for Quincy Youth Hockey Association.

Harold was named to Who's Who in American Politics in 1973 and 1975.

An attorney with offices in Braintree, Harold also writes an historical column for The Quincy Sun.

1,200 Estimated At LaRaia Reception

A crowd estimated by campaign workers at more than 1,200 turned out for a reception for mayoralty contender Joseph J. LaRaia last Friday night at the Quincy Armory.

City Councillor LaRaia described the evening as "a tremendous success for both the campaign and the citizens of Quincy."

The $6 a person dance was originally scheduled to be held at the Fore River Clubhouse, but was moved to the larger armory.

"This campaign is based on the concept of open government and citizens participation," LaRaia said during a brief address. "Too often in the past, decisions were made without listening to your opinions first, I want to change all of that.

"Too often in the past, you were not being represented but merely being dictated to. I want to change all of that.

"Watergate, I think, has shown us what can happen to government when citizens don't get involved. Tonight, you have shown your interest in trying to change the quality of government in Quincy.

"I'm sure we'll succeed." Earlier, LaRaia told Houghs Neck residents public officials must work with community organizations in developing governmental policies.

"Public officials must show an interest in community organizations," LaRaia said. "They should not berate them or ignore them.

"I think I have a good rapport with community groups in Quincy," he told neighborhood residents at the home of Kathy Hardy, 49 Spring St.

"Unless officials have the pulse of their community, they will not act compassionately, but instead impersonally—almost like a robot."

'Fascinating Store'

Sherman-Scott Bookstore Opens New Hobby Center

The newly-opened Hobby Center added to the Sherman-Scott Bookstore in downtown Quincy has created what co-owner Robert Sherman calls "a fascinating store."

The Sherman-Scott Bookstore opened last September and one month ago, co-owners Sherman and Howard Scott added a Hobby Center to the store, calling it Sherman-Scott Book and Hobby Center. The store is located at 1466 Hancock St., Quincy Square.

Describing the store, Sherman said:

"A bookstore by itself is an interesting place and a hobby store is, too. The combination of the two make it a fascinating store if I do say so myself."

The store boasts over 40 categories of paperback books including poetry, science, history, art, music, literature, comedy and gothic.

The store carries the best-selling hardback books as well as new titles.

The Hobby section of the store stocks a variety of kits including decoupage, macrame, needlepoint, leather work and string art.

The store carries model kits of planes, cars, tanks and ship and also has a selection of launchable rockets powered by an engine.

A special science center includes chemicals, dissecting kits, microscopes, slides and laboratory materials.

The Hobby Center also stocks paints, glue and unfinished

Astra Corp. New Transformer Increases Energy

Astra Corporation announces the development of a technological improvement in the design of instrument transformers which increases energy efficiency and lowers equipment operating costs for commercial and industrial users.

A drastic reduction in standby electrical energy loss and a savings of about 20 percent in such high-cost items as copper, electrical steel, and petroleum-based insulation materials are achieved through an innovative arrangement of transformer components, according to Joseph G. Landry of Abington, president of Astra Corporation and inventor of the new product.

"The new design reduces noise levels at the point of energy delivery to the customer, provides cooler equipment operation and higher instrument accuracy," said Landry.

"Electric utilities install about 50,000 old-style devices annually," he said. "If only the new units are purchased, utility customers will accrue savings equivalent to 1400 barrels of oil per year and the savings will pyramid to 4200 barrels per annum industry wide, at the end of a three year period."

Landry, a Tufts University engineering graduate, who holds patents in the energy measurement field, said: "This is the most notable improvement in the design and construction of this type transformer in at least 50 years. The benefits are transferable to other electro-mechanical devices."

Astra Corporation, established here in 1961 and traded OTC, manufactures instrument transformers to control and measure electrical energy.

City Receives $983,000 HUD Grant For Community Development

A $983,000 community development program for Quincy has been officially approved by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Mayor Walter Hannon received a formal letter from HUD Boston Area Office Director, William H. Hernandez, Jr. approving the city's application for funds under Title I of the 1974 Housing and Community Development Act. Councillors James Sheets, Leo Kelly and Arthur Tobin also attended the ceremony.

The new law eventually will provide $2.5 billion for 1,271 cities and 85 counties in the U.S.

this fiscal year. Hannon also received a personal letter from President Ford, congratulating the City and asking the Mayor to ensure "total public participation" as the development plan is carried out. It was also presented to him at the ceremony.

The plan calls for the rehabilitation of housing, the repair of public works facilities, the development of parks and recreational facilities, and social service facilities for youth and the elderly.

President Ford said the 1974 law under which the plan was submitted is designed to "change the old helter-skelter system of helping U.S. cities grow". He said the new Act "is designed to let the cities and counties of our nation set their own priorities with maximum discretion within broad federal guidelines."

Hernandez at the formal presentation said the new law provides for significant local direction and local priorities in creating development plans, but pointed out that strict federal guidelines are retained in such matters as civil rights.

He said that with the signing of a grant agreement between the federal government and the City a letter of credit will soon be issued to Quincy for expenditure of the funds.

"Our highest priority is the preservation of Quincy's neighborhoods," said Mayor Hannon. "Because of our strong commitment to these neighborhoods, and our desire to have maximum positive impact, I recommended and worked for the passage of a $2 million bond issue to augment our community development funds."

Funds from the $2 million bond issue together with Quincy's share of community development monies will be used to begin three major neighborhood improvement programs.

A comprehensive program which will begin shortly in Houghs Neck will combine local and federal funding shares to reach $1,050,000 for the first year. The smallest portion of this money will be used to hire a professional staff to offer guidance to the community's program, with the rest of the funds being spent for public works improvements and home rehabilitation.

First year neighborhood improvement commitments are also being made by the city in Southwest Quincy with $750,000 and Atlantic with $450,000. Comprehensive programs are expected to start in these areas by 1978. Important aspects of the program in Southwest will include home and business rehabilitation, as well as major public works improvements.

Public works improvements include work done on streets, sidewalks, curbs, utilities, landscaping, parks and playgrounds.

In Atlantic, the city is working closely with the Atlantic Improvement Association and Ward 6 Councillor Dennis E. Harrington to develop a unique self-help program. This program will provide assistance to residents needing exterior home improvements. In addition to major public works improvement efforts which will begin in Atlantic, the neighborhood association will use a portion of the community development funding to establish a youth center. Residents of the area will assist in administering this center.

The Mayor also indicated his support for citizen participation which President Ford specified in his letter. He noted that six ward meetings with over 300 participants were held last fall to provide citizen input in determining priorities for community development. He also observed that citizen committees would be very active in determining policies for each of the neighborhood improvement programs.

In addition to funding for neighborhood improvement programs, $350,000 have been earmarked for open space improvements at Mound Street Beach, the Germantown Playground and Freedom Park for necessary landscaping and improvements.

Many Changes To Improve Efficiency At Registry

explaining certain registry forms and procedures.

- Allow license plate receipt forms to be hand-written rather than typed to eliminate a clerk's possible long wait for a typewriter in the registry office.

- Reduce advance appointment time for a road test from six to eight weeks to two [effective immediately].

- Request the Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation to authorize sales tax clerks to handle certain exemptions.

- Designate the office supervisor or principal clerk to deal with "controversial issues", thus freeing other clerks to handle window customers efficiently.

- Devise a better public information program.

- Include an instruction sheet in all renewal forms.

- Halt the administration of driver examinations in the office and seek a new location, preferably in Quincy.

Planned personnel changes include:

- Prompt opening of the Quincy office at 8:45 a.m.

- Referral of business phone calls to other than counter personnel to expedite service.

- Possible installation of a toll-free Boston number to make general inquiries which the Quincy office cannot answer.

- Operation of an internal training program for office clerks and form-filling sessions for insurance and auto personnel.

To deal with complaints centering around parking and traffic problems, the Registry plans:

- To investigate the possibility of re-locating the nearby dog pound to create more parking space.

- To request office employees not to park in front of the Registry building, freeing added space for high turn-over customers.

- Investigate the possibility of co-ordinating traffic lights outside the Registry to create a five second lag allowing cars to exit more easily onto Broad St.

Swider also noted form revisions on license renewals will be made in renewal lines, eliminating the need to switch to the application line to make necessary revisions on typewriters there.

He noted, too, registry customers are welcome to park in the VFW parking lot when transacting business at the office.

EVIL KNEVILS MOTORCYCLE

I am treated very bad because, every time Evil Knevil wipes out I get the worst of it.
But still I get polished every time I make a jump. If it wasn't for me, Evil Knevil wouldn't be such a man of the world. But every time I am five feet away from the ramp I know I have to go up. Because every time you in front of the ramp ready to go up it you can't stop and tell your master, "Lets think it over," because once your that close there's no telling what will happen next!

Once I had a fight with that dumb jet powered sky cycle, because he said, "I'm better than you." You see that made me mad so I kicked him right in the jet pack with my muffer, and he went crying to his father the rocket that went to the moon.

The rocket that went to the moon blasted me with his fire, and popped my tire. Then I really got mad and so did he and he put ice cream in my carbtorator. And it wasn't even my favorite flavor. Then I quit the fight because it wasn't fair, two against one. Then I rode to the gas station to get the strawberry ice cream out of my carbtorator, and get my tire fixed. And then I rode home to Evil Knevil's shop and asked him who he liked best. He said he liked me because if he said he liked that dumb jet powered sky cycle, I would run him over.

So this is a hint for all your fellow Motorcycles. Never let your master or a jet packy-wacky sky cycle push you around!

MONEY TALKS Pension Reform Act Reaches 40 Million American Workers

By Philip J. Lawrence, President
Colonial Federal Savings
And Loan Association
of Quincy, Holbrook and Wareham
8-6 Weekdays 8-7:30 Thursdays

At long last, some 40 million American workers are going to enjoy privileges that previously have been reserved for more favored members of the U.S. work force.

The Pension Reform Act, which was voted by Congress last September and became effective as of January 1, 1975, enables workers not covered by pension or profit-sharing plans to set up their own retirement programs.

The opportunity is double-edged: It helps to augment Social Security income in non-working years, and it reduces income taxes during working years.

If you are not currently involved in a pension or profit-sharing program through your employer, you may set aside up to $1,500 this year—or 15 per cent of your work earnings, whichever is smaller—in an Investment Retirement Account. This procedure may be continued on an annual basis as long as you are not participating in a retirement program with your employer.

Your spouse, if employed, likewise may set up a similar program, provided he or she is also not covered by an employer.

If your employer has a program but you earn extra income from other working sources, you may place up to $1,500 or 15 per cent of this extra income in an I.R.A. program.

If you switch from an employer who has a pension fund, you may place your vested principal into an I.R.A. If your new employer does not have a pension or profit-sharing program, you may add to this I.R.A. within the indicated limits.

What are the advantages of I.R.A.? For one thing, you are storing up a nest egg to add to your security in non-working years. For another, you do not pay present income taxes on the amount you save in this account. It earns the same amount as the savings program you choose, and this income, compounded daily, is also deferred for tax purposes.

The main condition of the I.R.A. is that, since its purpose is to provide for retirement, you cannot have personal access to the funds until you reach the age of 59½, and you must begin to withdraw funds by the end of the calendar year when you are 70½.

When withdrawals begin, you pay income tax on them for the amount withdrawn in the given year. But since your income in all probability declines when you reach non-working status, the taxes you pay should be substantially less than, if paid currently.

Self-employed individuals who have taken advantage of the Keough Plan are reflecting increased interest since the Pension Reform Act triples to $7,500 the yearly contribution that can be made. Many firms also may find the I.R.A. program a simpler approach to employee pensions than their own programs.

Quincy Softball League

Rouillard's A.L. Pacer, Well's N.L.

The Quincy Softball League has produced a number of surprises this season as it moves toward the playoffs which will find the top three teams in each league qualifying. The league consists of 18 teams, nine in each league.

Rouillard's is rated the team to beat in the American League and has a 12-1 record, followed by Mr. Kelly's, 11-2. Beau's, Hofbrau and first year Palmer Pub are battling for the third playoff spot in that league.

Hofbrau, a young team, handed Rouillard's its only defeat. The best record for a first year team in the league is 11 wins and the Palmer Pub already has eight.

Well's Grille, defending champions, rolls along with an 11-1 record in the National League and Sabina's is 10-3. Spring Plumbing is a surprise and is fighting Walsh's and South Shore National Bank's Kevin Schwede and Quincy Savings Bank's Bill Lomanno hooked up in a fine pitchers' duel as South Shore knocked injury-riddled Quincy out of first place, 2-1.

Schwede scattered seven hits and pinch runner Allen Skolnik scored the winning run on Frank Belcastro's single to left field. Lomanno, forced into action due to injuries, gave up nine hits in his first pitching start ever.

Ted DeCristofaro and Pat McAuley offered Quincy's only fire power as McAuley tripled in the only run and DeCristofaro went three for three and he ended a South Shore threat in the sixth with an unassisted double play.

Data Wins 6th Straight

Quincy's Senior Babe Ruth League team, Data Services, which lost its first four games, bounced back to win six in a row, climaxed by a 16-2 breeze over Avon Sunday night.

Quincy tonight [Thursday] will try to avenge an earlier defeat when it hosts Milton 1 and Saturday night will be home to Hanover. Both games will be played at Adams Field under the lights at 8:15.

Against Avon Mark Jaehrig, Paul Barry and Mark Walsh hit long triples. Danny O'Leary had three hits including a double, Jerry Cronin was two for two and Paul McGuigan and Ken O'Sullivan each had two hits.

Saturday Quincy topped Hingham, 5-1, behind the three-hit pitching of John Papile. Eric Carrera had three of Quincy's five hits including a lead-off double. Hingham played the game under protest over a disputed play in which a runner scored from second base on an overthrow to first base.

Last Thursday night it was Quincy 6, Weymouth Elks 5, in two extra innings. Mike Holleran was the winning pitcher in relief after Spike Cooney had gone eight innings and struck out eight. McGuigan had three hits, Cooney a triple and single, Jaehrig two hits and Carrera, O'Leary, John Collins and O'Sullivan a hit apiece. Quinly stole eight bases.

The previous night Quincy walloped Milton, 8-1, with Barry pitching four-hit ball. The team had a well-balanced attack with eight hits including a triple by Barry, and the team displayed some more aggressive base running.

Earlier in the week Quincy romped over Weymouth Eagles, 10-4. Papile pitched a strong game and Jaehrig was three for three; Carrera and McGuigan had two hits each and O'Sullivan contributed a double.

St. John's Sponsoring New Team

St. John's Parish is sponsoring a baseball team for boys 13, 14 and 15 for the first time and now supports 24 boys and girls' baseball and softball teams.

This is believed to be a record for a single organization outside of the city's youth leagues.

The newest St. John's league, the Cadets, has four teams, the Rangers, Twins, Padres and Astros. All games are played at Kincaide Park at 6 p.m.

Friday the Astros will play the Padres. Next Wednesday the Twins and Astros will collide.

Legion Baseball

Morrisette Blanks Wollaston For 5th

Morrisette Legion's baseball team, knocked from the ranks of the undefeated last Friday by Weymouth, rebounded Monday night under the lights at Adams Field to blank Wollaston, 4-0, to make its record 5-1 in Zone 6.

Last night [Wednesday] Morrisette played at Hingham. Friday it will host Braintree at 8 p.m. under the lights at Adams. Monday will play at Cohasset and next Wednesday will face Canton at 8 at Adams.

Tonight [Thursday] Wollaston plays at Cohasset, Friday Quincy is at Hingham at 6, Sunday Wollaston and Quincy clash at 8 at Adams, Tuesday it will be Wollaston vs. Braintree at 8 at Adams and next Wednesday Quincy at Cohasset.

Monday night Mark Dwyer scattered seven hits to notch the win for Morrisette and Jack Rabel sparked the attack with some clutch hitting.

Morrisette scored twice in the second inning on a single by Paul Jacknaugh, who was forced at second by Frank Miceli, a walk to Dwyer, an error on Paul Messina's ball which allowed Miceli and Dwyer to score.

In the fourth Jim Roberts singled as did Dwyer, Messina walked to load the bases, and Roberts scored on Rabel's fly ball. Morrisette added another run in the sixth when Dwyer walked, advanced on a passed ball and scored on Rabel's single.

Rabel had two hits and drove in two runs, and Dwyer scored twice. He struck out five and walked four in gaining the win.

Wollaston had a threat in the fifth but, with two runners on, Miceli made a tremendous catch to rob Mike Kelly of a certain double.

Jim Ferris pitched well for Wollaston and he, Rich Magnarelli and Rich Marino had two hits each.

Last Friday Weymouth topped Morrisette, 8-5, thanks to a three-run homer by Tom Thurberg, his third home run in three games. Frank DePolio paced Morrisette at bat and had a two-run single. The win tied the two teams temporarily for first place with 4-1 records.

In its previous game Morrisette played to a 2-2 tie with Canton and the game will be replayed. John Lawlor pitched five and two-thirds innings and Tim Clifford finished up.

Quincy outslugged Cohasset's first year team, 10-7, with Mike

Devine leading the attack with four hits, including a double. Paul Vespaziani and pitcher Lou Fishman had two hits each, Vespaziani driving in three runs and Fishman two. Fishman pitched all the way, giving up only six hits but walking eight. He also struck out eight.

Among the spectators was Mayor Walter Hannan as Quincy gained its first win.

Quincy followed up with a 6-2 win over Wollaston behind John Earle's three-hit pitching. Quincy wrapped up the win with three runs in the sixth inning.

Vespaziani, Mark DeLuca and Devine had two hits each for Quincy and Jim Ferris had two of Wollaston's hits.

Wollaston just missed against Hingham, holding a 5-4 lead going into the last inning only to have Hingham score three runs for a 7-5 win.

Ferris, Magnarelli and Tom McBride had two hits apiece for Wollaston, which collected 10, one of its best outputs of the year.

City Has 'Proof' MDC Dumping Raw Sewerage Into Quincy Bay

"Nobody should take it lightly that an immediate solution is just a stop-gap for the present. We hope short-range solutions will keep the beaches open but this is no solution to the destruction in Quincy Bay by any stretch of the imagination."

Underlining the urgency of the pollution problem, Rep. Thomas Brownell filed in the House Clerk's office an order for special legislative investigation to obtain short-range solutions to the causes of pollution in South Shore waters with emphasis on Quincy Bay.

Senator Tobin said he has not ruled out possible legal action if the MDC does not realize the seriousness of the pollution problem. He said:

"If the MDC does not realize there is an immediate problem in Quincy Bay, we will have to take immediate remedial legal action."

Both Harrington and Kelly said immediate solutions to the problem must focus on enforcement of Environmental Protection Agency orders already handed down at a January hearing requested by the councillors.

Harrington said to date the city of Boston has not complied with orders to chlorinate properly the sewage emitted into Quincy Bay.

Kelly, calling the Nut Island Plant "obsolete and overtaxed", said immediate solutions to the problem must include the hiring of skilled laborers and maintenance mechanics to operate the Nut Island facility, purchase of added parts to operate the plant at full capacity and the implementation of a proper program of chlorination.

Harrington said 40 per cent of the Nut Island plant is inoperative because of broken parts. He noted, too, the plant budget does not include funds to purchase additional parts.

Critical of chlorination operations at both Nut Island and Moon Island, Dr. Mahoney placed the pollution blame on the MDC. He said:

"They are not chlorinating the sewage properly as far as I'm concerned...I have proof of dumping of raw sewerage into Quincy Bay from both plants. They are the ones that are doing it."

Tobin, calling the situation in Quincy Bay "appalling", said:

"Any reasonable man can determine Quincy Bay is being polluted daily...If the allegations charged are true, I think it is shocking and appalling that they [the MDC] could allow the beaches and Bay area to become so polluted, especially during the recreational season."

Tobin added he had "documentation of contradictory statements" made by the MDC in regard to plant operation - documentation he said he planned to submit at Wednesday's meeting.

As City Council President, Tobin said he had nothing but praise for the work done by Councillors Harrington and Kelly in regard to the pollution problem.

"I have never been more proud of a sub-committee of the City Council. I can't sing their praises loud enough"

During a Monday meeting with Bellotti attended by city, state and MDC officials, three critical time periods relating to the future of Quincy Bay were defined. Officials said they must address themselves to long-range plans through the year 2050.

short-range plans over the next five years and finally, immediate plans for this summer.

Wednesday's meeting will address the immediate solutions. Attending the meeting will be Harrington and Kelly, a representative from Hannon's office, the superintendent of the Nut Island Sewerage Plant, the district superintendent of the Sewage Division, representatives of the Environmental Protection Agency and MDC officials.

Lt. Gov. O'Neill In Quincy Visit

By RON IACOBUCCI

Lt. Governor Thomas O'Neill toured Quincy last week, "to meet the people, observe local agencies of state government close up and hear their problems first hand."

O'Neill's tour included a stop at the local Division of Employment Security on Hancock St. and the local Welfare Office on School St.

The visits gave him an opportunity not only to meet with local officials, but to become "familiar" with their problems in an effort to provide better state government, he said.

O'Neill also met with senior citizens at the Martensen Street complex. A brief reception followed his presentation and question and answer period. The discussion focused on taxes, specifically the $1 meals tax exemption, the bonding issue and rate hikes in insurance costs.

The Lt. Governor's final stop was at the home of former Mayor James McIntyre who served as host for a large reception that included many Quincy officials.
